ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS.

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capehill, Birmingham.

ARE YOU READY

for the ensuing catching season by having all your appliances ready? If not I can supply you with everything you require at lowest prices consistent with quality; clap nets, made from finest thread, 2 in mesh, 3 yds. long, 4/- pair; 4 yd. 5/-, 5 yds. 6/-, 6 yds. 7/-, 7 yds. 8/-, 8 yds. 9/-, 9 yds. 10/-, 10 yds. 11/- per pair, all 5½ ft. deep and 4 ft. fly; all clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted with poles, pegs, lines and everything ready for immediate use; bat folding sparrow nets fitted on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair, ditto fitted on 19 ft. poles, 6/6 pair; loose netting, pure thread, 2 in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd., post free; scores of different sizes of nets always in stock; single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to immediately reset itself soon as bird is caught, 1/6 each; self-acting spring net traps, 24 in. long 1/- each, 48 in. long, 9d. each; carriage 4d. extra, these net traps are totally unlike any other on the market, being much larger, more simple to use, require no pegging down, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook; real Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, will not run in cage, and guaranteed to hold a hawk: ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample box 3d.; all post free; pure hemp pull lines, 65 yds. long, specially spun without "snarl," or "back twist," 1/4 each, carriage paid; bird brace swivels, 6d. doz., post free; stave poles, flirt pegs, store cages, and everything required by catchers always in stock; for full printed list send stamp; all the leading professional catchers use my appliances, and will have no others. Everything sent on approval at my risk, either cash or deposit system, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given; last season I publicly asked every disappointed purchaser to smash up the goods I sent him if they did not prove in every way exactly as advertised, and described, and I would return every penny of his money, but not one article was broken up, nor was I ever asked to return a copper; this offer is still open to one and all. (Imitators please copy.) The reason I am so confident as to value of my goods is because no expense is spared to make them as durable as possible, and my workmen are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced birdcatchers as well, and so know exactly what is required. Thousands of testimonials received and published during past few seasons; don't forget the old name and address; no connection with any other house in the trade.

WALLASEY AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

First Feather Show, held July 4th, in the St. Mary's School, Liscard, Cheshire. There was a good classification, and about 50 birds were staged. These were not so numerous as those of last year, owing to several members having had a poor breeding season, for which they were at a loss to account. However, those which did turn up made a nice display. The Yorkshire Greens were well represented in four classes, and the Borders were very nice. A gem of a young buff won special for best bird in the show. A good list of special prizes was a tempting offer. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and Mr. Mallinson, the indefatigable secretary, had things in apple-pie order.

FROME AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The First Feather Show was held on July 4, at the Auction Mart, Frome. There were 66 young birds staged, all in fine form and condition, and some very promising youngsters could be seen amongst them. The Mart was nicely decorated and the exhibits well attended to by the Committee. Mr. A. A. Pool (Bristol) judged, and gave every satisfaction. The show proved a great success.

Mr. Metcalf staged a nice team, his winning Yellow being a very promising youngster. A new member was elected, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Calam, of Hull (who took the place of Mr. Hope at the last moment through illness) brought the proceedings to a close. Mr. Moore, sen., has very kindly promised two specials for the next month's table show.—MOORE and CROWSTON, Hon. Secs.

CROOK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A table show was held on July 4th at the "Horse Shoe." There were 52 entries in all and some promising youngsters amongst them. Mr. J. Dawson won first in Nest Feather Norwich and two specials for first and second best in show. Messrs. J. Atess and Wm. Rutherford judged.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Annual members' and open show held at the Peckham Public Hall on July 2nd. The entries totalled 113, and brought together some grand birds. Norwich and Yorkshires were a splendid show, and would be hard to beat. A splendid class of the Border Fancy was also a pleasing feature. Mr. R. Brownlie, the pioneer of the Border in the South, was well to the front. The British bird classes also contained many fine specimens, worthy of the very keenest competition. Crests and crest-bred were rather disappointing owing to the bad season experienced by breeders of that variety. The show was favoured by a large attendance of visitors and fanciers, over 200 passing the gate during the evening. The society's splendid new staging was used for the first time, and was much appreciated, being of a nice height, the birds being easy for everyone to see. It reflects great credit on Messrs. Cranfield and Meredith, their time and labour being entirely voluntary. The arrangements for show were perfect, being excellently carried out by the hon. sec., W. Hodson, ably assisted by the hon. assistant-sec., Mr. F. Cole, the chairman, Mr. H. E. Tringham, and a hard-working committee. Dr. J. E. Sidgwick won the cup for the best Canary in the show with a very fine youngster. This was a most popular win, the Doctor receiving a great ovation upon the president handing the cup to him. Mr. L. J. Richardson won special for most points in members' Champion Norwich, Mr. J. Cole in Novice Norwich, Mr. J. A. Simpson in Novice Yorkshire, Mr. R. Carter in British, and for most entries in show. Mr. J. Robson judged.

WATH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show held on July 11th, at the Crosskeys Hotel. Mr. W. Brotherton (Rotherham) judged, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. A. Watson, the Hon. Sec., did his work exceedingly well, considering, too, it was his first attempt. Mr. Walker staged some very good Yorkshire, and won the medal for the best bird in the show with a young Buff. Mr. B. Lockwood also staged some good Norwich, which were close on heels of medal winner; he also staged some grand British birds. Messrs. W. Humphreys, A. Whaby, Kirby, W. Tose, and others also did well.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

The second annual First Feather Show was held on July 4th in St. Peter's Hall, Green-street, in an ideal room for the purpose. Entries came up very well, and between 90 and 100 birds were staged. Norwich, Yorkshires and Borders were well represented, and some grand specimens of these varieties were exhibited. Mr. T. Taylor, of Gateshead, exhibted two beautiful crested birds which were very much admired, as was also Mr. C. Water's young Siskin-Canary Mule, a really grand specimen. The judge had a difficult task in deciding between Dr. O'Neal's winning Buff Border Fancy and Mr. W. Reid's winning Buff Norwich, for the special for best young bird in show; he eventually decided in favour of the Border Fancy. The quality of the exhibits was very good. There was only a moderate attendance. Mr. J. Miller judged, and gave every satisfaction.

FORFAR AND DISTRICT C.B.I.S.

A members' First Feather Show was held in the St. Andrew's Hall, on July 4th. Mr. D. A. Craig (Arbroath), judged, and gave general satisfaction. The entries numbered 64 in 12 classes—not a bad turn-out for a six-months' old society, and considering the bad start made in breeding operations, owing to bad weather. Among the birds were some of excellent quality and type, and a few of them will be heard of again, with a good moult. Some grand foreign birds were on exhibition for the day, being lent by the Hon. Presidents of the society, Messrs. Ernest Grant and William Nicol, and were the envy of the visitors. Special for champion Norwich was won by Mr. J. Cable with a good yellow hen. The novice special was won by Mr. D. Kydd. Special for champion Border was won by Mr. D. Lawson, who also captured all four firsts in Borders. Novice special was won by Mr. C. Kennedy. Special for champion in the Mule and wild bird section was won by Mr. E. Grant, the novice special being won by Mr. W. Doggrel, with a Goldie-Canary Mule.

POTTERIES & CREWE SOCIETIES

The second annual inter-club First Feather Show of the Potteries and District C.B.A., and the Crewe O.S., took place on July 11th, at the headquarters of the Potteries Society. Although not so many birds were shown as last year, the quality was grand, and showed a great improvement. Some splendid Norwich and Yorkshires were shown. Some beautiful Foreigners, too, were shown by Mr. W. Stocker, and proved a great attraction to visitors. British birds were also very good, the Goldfinch shown by Mr. Pitchford being a real beauty, one of the best seen in this district for some time. Mr. F. Bate placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction.

WORCESTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The First Feather Show was held on July 9th in the large Bowling Saloon at the Black Horse Hotel, Lowesmoor. The room was nicely decorated, and the exhibits well attended to by the committee. The entries totalled 65, and their quality was excellent. Mr. J. Summerhill exhibited a beautiful team of Scotch Fancies, and the winner also secured first special prize for best bird in the show. Mr. E. Edwards staged a grand team of Border Fancies, which were greatly admired. The Yorkshires were quite a little show by themselves, the class having an entry of 33. Two sets of winners could have easily been found in this class. Mr. E. C. Hughes officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction. The show proved a great success, and all prize-money was paid out to exhibitors on the same day.

LEEDS C.B.S.

The annual Young Bird Show was held on July 11th in St Luke's Schoolroom, North Street, when 120 birds were staged in 20 classes. The awards were made by Mr. W. B. Cobb. Competition was keen in the Norwich classes, as the Leeds' and President's cups were both competed for here. Mr. Woof scored 24 points for the former, being followed by Messrs. Mennard and Triffitt with 20 points each. Messrs. Mennard and Triffit tied with 30 points each for the President's cup, closely followed by Mr. Woof with 29 points. Norwich turned up well, especially in the Novice classes. Yorkshires were only a poor show; they seem to be falling off a great deal in this district, as good birds seem to be very few. Novice Yorkshires were a moderate show. British birds were rather poor in number, considering we have a fair muster of British fanciers. Linnets were chiefly on view. Mr. Thomson staged a grand Yellowhammer, which would have won in better company.

WATFORD C.B.S.

The fourth annual Young Bird Show was held on July 11th, at the Conservative Hall, Watford, a room very suitable for such a fixture. Entries numbered 160, Canaries being well represented by Norwich and Yorkshires. The Novice sections were exceptionally strong, and some meritorious birds were staged. Hybrids were quite an eye-opener, there being 16 1908 birds, both Linnet and Goldfinch-Canary crosses, 7 of them being light and variegated. The special was taken by a very fine specimen bred by Mr. J. Goodall; it was a four-pointed buff Goldfinch-Canary. British birds were, as usual, strong, and were of exceptional merit. Foreigners again were a most excellent section, and were a source of great attraction. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. W. Quantrell, carried out his duties in a most business-like manner, being well supported by several members of the committee, Messrs. Watts, Swain, Tucker, Sear, etc. The birds in all cases were well staged, reflecting great credit upon the exhibitors. Mr. J. Robson judged.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

Annual Nest Feather Show held in the Co-operative Hall on July 11th. The room is an ideal one, both as regards light and the absence of draughts. The entry totalled 94, and brought together many grand birds. Yorkshires, both Clears and Greens, were a splendid show, and for quality and merit would be hard to beat. The Crests and Crestbreds were a show in themselves. Mr. Abbott (Farnworth) placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

The summer show of Nest Feather birds held at Half Moon Hotel on July 11th. There was a good muster of birds considering the poor season experienced by most of the members. The show was composed of 12 classes, the entries numbering 55. The exhibits were of the best quality. The principal prize-winners were Messrs. Rutherford and Bright in the Yorkshires, Mr. W. Crosling in the Norwich, Mr. P. C. Foster in the British, and Messrs. P. Todd and Son in the A.O.V. Classes. Mr. Brown, of Gateshead, kindly consented to judge, and placed the awards to the satisfaction of all.

KENT COUNTY C.B.A.

A very successful First Feather Show was held at 55, High-street, Dover, on July 8th. An excellent and promising lot of young birds were staged, all of which reflected great credit upon their owners. Upwards of 70 birds were on view, all the property of the Dover members of the Association, the County members evidently not caring to run the risks of a railway journey for youngsters. The management was in the hands of the local committee, Messrs. Campanny and E. C. Rayner being the chairman and vice-chairman respectively. The weather turned out wet in the afternoon, which, no doubt, affected the "gate," but a goodly number of admission tickets had been previously sold by the members.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

The First Feather show was held in the Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook, on July 11th. There was a very good entry, 151 in all. The hall was nice and comfortable, and well lighted. The staging was arranged along each side of the hall, and was covered with green baize, making the place attractive, besides setting the birds off to the best advantage. Mr. Thomas Robson judged the Canary section, and Mr. James Maddison the British and Foreign bird sections. There were a lot of promising young Canaries. The society gave a Challenge Cup for the best bird in the show, and Mr. Robson selected a clear buff Norwich, owned by J. M. Macdonald, while Mr. Maddison selected a red-headed Gouldian Finch for his best exhibit. As the judges failed to agree, it was decided to leave the matter over for the present. For the Crest and Crest-bred sections there were also some good youngsters. The Yorkshire section will have to make progress to reach the Southern standard. Borders are making great strides in this district. In the British bird section there were some real good ones, and the Foreign bird section proved a great attraction, the exhibits reflecting great credit on their respective owners. Mr. A. J. Haggie, president, was present, and took a great interest in the show.

TWITTERINGS.

I received the memorandum forms safely, writes Mr. J. Hayes (Blackburn). I think they are very neat in appearance and reasonable in price.

The Dudley and Dis. C.B.S. have engaged Mr. J. Robson to judge at their grand open show on January 20th, 1909, writes Mr. J. J. Mullett, the sec.

A table show will be held on July 25th, at 6 p.m., when the judge will be Mr. Doolan, writes Mr. C. Irvine, sec. of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.S. Fanciers and friends are invited

The Avonbridge O.S. will hold their fifth annual show, writes Mr. Peter Gentleman, the sec., on October 31st, and the committee have appointed Mr. Golan Hislop (Stirling), to judge cage birds.

Mr. F. Vose has resigned the secretaryship of the St. Helen's O.S., writes Mr. R. Gebbie, the assistant sec., and Mr. A. Goodall, of 73, Corporation Street, St. Helen's, has been appointed in his stead.

We have received a catalogue of goods supplied by Mr. J. Hayes, of 170, Wensley Street, Blackburn. Those wishing for bird-cages and other items of bird-room furniture will do well to write for a price-list.

The meeting of the Hetton-le-Hole C.B.S. called for July 18th, writes Mr. A. J. Notley, the hon. sec., has been postponed until July 25th, owing to the Durham Miners' meeting being held on the former date.

OBITUARY.

Mr. D. HOPE (Hull).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. E. R. Ridley (Hull), that I have to inform you of the sudden death of that well-known Hull fancier, Mr. D. Hope, at the early age of 42. The sad event occurred on July 9th, after a brief illness from pneumonia extending over some nine days. He leaves a widow and eight children. Mr. Hope had held every office possible in the City of Hull C.B.S., being chairman at the time of his death. He was also one of the founders of that society. The members will miss his genial face and his helping hand, and he was always ready to give a fancier a lift both with stock and with advice. He was a well-known exhibitor at all the Northern and Midland shows, the Crests and Norwich Canaries staged by him being very popular winners. The funeral took place on July 13th, and was largely attended. Amongst the many beautiful wreaths were those from the Hull C.B.S., the Grimsby O.S., the Grimsby and Dis. C.B.S., and the York C.B.S.

An inclusive fine of 2s. 10d. each was imposed at the Ware Sessions on July 3rd on three lads for unlawfully having in their possession a Kingfisher, and for killing young birds which they had previously taken from the nest.

The address of our Preston member, writes Mr. S. Hadwin, sec. of the English and Welsh Border Fancy Canary Club, is given in our official report as 69, Lewis Street. This is wrong; it should be 69, Newton Street, Deepdale, Preston.

Customers please note that Ramsden's premises will be closed next week-end, July 24th, Friday to Tuesday. All wanting Ramsden's Pure Peppers for delivery next week are respectfully requested to send their orders at once.—(ADVT.)

Fanciers will kindly note that entries for the Crook Original C.B.S. Open Young Stock Show close on July 21st, writes Mr. A. Bowes, the hon. sec. Fifteen classes for cage birds are provided, and Mr. T. Hill (Thornaby), will judge. The show is to be held under C.B.U. rules.

We are holding a table show of young birds for novices only, at headquarters, White Swan, on July 18th, writes Mr. Chas. Draper, sec. of the Leicester and Leicestershire Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. Mr. E. Noakes will judge. Birds are to be staged by 3 o'clock.

The Gt. Horton O.S. and the Wibsey O.S. have arranged to play a cricket match this Saturday, July 18th, in Wibsey Park, writes Mr. J. Holroyd, the sec. of the former society. We commence at 3 p.m. After the match there will be a pie supper at the "Horse and Groom."

Owing to the death of our chairman, Mr. Hope, writes Mr. F. F. Potter, hon. sec. of the City and Hull C.B.S., our annual half-day Nest Feather show, fixed for July 11th, had to be postponed until this Saturday, July 18th. Messrs. W. Clews (Grimsby), and F. Medley (Hull), are the judges.

Mr. James T. Dewar has, we hear, been again asked to judge at the annual show of the "De Arend" Society at Antwerp, and also to preside and distribute the prizes. This society is now in its 57th year, and is one of the two now remaining in the country of which Mr. Dewar is President d'honour.

The Inverness O.A. have decided to hold their annual First Feather show, writes Mr. E. Todd, jun., at the Mission Hall, Washington Court, on July 22nd, at 6 p.m. Two handsome medals, presented by the president, are up for competition. The judge will be Mr. J. Young. Admission to the show is free.

The judges for our annual show, to be held on December 10th, 11th, and 12th, writes Mr. R. Gebbie, the assistant sec. of the St. Helen's O.S., are Messrs. J. F. Hills and H. W. Battye.

Mr. J. North, writes Mr. W. J. Jones, hon. sec. of the Isle of Thanet F.S., will judge the cage bird section at our annual show on Nov. 4th and 5th.

The Crook (original) C.B.S. Young Stock Show will be held on July 25th, in the Mechanics' Hall, Crook, at 1.30. A review of the schedule appears in another column.

In connection with the proposed Federation of London societies, writes Mr. P. Adamthwaite, the sec. pro. tem. I have circularized 30 London societies. It has been a difficult matter to obtain the necessary particulars of these societies in order that I might write to them on the subject; and even now I am not certain whether I have written to all. So that if any have been inadvertently overlooked and they will kindly communicate with me at 142, Fernhead Road, Maida Hill, W., I shall be pleased to send them particulars of the proposed Federation.

"British Birds," the illustrated monthly magazine devoted to birds on the British list (published by Witherby and Co., price 1s.), has, judging by the July number, achieved a success, and come to stay. It is invaluable to all interested in the wild life of our British birds, and who desire to be informed of the latest facts acquired in the field concerning them. The present number contains articles on the identification of Ducks' eggs, on the more important additions to our knowledge of British birds, and on early British ornithologists. It is adequately illustrated, and the pages devoted to "Notes" are particularly interesting.

Has it ever struck you that when traders offer you Pepper "just as good" as Ramsden's they admit that Ramsden's is the standard of perfection and comparison, and invite you to spend your money to find out if the "just as good" does or does not come up to the standard? Surely it is better to obtain the real thing—the standard—than to risk the "just as good." Be on the safe side and insist on having Ramsden's Peppers—the pure and genuine. Mr. Bertie, the Nottingham judge, writes: "Pepper arrived, and I must say it is the best I have ever seen. Remittance enclosed for another consignment, which let me have soon as possible." Mr. John Barclay, of Belfast, writes: "I can say I have had better colour in my birds since I used Ramsden's Pepper. Last year I won special for best colour-fed bird at Sligo, and it is remarked by fanciers here the high colour I get in my stock." An issue of CAGE BIRDS could be filled with unsolicited testimonials to the efficacy of Ramsden's Pure Peppers, which are sold with a full guarantee under the Food and Drugs Act. Only two tons left. When gone no more can be had this season. Prices: 2s. lb., 5 lbs. 7s. 6d., 22 lbs. 30s. Finest Hot Natal 3s. lb. All post or rail paid. Order now: delays are dangerous. J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London. (ADVT.)

The Biter Bit.

On Monday last Mr. W. Jones, of West Ham, called at this office with a cage containing the body of a favourite Chaffinch of his which had had its head dismembered from it by a mouse and deposited in the drinker. There could no question as to mice having been the cause, not only of this bird's death but of those of several others which have annoyed Mr. Jones, for the mouse in this instance had fallen a victim to its own manœuvres and was stretched full length across the drinker, its tail at the thick end twisted round one of the wires of the cage, and at the tapered end securely wedged in between the cage-front and the drinker. Apparently, having killed the bird, the mouse had made an attempt to get it out of the cage through the drinker-hole, and to enable it to lift the bird, it had purposely twisted its tail round the wire. That of itself, however, would never have fixed the mouse; the mischief lay in the fact that, stepping on to the drinker, it had so shifted it as to wedge the vital end of its tail. And the more the mouse struggled the more securely was its tail wedged. Had it had the sense to go backwards instead of forwards, it would have released its tail and would have got safely away, even at the expense of losing its prize. The mouse when discovered was, we understand, permitted to struggle for several hours before being killed.

Green Canary Association.

A special meeting will be held on July 23rd at 3 o'clock, in the Oldham Hall, Renshaw Street, Liverpool. The allotting of patronage for the season will be the principal business. Before this is considered, however, the following notices of motion will be dealt with:—By Mr. Habs. "That we do not give patronage to shows giving less than 4 money prizes." By Mr. Fisher, "That we give patronage to Dulwich and Peckham and a few other Southern shows." By Mr. Isaac. "That only those guaranteeing to show at at least 3 shows shall vote on the question of patronage." Note: In the event of Mr. Isaac's motion being carried, those members who reside at a distance and who intend showing at not less than 3 shows may send their votes to me in writing before July 23rd, and such votes will be counted for the various shows. By Mr. Bretherton, "That instead of Norwich Green show cages being flat in colour, they shall have a little brightness in them." The following shows have applied for patronage and are grouped in weeks. Note: only one show in each week can receive patronage. Shows: Oct. 11th and 12th, Great Harwood; Oct. 23rd and 24th, Accrington, Derby, Newcastle, and Rochdale; Oct. 30th and 31st, Manchester; Nov. 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th, Morecambe, Dulwich and Peckham, and Liverpool; Nov. 13th and 14th, Preston and Warrington; Nov. 20th and 21st, Wigan, Whitehaven, and Bradford West; Nov. 28th, Sale; Dec. 4th and 5th, Harrogate and Altrincham; Dec. 10th, 11th, and 12th Welsh National, Pendleton, Gateshead, and St. Helens; Dec. 18th and 19th, Widnes; Dec. 31st and Jan. 1st, 1909, Scottish National; and Feb. 5th, 6th, 8th, and 9th, 1909, Palace. —S. HADWIN, sec.

THE SENSATIONAL DISQUALIFICATION AT A LONDON SHOW.

Exhibitors Disqualified and Expelled.

Last week we published a report of a sensational happening at the City and Suburban Young Bird Show, on July 4th, when a firm of noted London exhibitors of Norwich Plainheads had two birds disqualified for alleged staining. To consider this matter a meeting of the Council of the society was called for Friday last, July 10th, at which Messrs Cooper Bros., the exhibitors implicated, were requested to attend, to offer an explanation of the incident. The judge, Mr. J. Robson, was also present; likewise the two birds, which had been in the custody of the secretary, Mr. V. Wynn, since the day of the show.

Mr. P. G. Cooper came on behalf of the firm, and, as was foreshadowed by us last week, did not deny that the birds were stained. He pleaded strongly for leniency to be extended to his brother, Mr. B. J. Cooper (the other partner in the firm), averring that he knew nothing whatever of the staining, for which he himself (Mr. P. G. Cooper) accepted full responsibility. He said that his brother had left for the show-room with a case containing the four exhibits for the Clear class; that he himself then went into their bird-room to get the four entered for the Marked class, but could not find satisfactory birds to compete therein; that he then yielded to sudden temptation, and "marked" two birds with a pen dipped in ink. He regretted doing so very strongly. It was not, he said, done with any intention to defraud, but to keep a promise made to the secretary to enter a certain number of birds for competition. Mr. Cooper was asked by a member of the Council why, in that case, the birds were not entered in the Clear class, in which they were entitled to compete?

In the end the Council decided that the judge's decision must, of course, be accepted, and they could draw no distinction in guilt as between the two partners; therefore, in accordance with the rules of the association, Messrs. P. G. and B. J. Cooper must be expelled from the society, and all prizes won by their birds at the show in question be forfeited. The decision of the Council was confirmed at a meeting of the members of the City and Suburban A.C.B., held on Monday evening, July 13th. As the association is affiliated with the Cage Bird Union, the case, we understand, will also go before that body.

A peculiar feature of this unfortunate business was the statement made by Mr. P. G. Cooper before the Council that it "was known in the showroom the night before the show that we were exhibiting two birds which had been artificially marked." This statement was denied. We heard that the following incident actually occurred, however.

When Mr. Cooper brought in the birds, and they were being unpacked, an official of the society remarked to him: "Have you been newly painting your cages? There seems to be some dirt or something on this bird"—the observation having reference to the mark on the side of the head (cheek) seen on one of the birds afterwards disqualified. Mr. Cooper at once took this bird out of its cage, showed it to the afore-mentioned official, and, as he ruffled the plumage near the mark with a lead pencil, said something to the effect that he (the official) could now see that it was a mark on the bird's plumage. The official, of course, thought that he had been mistaken in assuming it at first glance to be "dirt" of some kind (the hall being but dimly lighted at the time).

And so the matter naturally ended. Next morning, however, after the judge's fateful decision had been made known, the incident recurred to him vividly enough.

SINGING CONTESTS.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Linnet contest held at the Prince Albert Inn on July 12th, when there were 10 Linnets to compete. Result: 1 Sellers, 2 Stead, 3 Bryan. Judges, Messrs. Towers and Jackson.—W. BEAN, Secretary.

BLACKBURN.

The Blackburn Linnet S.A. held an All England Contest on July 11th, at Vauxhall Inn, when Mr. F. Howson gave four good prizes: 1 and 4, Pickering, 2 Topping, and 3 Marsden.

WIGAN.

The Wigan L.C. held their first club match on July 11th, when 28 birds rang for six valuable prizes, three for quality and three for time. Judges for quality, Messrs. Jump and Jones. Thackeray, Moores, Wilkin and Strotham. Quality winners: 1 Jones, 2 Willingan, 3 Howard. Time: 1 Neil, 2 Brimelow, 3 Bradshaw. A. PARKIN, Secretary.

CLUB REPORTS.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

A meeting took place at headquarters, the Church Institut, 60, Paddington-street, July 13th, Mr. A. C. Burn in the chair. Mr. R. Stevens was elected a member, and the following were nominated:—Messrs. R. B. King, Willesden Junction; H. W. Walker, Battersea; and R. Horsey, East Sheen. Letters were read from Mrs. Clark, Messrs. Horsey, Prior, Matthes, Spratts, Francis, and the secretary of the C.B.U. A vote of sympathy was instructed to be conveyed to Mr. Prior on his illness. The payment of prize money and presentation of special prizes won at the recent young bird show took place. A vote of thanks to Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Page, Messrs. A. W. Curtis, A. Head, J. Hawes, W. Sanders, W. Shepherd, and G. Morrison for assistance at the show was passed. By a unanimous vote it was decided that the essay competition upon "Birds I Have Kept," to take place on September 14th, shall be decided by a vote of the members present, the prizes for same being a gold, silver, and bronze medal respectively. The chairman reported the result of the Council meeting, called in consequence of the judge (Mr. J. Robson) disqualifying two Canarics at the recent young bird show for stanling, stating that there was a full meeting, and that Mr. P. G. Cooper was present. The meeting was of 2½ hours' duration, and they heard statements from Mr. Cooper (who admitted the staining) and Mr. J. Robson. The chairman then read Show Rule 1 and General Rule 17. He afterwards went on to say that Mr. P. G. Cooper made a strong appeal on behalf of his brother, but the Council could see no reason to separate the two, and had no option but to expel. The vote was unanimous, and the decision of the Council is final. The revised rules for the proposed Federation of Societies for London and District were then considered, and with the exception of the addition of "All pair and young bird shows excluded." in the definition of a novice, was confirmed as read. It was carried that we join the Federation. A vote of thanks to the delegates (Messrs. R. L. Crisp and A. C. Burn, coupled with the name of Mr. P. Adamthwaite, who is also a member of the Association) was heartily accorded. Messrs. A. C. Burn and P. Adamthwaite replied, and spoke of the scheme, how it originated, and to what dimensions it had grown.—VICTOR WYNN, Hon. Sec.

WESTWICK WARD (NORWICH).

Under the presidency of Mr. J. Baldwin (says The Eastern News), the members of the Westwick Ward B.B.S. met at their club house, the Prince of Wales' Feathers, St. Benedict's, to hear an address from Mr. Frank Schulen, who at a previous meeting promised to give them his experience of colour-feeding, so successfully carried out by him for the past 20 years. He stated that with every pound of cool food he used with it a quarter pound of hot Natal, mixing a quarter pound of best brown sugar. This, with bread crumbs and egg he always made up over night, rubbing the preparation well together. He believed in starting feeding young birds at the age of eight weeks, by carefully giving them the feed, as by this method they ate it much better; then, gradually increase the colouring. Old birds could be commenced with much stronger food. Mr. Schulen said that he believed in small portions of mixed seeds being given the birds, especially linseed, as it promoted a glossiness in the feather. Maw seed might also be given with the colour-food occasionally, but not scalded rape seed, as it had a tendency towards making the preparation sour. He did not believe in removing the Canary seed from the birds as, if the preparation was made up well with egg, there was not occasion for it. The frequent use of a little of Parrish's Chemical Food in the water was another good thing, and also a small portion of sulphate of iron in the water at the latter period of taking the colour feed. He strongly advocated Norwich Canaries, which were in a great measure bred from specimens with a good percentage of green blood in them, and he had no hesitation in urging this principle, as a better result was always obtained by so doing, the birds coming out in much brighter colour. He quoted an instance that happened years ago, in which a specimen came out well that had been so bred. Mr. J. Marrison fed a clear yellow cock, with others, on sweet broken biscuits, mixed with Ramsden's Feed, which he always preferred. The bird in question was sent to the Crystal Palace show of that year and secured Ramsden's gold centre piece medal for the best fed bird in the show. It had been bred in the green, and hence the result.

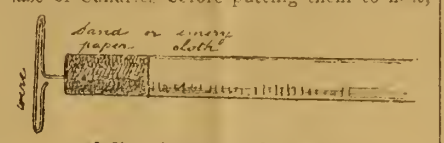
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 223.

A PERCH THAT SERVES A THREE-FOLD PURPOSE.

Sent by J. H. Denton, 40, Granville Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent.

Here is a sketch of a perch which I find to be of great use. I have used one now for two years for my Goldfinch. The bird had a crossed beak, and I have found that the perch saves cutting and handling in such cases; the beak gets worn back to its proper shape in a few day. The perch is also useful in the case of Canaries before putting them to nest, as it saves a lot of eggs, when the hen is "turning" them. Lastly, the perch makes a good red-mite trap. To make the perch, get a piece of wire 5 inches long and bend it to the required shape. Then get a piece of wood for perch, and a piece of fine sand-paper or emery-cloth about 2 inches long by 1½ inches wide, and fasten it on the perch close to the wire in front of the cage. The bird will then soon wear his beak back to its proper shape.—J. H. DENTON.

No. 224.

A NOVEL NEST-BOX.

Sent by F. G. Richards, 27, Camden Road, Tunbridge Wells, Kent.

Here is an idea for a nest box that I have found very useful, it being much warmer than the earthenware pans; the eggs and the youngsters are not so liable to get chilled. It is better than a square box in that it conforms to the shape of the nest. And there is no harbour for red-mite at the back, when it is hung up. If set out as under, there should be no difficulty in the making of it. First of all get a piece of board 14 inches long, 2¼ inches wide and ¼-inch thick. Then measure along the edge from left to right, 3½ inches, 2 inches, 4 inches, and lastly 2½ inches. On the opposite edge, and without moving the board, measure ¾-inch, 2 inches, 3½ inches, 2½ inches, and lastly 4 inches. Now draw lines between the points measured, and saw off, and you will have four triangular-shaped pieces of wood, which will form the sides of the nest-box. The 4-inch pieces must be nailed to the 3½-inch pieces. The latter will want bevelling slightly on edge, so as to fit nicely. The bottom is nailed on from underneath. Holes for ventilation can be bored or burnt with a red-hot poker. The wire for hanging is passed through the side, letting it come through about ½-inch from the edge, and is carried down and fixed round the straight pieces, which are driven into sides and carried to the back far enough to make the nest hang level. If the points are sharpened, a slight pressure when hanging up will fix the nest as firmly as possible. The angle pieces A can be left out if thought fit.—F. G. RICHARDS.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE. Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A Peculiar Accident.

Ranji.—The only way I can think of to account for such a strange accident is that the nests must be a good deal too shallow, and the claws also probably much overgrown, so that they take a somewhat semi-circular shape. I can quite understand the hens sitting on the young until they die when the claws get into this position, as it would be a difficult matter for the birds to move about or even stand. I cannot tell how you can prevent it save by seeing that they have a fairly deep cup-shaped nest—not a saucer-shaped one—and trimming the claws to a reasonable length if overgrown. If they are not overgrown, I should imagine they are somewhat deformed in shape, and if the hen is a valuable one for breeding I should, as soon as she has done nesting this year, cut the horny part of the claw off fairly close to the toe with a sharp pair of nail scissors. It would cause rather free bleeding, so have a white hot knitting needle ready to touch the tip of the claw and sear it to stop the bleeding. Do one claw first, and the other in a month or so afterwards.

Non-feeding Borders.

No Name.—You have evidently got hold of a pair of obstinate non-feeders, and I fear nothing you can do will have much effect in bringing them to a sense of parental duty. If the birds are well bred ones, your best plan is to look around for a pair of reliable common feeders due to hatch about the same time, so that you can transfer the young to them if the hen that is next due to hatch again fails to perform her duty. To give her a good chance, treat as follows: Feed the same as you did before, but give only a small quantity of egg-food at a time, and mix the egg with equal parts of crushed sponge cake and bread crumbs instead of biscuit. Two days before the hen is due to hatch give twelve drops of glycerine and two of tincture of quinine in the water for one day only; the next two days, which will be the day before and the same day the young are hatched, give as much bi-carbonate of soda as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water. The day before the young are hatched give a spray or two of chickweed, and continue giving each day after a little green-food, either groundsel or chickweed. When the young are four or five days old give a little cracked hemp.

The Trials of a Novice.

A. M. Johnson.—I agree that you have had rather an exciting time for a novice, and it is gratifying to learn that by following advice given in our columns you have attained a certain amount of success through it all. It is not a very uncommon experience for a cock to feed and bring up a brood by himself when they get old enough to begin to leave the nest. But when the hen quite deserted the young at this age, you should have left the old birds together and placed the young in a small nursery cage, and hung it on the front of the breeding cage in such a position that the cock could comfortably feed the young between the wires. This he would have done, and at the same time the hen would have gone on nesting again. The nervous cock that makes such frantic rushes into the nest whilst the hen is sitting, and killed two young ones by such misbehaviour should be removed to a cage by himself after the hen has commenced to sit, to let the hen hatch and bring up the young by herself. Yes, you may quite safely give a bath every day at this time of year, providing you do not use water considerably colder than the normal atmospheric temperature. The young may be allowed to bathe as early as they like. Some birds will begin bathing a little in a day or two after they take to the perches entirely. Very sorry, but I do not know how to make a hen return to her duties after deserting the young. Hundreds of fanciers would be grateful for such knowledge. But it is all too often a case of "if she won't, she won't; and there's an end on't."

Question of Colour.

T.S., Bolton.—Am not sure whether I have deciphered initial correctly. I should prefer mixing only sufficient colour food to last through one season, as there is otherwise a risk of its being spoilt by the oil becoming rancid. But if there is any surplus unavoidably left over the best way to keep it is to place it in a wide-mouthed glass jar, or bottle, of such size that when firmly shaken down the feed will almost or quite fill the vessel, and cork it tightly, and seal it, so as to keep it always air-tight. Keep the vessel in a cool dry place, such as a dry cellar. The great majority of fanciers consider the addition of oil essential for obtaining the best results. It is believed to make the colour more easily extracted and distributed through the system. Personally, like the Scot, "I hae ma doots," and have certainly fed birds with excellent results without the addition of a drop of oil. But if you desire to exhibit during the coming season I would not advise you to risk experiments. Follow the ortho dox plan which you best understand. This last remark also applies to the use of hot pepper. To avoid risk use two ounces to a pound of cold.

Yorkshire Going Blind.

E.H.—You have, I fear, been correctly informed that nothing can be done for the bird. The chances of cure or relief are so remote in these cases, as to be almost nil. Try following ointment, and if this does no good, you may cease worrying the bird with any other treatment. Ask your chemist to make you an ointment composed of half an ounce of spermaceti ointment and six grains of red oxide of mercury. Twice a week gently catch the bird and place a tiny morsel, no larger than the head of a pin, or each eye, one after the other, and hold the bird with the eye upwards whilst the ointment melts and works its way under the eyelid, which you may gently help it to do. Keep the bird in the same cage always, and give it food, water, and a bath, in the same position consistently, and even if it becomes quite blind it will, after a time, find these easily enough, and go about the cage almost as well as when its sight was perfect. See that its claws do not become overgrown, or the cage infested with insects. Give a little quassia in its bath twice a week regularly, as blind birds are very apt to be attacked by insects. By-the-way, the ointment is poisonous, so do not get it about the bird's beak.

Hatching and Laying.

F. Yardley.—1. You certainly did quite right to remove the eggs as laid with the object of getting all the young hatched off the same day. But you appear to have replaced the first three eggs on the fourth day after the fourth egg had been laid. This was wrong. You should have replaced the three eggs in the nest on the evening of the third day. The reason one of the eggs hatched a day later than the other three was probably that it was the first laid, and was beginning to get a little stale when set, so that the germ was weaker, and developed more slowly in consequence. 2. Many cases occur where a hen lays an abnormally small egg at the end of a clutch. The fact that one of her normal eggs was found broken on the cage floor the day previously would have no bearing whatever upon the matter. It was a mere coincidence. The broken egg had probably been dragged out of the nest accidentally. The small egg was also probably broken accidentally and crushed in the bottom of the nest: hence the disappearance. If the birds had eaten this they would probably have treated all alike.

Weak on Legs.

A. Parker.—In the absence of all knowledge as to how the bird has been fed I cannot give any definite reason for its being so weak on legs. It may be due simply to an overfed condition. Try following treatment, and if the bird is not better in a fortnight or so write again, and say how you feed and treat it. Every second day for a week give six drops of syrup of buckthorn in its drinking water, and during the second week five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and on the intervening days four drops of tincture of steel. Feed plainly; give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake twice a week, and a few sprays of chickweed or tender groundsel tops daily.

Tailing Yorkshire.

"Dickie Sam in Wales."—It is not an uncommon practice to pull the tail feathers of young Yorkshire out to get a little increase of length. A similar practice applicable to flight as well as tail is not unknown for the purpose of getting the new feathers affected by the colour food. The process is known as tailing and flighting, and as I consider it is objectionable from a humane point of view, and of little practical utility, I would not advise you to pursue it. However, if you are determined to do it, the best time from every point of view is about a week or thereabouts after the bird has started to cast its feathers freely. I would say pull two feathers at a time at intervals of three days, each time taking the outermost feather on each side of the tail. Am afraid your fancier friend just a trifle overshot the mark in saying you would get a quarter of an inch extra length. You may rely upon something extra, but do not expect quite so much as that.

Young Birds Dying.

H.W.B.—This is quite an old friend at this season. If you had looked through a few back numbers you would have found quite a number of replies which would have fit your case. I think most of your trouble is in giving too much green food of an unsuitable kind, and an injudicious selection of seed. Adopt following method after the young leave their parents, and you will soon find matters improve. Give an unlimited supply of plain Canary seed uncrushed. In a separate vessel give a little dry rape not crushed, a little crushed Canary, and an equal bulk of cracked hemp. Only lightly crack the hemp; do not crush it. Give this fresh daily and only in small quantities. In another vessel give a little fresh egg food daily. As soon as you notice the birds are eating a little crushed seed, begin to decrease the quantity of egg food, and when you see they are cracking the whole Canary seed, begin to drop off the egg, reducing the quantity to about half a teaspoonful per bird, and then withholding it altogether for a day, ultimately giving a teaspoonful per bird twice a week, or an equal amount of bread and milk as an alternative. Also cease cracking the seed as soon as the birds are cracking Canary quite freely themselves, and give instead a tea-spoonful of dry rape twice a week, and a similar quantity of hemp as often. For green food give a small spray of chickweed, or top of groundsel, or a few plantain stalks daily after the birds have been on seed a short time. But do not give any green food for at least a week after the young are taken from their parents.

Birds Moulting.

A.A., East Ham.—I have not the least doubt your bird's condition is due to one of two common causes—either exposure to draught or chill, or great variations in temperature. You will not do any good at all with them until the cause, whatever it may be, is removed. I would advise you to begin treatment by removing them to another room where the temperature is equable, and where they will be quite free from draught. Then feed them on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, as a staple. Give in addition a pinch of maw seed every second day, and on alternate days first a small piece of bread dipped in milk, squeezed nearly dry, and three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped about it, and the next time a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with a pinch of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a little green food daily. Add to the drinking water for the first week a few shreds of saffron every second day, and on alternate days five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid, and two of tincture of gentian. After the first week drop this, and give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus every second day in the water until the wheezing is removed. Shake this mixture well together. Red mite are certainly very harmful to such birds as yours. Repeat the scalding of the cage several times at intervals of a week, and add a teaspoonful of strong essence of quassia to each pint of water. Also give the birds a tepid bath twice a week, in which a few drops of the essence has been added. Do not attempt to breed any more this year.

Not Fertilising Eggs.

W.H.—You have been rather overfeeding your birds, which may partly account for the cocks not being more vigorous, but the chief cause, I am inclined to think, is that the birds were late hatched ones, and are consequently not so fully matured as they might be. A better staple diet than the one you have been giving would be three parts Canary to one part summer rape, with half a teaspoonful of hemp every second day when preparing for breeding only, discontinuing both the hemp and egg food when the hens were sitting. As you have already had three or four nests off each pair I should strongly advise you not to allow them to nest again, as by so doing you will spoil all your chances of success for next year, whereas by separating them now and feeding them judiciously through the winter they may do well next season, as the cocks will then be fully matured.

Is it an Early Moult?

G. Oxley.—If the bird commenced by dropping its long flight and tail feathers it is undoubtedly its natural moult which has begun early. But in any case you should not try to stop it, as if it moults completely now it will not moult again this year. As it is already dropping feathers it is useless to begin colour feeding now even if you wished to do so. The only treatment is to guard against all draughts and chills, and in addition to its usual seed diet give a pinch of maw seed every second day, a teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, and a few grains of linseed twice a week. When the bird has nearly done casting feathers begin to give a dose of fifteen drops of chemical food in the water three times a week, and continue giving it until the bird is in fine plumage. Give a little chickweed daily, and a bath as often as it will make use of it.

Bald Crest.

Anxious Novice.—You need have no fear whatever about your Crested cock Canary becoming bare at the back of its head. Many Crested birds, and especially cocks, are apt to become a little bald towards the end of the breeding season, and in most cases the bird's mate is directly responsible for the loss of feathers. This is assuming the bird's headgear was all right in the spring. The moulting season, which will be here very soon, will remedy these little blemishes, and you will find the crest reproduced in its former condition. Sometimes, however, Crests have naturally a bald patch just at the back of the crest, and if yours is one of these birds, and you did not happen to notice the baldness until a few more feathers had been lost to force it upon the attention the amount of natural baldness will still remain after the moult is over. No treatment will remedy this defect. It is a natural defect which breeders would be only too pleased to see the last of.

Whose Charms Grow Less.

"Roller."—Your bird which has been such a lovely singer, but has now begun to ease off, and take forty winks a time or two in the day, is doubtless just going to cease charming you altogether for a time. It is clearly dropping into the moult, and will probably lose its voice altogether for a few weeks. Keep its cage in a nice regular temperature, and where it will be quite free from draughts. In addition to staple diet of Canary and rape give a pinch of maw seed every second day, and twice a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three or four drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. Give a spray of chickweed daily, and if available a few of the blooms of nasturtiums or marigolds may be given regularly, and will help the bird to moult out a nice colour. A few shreds of hay saffron may be steeped in its drinking water three times a week for the first three or four weeks of the moult. Then discontinue this, and give instead fifteen drops of chemical food every second day, and on alternate days a few grains of linseed. Give a bath regularly, but see the bird does not get chilled after it. If you carefully follow this treatment, and avoid any chill, the bird should begin to sing again about October.

Hen Plucking Feathers.

T. B. Kaye.—By all means remove the hen from the young, even though, as you say, she does not pluck very badly, but only a feather now and again. Even these few stray feathers will soon amount to a goodly number if it is allowed to go on unnoticed and as it is evident from what you say that the hen is not very keen on nesting again, it would be a big mistake to leave her with the cock and cage off the young. You will do much better to take away the hen, and turn her into a good large flight until she is going in moult, and leave the cock and the young together a week or two longer, as the extra feeding the young will get from the cock will give them a good start in life.

A Slipped Toe.

A New Reader.—You did quite right to put on the rubber ring as described in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL when you saw the hind toe was permanently projecting forward. But you must also attend to the perches and see they are of a proper size and shape, if you are to make a real cure of these cases. When the ring was removed after being on for a few days you should have put rather thin, and almost round, perches in the cage, which would have gone further towards curing the defect than the rings. In fact, I have found numbers of such cases quite cured by this kind of perch being given without any other aid whatever, and believe that mild cases are peculiarly amenable to this treatment. For an ordinary sized Canary the perch should be just a trifle thicker than an ordinary lead pencil. On such a perch the bird cannot feel comfortably easy until the hind claw is in its proper position behind the perch, and will keep shuffling until it gets its claw over the back of the perch prior to settling down for a rest. In this way it is practically compelled to make its own efforts to place the claw backward, and the muscles, or tendons, whichever it should be, are thus exercised and strengthened to act as Nature intended.

Questions About Colour.

W.H.C.—1. Yes, Yorkshires are certainly colour-fed, and you would stand little chance of scoring against fed birds of equal merit with non-fed specimens. 2. A good feed is made of one pound tasteless red pepper, two ounces natal, and four ounces soft sugar, well mixed and blended together. Two tablespoonfuls of the finest salad oil may be mixed with it, if desired, and the whole again thoroughly blended together. Store ready for use in glass or glazed earthenware jars, and keep airtight in a cool dry place. 3. The way to use it is to mix with the ordinary supply of egg-food. To begin with, add two teaspoonfuls of colour to a small teacupful of egg-food, and gradually increase the proportion of colour to four, or if you want the birds very hot, to six teaspoonfuls to a cupful of egg-food after the birds begin to cast feathers; continue giving it this strength until you see the head and neck of the birds moulting, when you must begin to decrease the strength of the food and finish off with the original strength you began with. If you do not require a teacupful of food for use each day, make up what you require in the above proportions, and always be careful to thoroughly blend the colour with the egg-food before giving it, so that it may be evenly distributed and every bird get an equal share. When the birds have finished dropping feathers give a crystal of sulphate of iron about the size of a split pea two or three times a week in the drinking water until the birds are in fine plumage again.

Birds Restless at Night.

"Nemo."—If you took the trouble to examine one of the cages with a light an hour or two after the birds had settled down to roost you would soon discover the cause of the restlessness. The cages are badly infested with red-mites, and you will do well to draft the birds into perfectly clean cages for the moulting season as soon as you can break up all the breeding pairs. Meantime, overhaul the cages as thoroughly as circumstances will permit, and paint all likely harbours about them two or three times a week with fir tree oil, essence of quassia, or any good insecticide you may favour, and give a bath with a few drops of quassia essence in it twice a week.

Brevities.

An Injured Toe ("Var. Crestbred").—Add a teaspoonful of the solution of wych hazel to a saucerful of warm water, and hold foot in this bath for a few minutes twice a day. After carefully drying the foot, rub on gently a slight smearing of boracic ointment, but do not leave on enough to pick up sand and dirt when the bird goes back to cage. If this does not remove the trouble in a week or so, paint the toe once or twice with tincture of arnica.

Hoarseness in Roller (E., Leeds).—Give about half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops cod liver oil emulsion well mixed every second day for a fortnight; at the same time, give a few sprays of chickweed each day. On alternate days add to each ounce of its drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, twelve drops of glycerine, and six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine. Shake all together. A small piece of fat boiled bacon or pork may be placed between wires occasionally after treatment is finished.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Thrush Ailing.

A. Allen.—I should think myself that your Thrush is suffering badly from "indigestion"; barley meal and bread crumbs are bad enough to give it to him. At any rate, they are not calculated to keep him in health and song. You had better by far give him game meal (without grit) moistened with hot water, and mixed into the other food you name. First of all thoroughly cleanse his mouth, nostrils, and throat with warm water, in each breakfasteupful of which a teaspoonful of Condy's fluid has been stirred. Small feathers, or a tiny camel-hair pencil-brush, will be useful to do this with. It should be repeated daily (even twice daily at first), if necessary. No harm will be caused by the bird swallowing any of the diluted Condy's. In every two tablespoonfuls of drinking water dissolve as much best Epsom salts as will just cover a shilling. Give this for two days; then another dose after a day's interval on plain water. But, above all, put the bird's food right, and add to it daily a teaspoonful of grated raw carrot, or finely-minced lettuce or watercress. You ought to be able to get mealworms, gentles, and blackbeetles, easily enough, if you try.

A Mixture.

Quaker. If you had perused the rules you won'd have seen that queries for different specialists must not be mixed together. Your first question, relating to foreign birds, you must put on a separate piece of paper, and mark it for our Mr. Page. 2: If you mean that your aviary is 3 ft. long by 3 ft. high by 18 inches front to back (you say 3 ft. square by 1 foot 6 in. deep), it would hold about half-a-dozen small seed eaters. But aviaries such as these are more suited for a collection of small foreign birds than for British birds. 3: It is quite natural for your Cuckoo to have two toes in front and two behind. The foot is not deformed, as you seem to think, this being the normal disposition of the toes with this species.

An Indoor Aviary.

Veritas.—Your aviary is not quite wide enough from front to back for my liking. It is 6 ft. long by 4 ft. wide, it would have been greatly improved. Your place will hold 20 to 24 small birds comfortably enough, but it is not much use putting up twelve pairs expecting they are going to breed successfully. Four or five pairs (including Canaries) would be ample if you have an eye to results from their breeding. It will be a mistake to have paper of any kind (varnished or otherwise) on the walls. Put a good coat or two of Hall's Sanitary Washable Distemper on the inside, having previously stripped off the paper now on. Any good make of distemper (obtainable from oil and colourmen) is much superior to whitewash, and quite as easy (even easier) to prepare and apply. There is no objection to a thick layer of sawdust (coarse-cut) on the floor, providing food and water vessels are raised away from it, and an adequate supply of good gritty sand maintained. If the sand from the seashore is gathered with discretion, it is admirable for birds, but much of it is too fine (dusty), and requires some sharp grit adding. Some British Finches (Chaffinch, Bramble-finch, Yellowhammer, etc.) delight in a few mealworms now and again, and same are very good for them. Give your seeds separately, and save money. To give a mixture in a large aviary is very wasteful and expensive. At least, let the Canary, teazle, rape, hemp, and sunflower be supplied in separate dishes.

"Meating Off" Nightingales.

T. H. Skelton.—The best way to "meat off" Nightingales, and other Softbills of about the same size, is by means of mealworms—the latter are widely obtainable, unlike certain other live-foods. I presume you know that usually it is necessary to put the bird's cage in a light spot, and cover the cage front with muslin, or white gauze, or similar material, while he gets used to captivity. Also see that the food and water are easily accessible—right under his nose, as it were. Personally, I commence with a supply of not over large mealworms in the food dish; then give a few biggish ones cut in two; then lightly sprinkle these cut mealworms with a good insectivorous food, prepared with a generous admixture of finely-minced hard-boiled (fresh) egg; then I press the cut mealworms well up amongst the food. These are the stages: at the end the bird has become used to taking up some of the insectivorous food (especially particles of the egg), and I then gradually wean him off the mealworms, giving them occasionally only. I hope this will make the process clear to you. It is troublesome while it lasts (if one counts trouble in such matters), and takes a week to fourteen days, according to the disposition of the bird, before it can be termed "well on food." And they need hundreds of mealworms in that time. A few gentles are good, if obtainable and well scoured, while live ants' eggs are splendid. I give a little of both in addition to the mealworms. The cover over the cage can be gradually raised, as the bird becomes used to its new surroundings.

A Muling Matter.

Lintie.—I should think your nest pan is not of the right pattern, if your hen Canary cannot sit on four eggs and cover them properly. Possibly it is too flat at the bottom, so preventing the hen from properly gathering and keeping the eggs underneath her. The best description I can give you is to say that the nest pan should allow of the nest, when built, being shaped at the bottom like the thick end of a hen's egg, the curving rise of the sides keeping the eggs in the centre. If the eggs are not covered, they can't, of course, hatch. From the account you give of the behaviour of the birds I am afraid I cannot hold out any hopes of the eggs being fertile. A cock Linnet is a very fussy "husband" when he takes to a hen. Your method of feeding reads good enough; I have often given my own lately in these columns. I like my eggbread as plainly made as possible. I do not mix maw seed, etc., with it, except under special circumstances. I make it by boiling a fresh egg 12 to 15 minutes, and mincing this up finely with a thin-pronged steel fork in an enamelled mug—the sort of mug I used to take to the "school treats" in my younger days. To this I add (well mixing) two Osborne biscuits, which I have previously reduced to crumbs by the aid of a rolling pin. For one to three-day-old youngsters I do not use much white of eggs, and, consequently, less biscuit; when they are over a week old I use more biscuit, and add a saltspoonful of Plasmon powder. You can please yourself whether you adopt these last-mentioned ideas of mine.

A Thrush and a Linnet.

A. G. Kent.—1: The lack of feathers is curious, but I fancy will be remedied when the young Thrush moults, which should be very shortly now. It might do good if for a few days you gently rubbed on to the bare part a very little of a mild sulphur ointment, which any chemist will supply. Also, until he is through the moult, on alternate days stir a small teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food in his drinking water, using a glass or pot vessel only while giving this. Get the Parrish's from a good chemist. There can be but little wrong with the youngster, or he would not "sing" so persistently. 2: As the Linnets are used to outdoor life, there is no need whatever for you to take them indoors while they moult. If you do not give hemp seed regularly, you should supply some during the moulting period; also give all the seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain, mouse-ear, knot-grass, and similar wild seeds that you can find time to gather. One day in the fields and lanes should produce sufficient to last a week.

A Quintette.

F. C. B.—1: Personally I think you would spoil your aviary if you divided it into four compartments—two would be enough. This has a direct bearing on your question No. 3, inasmuch as the greater the space the birds have for exercise, the less likely are they to need artificial heat. 2: You could put about three dozen small birds in. If you desire to breed, however, the fewer the pairs the better. 3: No artificial heat will be needed providing the aviary is weather and damp proof, and not too exposed to cold winds. It should have some snug corners for the birds to roost in. Canaries stand the winter quite well if bred from healthy, sound-constitutioned stock, and put outside during the summer. 4: Yes; the birds will sing afright, though when occupied with domestic duties the cocks sing less freely than if they were single, and in a cage. 5: You will find the dates and entrance fees of all the shows given in our "Review of Schedules" column. The dates of all the important shows are already appearing in our "Dates Fixed" column (side the centre pages).

An Aviary Matter.

Boyce. It seems to me you might invest in a copy of CAGE BIRDS handbook on Aviaries, etc., with profit to yourself. 1: Assuming your aviary to be 3 ft. from front to back (you do not make this clear) it would hold about 30 small birds with comfort. 2: I cannot answer this question until you let me know whether you want softbills or seed-eaters for your aviary. If you prefer the latter, then you could try any species of Finch or Bunting, or try and get together a representative group of the different kinds. You would find such a collection of very considerable interest. The matter of song and plumage you would find explained in any handbook of British Birds. 4: It is quite impossible to say definitely whether any given birds will or will not breed in an aviary, as they vary so in disposition. Thus one man may have no difficulty in breeding Goldfinches in his aviary, whereas his next-door neighbour may find it a task he cannot get his birds to undertake. You might reasonably expect Goldfinches, Greenfinches, Linnets and Redpolls to breed, providing you do not overcrowd.

Brevities.

Running a Risk (J. Crawshaw).—I suppose you would be, as your friend suggests, "running a risk" in buying a newly-caught Nightingale, it being an offence in the eye of the law to have such a bird in one's possession. But the risk is one almost solely affecting dealers. I don't think it need cause you a single uneasy night, or even a moment's loss of sleep.

Linnet off Song (F. Yardley).—You say your Linnet "looks nice and well," then go on, "but is very sleepy, and sits on perch with flights down." It is difficult to reconcile these two statements. I should advise you to try a little dandelion juice (taraxacum) from the chemist, in its drinking water for four or five days—half a teaspoonful stirred into two tablespoonfuls, fresh daily. Give plenty of sound teazle seed in the stock mixture; also a small teaspoonful of maw seed daily, while ailing.

A Weed (R.C.).—The seeding weed you send is known as "mouse-ear," and is a kind of chickweed, very plentiful just now, and very much liked by captive British seed-eaters of all kinds, likewise Canaries.

A Peppery Subject (A. McInroy).—The way to distinguish between "red tasteless pepper" and "Natal pepper" is to put a little on your tongue. If nothing happens, it is tasteless (or sweet) pepper; if you spit it out quickly, then hop arouud for a time, with tears in your eyes, you will know it is Natal (or hot) pepper. Many vendors offer both kinds for sale in our advertisement columns.

Goldfinch and Linnet Eggs (W. E. Goodale).—You might get both Goldfinch and Linnet eggs (fresh) if you insert in our columns an advertisement offering to buy them. I don't know anyone who "deals in them." I believe I noticed an advertisement some few weeks ago from someone who had them for sale.

Linnet Mules Lost (No Nom-de-plume).—I don't know whether part of your letter has got mislaid, but you do not seem to ask me any definite question. If the Linnet interfered with the feeding operations, you should have removed him at once, and left the hen Canary to go on alone. It is, I agree, unusual for eggs to hatch on the twelfth day of incubation.

Loss of Feathers (H.H.B.).—You cannot do anything between now and Bank Holiday. It would take five or six weeks at least to put matters right. This slight loss of feathers happens to many birds towards the middle of summer, and without any apparent cause. Your Starling will come all right at the moult, which must now be close at hand. Let him have a goodly supply of ripe fruit, also vegetable ingredients in his stock food.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

A Necessary Change of Diet.

J.A.—Your diet is altogether wrong. Do not give table scraps, tea, coffee, or milk slops, nor any kind of animal food. Diet: two parts Canary seed and oats, and one part each wheat, dari, maize, hemp, and sunflower seed—well mix and keep a continuous supply in the cage. Also give to vary the diet, plain biscuit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), ripe fruit, little boiled potato (without fat or grease), green-food, such as lettuce, green peas etc., as in season. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in cage. Every third day for the next fortnight put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water—strength, four parts of water to one of the magnesia. If its excreta should become watery loose you must stop the aperient till it becomes normal. If it appears weak, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food; for directions see reply to "G.R.S." Unless you diet the bird correctly the drugs will be of but little use. If there is any loss of flesh under the changed diet, then twice a week give a little boiled maize; but note, this only keeps fresh one day, and you must guard against stale scraps being left about; the food vessel, too, should be scalded out for each occasion.

Grey Parrot Pulling Feathers.

G.R.S.—In some cases it certainly is vice, arising from ennui, and the remedy is to turn the bird out into a stoutly built outdoor aviary for a time, and bring it in again when the weather sets in really cold, though with a good shelter shed they are hardy enough to weather the winter out of doors. In your case I certainly think the servants have been giving it table scraps, etc., which has brought about a heated condition of the skin. The bird would be much better kept in your regular living-room, where it would see plenty of company and hear plenty of conversation. It will also be a help to supply it with cotton reels to play with. Some chunks off some non-splintery wood to chew up will be enjoyed. Cure is difficult, and always a lengthy and tiresome affair. Give the bird at intervals a few doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful in about five times that quantity of water; and let this be the only liquid it has for the day unless the whole has been consumed. Give this so as to keep the bowels freely moving—not watery loose. On other days, that is, when not giving the magnesia, make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue treatment for some time. A little chastisement when it is plucking itself is also desirable. Feeding the bird almost entirely on sunflower seed is likely to aggravate the trouble. Diet as under: Seed mixture, two parts Canary seed and oats, and one part each of wheat, dari, maize, hemp, and sunflower seed. Well mix and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also give from time to time a change of diet, ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), plain biscuits (dry), bread (not buttered), and green food, lettuce, green peas, etc., as in season. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and also grit. The treatment must be persevered with, and success is more likely to be achieved on your own premises, as there is not likely to be any sudden cessation of the treatment; it would be gradual, and there would be less probability of a recurrence of the trouble afterwards. In any case Grey Parrots must not have messes, it always leads to this sooner or later. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, buttered bread, nor any kind of animal food.

Procuring a Parrot.

T.B.—A Grey Parrot is, as a rule, the best talker, though a Blue-fronted Amazon runs it very close. However, a Grey Parrot—that is, a newly-imported bird—is a very risky purchase. The birds come to hand in a very debilitated condition, and many of them with the germs of disease in their systems. Newly-imported birds are worth about 15s., or a little more, according to number on the market, but it is far cheaper to procure one privately even at a much higher price. Good talkers in fine plumage command quite fancy prices. The Blue-fronted Amazon is a hardier species, and consequently a less risky purchase. You may get a newly-imported bird for 10s., but if you want one that has been over here a little time, and can speak one or two words, then you will have to give at least 30s. You will find the diet given in reply to "G.R.S.," but your bird, when procured, should not need any drugs. An ordinary living-room is the best place to keep it in, so that it is free from draught. The changing temperature of a kitchen is most unsuitable. Note other replies in this issue.

Quassia Solution.

E.W.—This can be bought from our advertisers almost as cheap as you can make it. However, when I do make any I get 2 ozs. of the chips, put it in a pannikin with a quart of water, and let it simmer for a good half-hour. When cold it is ready for use. It will be strong enough for you to add sufficient warm water to just take the chill off. A spray is better than a syringe—something similar to what hairdressers use; one good enough can be procured for about 1s. or 1s. 6d. Hold it fairly close to the bird, and quite a small quantity of the solution will soon impregnate the bird's plumage. This is far better than saturating it.

Grey Parrot Losing Feathers.

W.J.E.—Am afraid you cannot have looked carefully into replies in this column, and yet he giving your bird sops and eggs. No wonder the bird is out of condition, and has an irritated skin. The remedy is to diet correctly. Give one or two doses of Parrish's Chemical Food. You will find full directions as to giving these, and also the correct diet, given in reply to "G.R.S.," to which I must refer you. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, nor any kind of animal food. If you diet as advised there should soon be an improvement in your bird.

Sick Amazon.

T. T.—I fear I cannot give you definite help till you inform me how you have been feeding and treating the bird generally. It is not much use giving drugs to the accompaniment of an improper dietary. However, for one day, give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in 4 times its bulk of water, and let the bird have nothing else to drink during the day; at any rate till the magnesia water has been consumed. Follow this by making the drinking water the colour of port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. On receipt of the particulars asked for will reply per return.

A Parrot which Picks Itself.

V. D. Macpherson.—I must ask you to repeat query next week with full particulars as to how you have been dieting the bird, diet having, as a rule, a large bearing in such cases. If you read other replies in this issue, they should help you. In the meantime give your bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in four times its bulk of water, and for the day let it have nothing else to drink till this is consumed. After an interval of three days, repeat the dose. In between and till you get a further reply make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Get a box of spermaceti ointment and rub a little daily into any raw places, continuing same til the sores are healed.

Cage for King Parrot.

Learner.—A box cage for general purposes is always the safer, as it is a great security against draught. For show purposes I prefer a Parrot cage, and the bird should be in this several weeks before it is sent to the show, or it may be very wild in an open cage amongst strangers, and thus prejudice its chances of being in the money. Two great factors towards success are steadiness and condition. The foods are always best for Parrots given on a level with the perch, except under very exceptional circumstances. While getting the bird accustomed to an open Parrot cage, you must be careful to so place it, that there cannot be a draught through the cage. Draught is responsible for the death of more cage birds than all the other ills put together, owing to the foolish practice of keeping birds in open cages in windows.

Number of Birds for Aviary.

H.H.B.—You have quite a novel, yet practically constructed aviary, though your sketch does not make it clear whether it is one or two, that is, whether the lower portion is quite independent of the upper, or whether there is communication door between the two. Considering the fecundity of Budgerigars, once they start breeding, I consider you already have sufficient for your space, though you could add a pair of Rosella Parrakeets with safety. Your aviary never ought, under any conditions, to contain more than 35 birds the size of a Budgerigar, and with a little luck you should soon exceed this number with your present stock. You have your remedy if a given individual does not treat you fairly; have nothing more to do with him. Such cases, unfortunately, are not uncommon; the marvel to me is that they have not found out the unprofitable character of such trickery long ago.

What Weaver is it?

J.W.H.—Your bird is the Madagascar Weaver. These birds (that is, the males), as do most Weavers, go out of colour during the winter months. The instances of Weavers breeding in captivity are few, and I cannot call to mind any recorded instance of this species having done so. Occasionally, in large aviaries, nests are built, and young even hatched, but instances of the young being reared are rare indeed. However, even in a cage, the males are ready enough to build their interesting nests, for which end with soft grass and hay. The appearance of the nest is not a bad one, but I cannot find out any hope of the eggs between the Madagascar Weaver and a Canary don't think the young would be reared if hatched. In the event of such a mating appearing, they would need a continuous supply of live insects for the young to land any chance of being reared. They do not need the aid of any colour food to enable them to don the bright colours at each succeeding spring. They should have one or two live insects (mealworms, or such other as you can capture) daily to keep them in health.

Treating Parrot During Moult.

E. P.—So long as the bird continues fit and well, no special treatment is necessary, but with all my Parrots I take the precaution of giving Parrish's Chemical Food during the period of the moult. Also keep their bowels moving freely with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia. With the exception of the bread and butter and milk, your diet is correct. Stale household bread may be given without the butter, as may also plain biscuits, and a few shelled walnuts. I consider milk little better than poison for a caged Parrot; birds so fed sooner or later develop the vice of feather-eating, if nothing more tragic occurs. I am aware that occasionally there occur instances of birds so fed, and after a long period apparently none the worse, but such cases are the exception, and not the rule. I have had many an instance brought to my notice of such birds breaking hopelessly up and becoming deplorable-looking objects. For a caged Parrot the only safe rule is, no tea, coffee or milk sops, fats, nor any kind of animal food whatever.

Budgerigars and Breeding.

F.W.B.—As your birds are healthy and have now got through the moult, they should soon settle down to breeding. However, it is quite possible you have got young birds; in that case it will be better for them if they do not do so till next season. Keep them supplied with good wholesome food, canary and white millet seed, a few oats, greenfood (such as grass or flower and fresh lettuce), cuttlefish, grit, and clean water. Hang up at least double the number of husks that you have pairs of birds, and as soon as they are thoroughly ready (that is, when in proper breeding condition), they will settle down and breed, but it is by no means uncommon for Budgerigars to do nothing in the breeding way during their first year in new quarters (this is not, however, a hard and fast rule), and it is all the better for the birds in the long run when that is the case.

What Parrots Are They?

P. R. E.—They are Senegal Parrots, and an interesting and beautiful African species, when they are fully mature. They will for the present do best in a cage—at any rate till they are vigorous on the wing—but the cage should be one of the largest Parrot cages made. Later they can be put into a garden aviary sufficiently large to give them space for flight, but it will be better to keep them for a year in a roomy cage before doing so. They are a fairly hardy species when once acclimatised, and only need protection from draught. Diet: Canary and white millet-seed, with a few oats, such ripe fruit as it will eat, little plain biscuit (dry), fresh lettuce as greenfood, grit, and a piece of clean cuttlefish continually hanging in the cage. If the birds are young, as I suspect, a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water every other day for two or three months will be a help. Hope you'll have luck with them; they are a species which becomes very tame and confiding.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

TWO of the Yorkshire Union Societies have had a change of secretaries. The Dewsbury C.B.S. have lost Mr. W. Charlesworth, who, on account of business, is shortly to reside in Leeds. He is being succeeded by Mr. N. Rayner, of Granville-street, Dewsbury. The other society is the Laisterdyke Society, who have been fortunate enough to again secure, in place of Mr. J. Pownall, who has retired from the position, the services of Mr. A. Bottomley, who was for many years their secretary, and knows how to engineer a show.

I HEAR a whisper that the Hoyland Society are studying the advisability of their joining the Yorkshire Union. Without doubt, this would be a move in the proper direction, as the Y.U. offer great attractions in the shape of competitions, etc., to its members.

SEVERAL societies were holding members' shows on Saturday last, all of them being well patronised by their members. It is a great pity there is not an open show, as many would have been glad of a chance for an open fight to settle up as to who were the fortunate possessors of the best young birds. In many cases arguments have waxed warm as to the merits, etc., of individual birds.

THE men of Horton and Wibsey are to be pitted against each other to-day (Saturday) in a game of cricket, to be played at Wibsey, and a great treat is expected. A supper is to be provided at the Wibsey headquarters ("Horse and Groom" Inn), and from experience I know this department will be well looked after.

The members held their annual young bird show on July 6th at Nash's Royal Stores. Owing to so many of the members having met with very poor breeding results, the entry was not quite up to the usual number, but some choice exhibits were staged, and should do well for their owners at the autumn shows. Norwich were only small in number, but the quality was first-class, and here was undoubtedly the best youngster in the show in Mr. F. Slocombe's clear Buff, a real gem all-round. Yorkshires were also a good lot. The exhibits were nicely staged round the room, and were well attended to by well-known fanciers. Mr. Negus, the newly-appointed Hon. Sec., had his first taste of show work, and right well did he perform his task; in addition, he was most obliging and courteous. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TWENTY-YEAR-OLD GOLDFINCH-CANARY MULE.

SIR,—Perhaps some of your readers can tell me if the following constitutes a record: In 1893, an attendant in the County Asylum, Bicton Heath, Nr. Shrewsbury received as a wedding present a Mule (Goldfinch and Canary) which, in the previous year won two prizes as a songster in Bristol. This means that the bird is now over 20 years old. Since its arrival here it has been a source of pleasure to the patients in Male-Ward No. 1, and is still in full and strong song. If changed from the place it has occupied for 20 years, it mopes, and is silent.

THE C.B.U. AND THE YORKSHIRE UNION.

SIR,—As I have had so very many inquiries as to the progress of the working arrangement with the Cage Bird Union, I should be pleased if you would publish the enclosed copies of the correspondence between the two bodies in reference to same, and thus let the Fancy in general know how the matter stands. The C.B.U. do not seem inclined to allow their members to show at Yorkshire Union shows without drawing their blood money, and the Y.U. have strong objections to paying same, and only ask for an amicable arrangement to acknowledge each other and allow the open door for exhibition between the two bodies. I will leave the Fancy to judge for itself from the correspondence as to which is in the right.

SAMUEL DEAN,
Sec. of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.

March 25th, 1908.

MR. FRED HAMMOND,

DEAR SIR,—I am now in a position to submit my Council's suggestions for a working arrangement between the Y.U. and the C.B.U. Please refer to my letter to you of the 22nd Sept. last (published in CAGE BIRDS March 7th), and treat as though now submitted for your Council's consideration, with the exception of that portion of it where I state that in my private opinion the C.B.U. might give way on the point of supremacy of rule. As I stated in my letter of the 6th inst., my Council are practically unanimous in their opinion that the C.B.U. rules should prevail at all shows held under their patronage. However, further to this letter, they now suggest that any of the Y.U. shows which affiliate or to whom licenses are granted, should hold their shows under both sets of rules, and that all exhibitors at these shows who are members of the Y.U. shall be governed by, and when necessary, appeal to that body, other exhibitors being under the rules of the C.B.U. As previously mentioned, the only serious difference between the two sets of rules is in the matter of which shall be supreme, and, I believe, the suggestion now made a practical way of obviating the difficulty. On the matter of recognising each other's suspension, I think we are agreed, and I trust these proposals will meet with the approval of your Council, and that an early announcement can be made to this effect.

Kind regards,
Yours faithfully,

DEAR MR. LYTHGOE,—I duly received your communication of the 25th inst., and placed the same before my Council at their meeting on Saturday, the 28th. I cannot, for one moment, believed that you will be in the least surprised to hear that they respectfully and with great regret declined to accept the contents as the basis of a satisfactory working arrangement between the two Unions. Your Council's withdrawal, or, at any rate, their refusal to ratify that portion of your first communication wherein you state that in your private opinion the C.B.U. might give way on the point of supremacy of rules at Yorkshire Union shows, would, if persisted in, almost appear to close the door against any further negotiations in the matter, as my Council are absolutely unanimous that such represents the irreducible minimum acceptable to the Yorkshire Union. I have strong hopes, however, that your Council will recognise the justice and reasonableness of the Y.U.'s demand to govern in their entirety their own shows, without being called upon to delegate any of their authority to a dual management—a position most humiliating if it were possible, but, with the existing rules of both Unions, altogether impracticable. A glance at both sets of rules is quite sufficient to make this obvious, and I do not propose at present to labour the point further, unless you should specially desire me to do so, my sole idea at this moment being to put forth every effort to bring about a satisfactory working arrangement between the two Unions, an arrangement bringing with it no loss of dignity, independence, honour, or self-respect to either party, and at the same time conferring untold benefits upon the whole body of fanciers. To this end I beg most respectfully to submit for your Council's consideration the following proposals, unanimously endorsed by my Council at their meeting on the 28th inst., viz.:—

> That the members of both Unions be allowed to exhibit at each other's shows without fee or license.
> That the shows be governed entirely by, and under the rules of, the Union to which the society holding the show is affiliated, or, in the case of a licensed show, the Union granting such license.
> That in the case of a person found guilty of malpractices of any nature whatsoever, in connection with any show held under the rules of either Union, such person shall be dealt with by the Union of which he (or she) is a member, and any penalty imposed by said Union to be recognised and enforced by the other Union within its sphere of authority.

I sincerely trust that your Council will recognise in the above suggestions an earnest desire to arrive at a just and equitable solution of a somewhat difficult problem, dictated by a sense of fairness all round, and without any desire to unduly take advantage of the independence and peculiarly strong position which the Yorkshire Union can undoubtedly maintain.

With kind regards, believe me,
Your faithfully,

DEAR MR. DEAN,

Your P.C. to hand. I am sorry I have not yet been able to submit your Council's proposals, re Y.U. shows, on account of pending election of the C.B.U. Council. This will not be completed for two or three weeks, and meanwhile I should like to be quite clear as to whether I grasp your Council's proposals properly, so that I may place them clearly before the Council. In the first proposal. "That the members of both Unions be allowed to exhibit at each other's shows without fee or license." The word "members" is used. There is already no bar against your members showing at any show whatever, and ours are not asked to pay any fee, only the society desiring their entries is desired to pay a fee of 5s. for license. If it is your Council's proposal that the Y.U. shows should be made exceptions to our rule and licenses granted them free, while all others are charged a fee, I am confident this will need modifying before my Council will agree. This would be altogether unreasonable and contrary to the expression made last season that your societies were being allowed a free hand in applying for our patronage, and contrary also to Mr. Hammond's expression of his view that the right of societies applying for licenses was to pay what ever fee the C.B.U. demanded according to our rules, if they desired the patronage of our members. Subject to this proposal being modified, there does not seem any objection to the other two. I take it that the latter part of clause 2, which reads "That the shows be governed entirely by, and under the rules of the Union to which the society holding the show is affiliated, or in the case of a licensed show, the Union granting such license," that in case of the C.B.U. granting a license to one of your shows, the show is to be entirely governed by the C.B.U. and under their rules. I would be glad to hear if my reading of the proposals is correct, and if so, would be glad if you could submit the first again to your Council with a view to its being modified, so that we may get this matter settled with as little delay as possible.

Yours faithfully,

May 26th, 1908.

DEAR MR. LYTHGOE.

Many thanks for your letter, but I am sorry you do not seem to grasp our meanings properly. In the first place, according to your own rules, you cannot grant any license to our shows, being cage-bird shows only, and, therefore, must be affiliated. I am perfectly aware that our members can show at your shows without fee or license, and the Council of the Y.U. think you might fall in with a proper spirit and work amicably with them. As to any Y.U. show being held under C.B.U. rules, when all the valuable specials are to be competed for by Y.U. members only, this is absurd and cannot bear the scrutiny of any fair-minded fancier. Personally, I don't think that the entries of the C.B.U. members are worth 1s. 6d. to any of our societies, and don't see why we should pay 5s. to be ruled by another society when we have rules of our own that have stood the test of time and been found satisfactory. To read rule 1 as it stands it is quite clear and does not need any comment. Rule 2, to put it plainer, is that all Y.U. shows must be held under Y.U. rules, and C.B.U. shows under C.B.U. rules, and, of course as C.B.U. grant licenses to other shows (mixed shows), the C.B.U. rules will prevail there. You must thoroughly understand that Y.U. shows must be held under Y.U. rules only, and the allowing of members to show at each other's shows is only a matter of courtesy. In fact, the only thing we ask is for fair and considerate treatment, which from your letter you do not seem inclined to give. In my opinion you have construed the letter to meet your own requirements and have not read them in a reasonable spirit. Hoping your Council will see things in a true and fancierlike spirit,

I am, Yours sincerely,

MR. S. DEAN,

DEAR SIR,

At the Council meeting held last Saturday, your Council's proposals for a working arrangement between the Y.U. and the C.B.U., contained in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st March last, were carefully considered. My Council are not prepared to agree to the first proposal, that the members of both Unions be allowed to exhibit at each other's shows without fee or license. A resolution was, however, passed, that we accept your Union's proposals of the 31st March subject to licenses being applied for and approved at a covering fee of £3 3s, to be paid by the Y.U. That is, that your Union shall pay the fee mentioned, and which shall cover all licenses applied for by the societies in your Union, and which will be granted subject to the show not clashing with a C.B.U. show already fixed in the Yorkshire district. I trust that these terms may bring about a settlement.

Yours faithfully,

A POINT ABOUT EXCHANGING.

Who Should Send on First?

SIR,—Allow me a small space in reply to Mr. Blair. I have only been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for nine months, and I like doing a bit of exchanging. I should say I have answered over 100 advertisements since taking your paper, and I have always sent my goods first until I saw an advertisement in the exchange column on May 1st. A man advertised some Norwich Canaries for sale at 7s. 6d. each, or for exchange. I wrote him offering him 9s. worth of stuff for one. His reply was to the effect that if I sent the stuff on he would send the bird. I did so, but have never heard from him or seen anything of him yet. I wrote him three times in all. How am I to find out if he is still there? He got the stuff, as I have seen the delivery note. And his is not the only case in which I have enjoyed an "exchange." Three months ago a writing desk was advertised for sale at 18s. 6d., or for exchange. I wrote and "bid" him, so that gentleman wrote asking me to send mine on. I did so, and he wrote back highly pleased. I got the desk, and I don't think it was worth more than 6s. I have also a book which was advertised at 15s. 6d., and might have been sold at 7s. So, for my own part, I don't see that the advertiser has any more right to see what he gets first than he who purchases. I should like to know if anyone else has been "taken in." Some folk get you to send yours on first carriage paid, and then you have to pay carriage on theirs. I like exchanging in an honest way, as I always tell them straight what I have got and the quality of it.

IS IT A RECORD?

Another Curious Experience.

SIR,—I read with interest in CAGE BIRDS the letter from Mr. Chas. Clifford. I would like to tell you of another curious experience—one that has come under my own notice. The Rev. James Fanning, of Liverpool, put up a pair of Green Norwich to nest. The hen laid only three eggs. On July 3rd five young birds were hatched from these three eggs. The one out of the single egg is still living, but the four out of the two other eggs did not live long afterwards. I have the four preserved in spirit, as I thought it was exceptional, and so begged the birds to preserve them as a curiosity.

FRANK EDWARDS.

SIR,—Under the above heading one of your readers asks if seven eggs laid consecutively by a Canary is a record. I should like to inform him that I have a small Norwich Plain-head Canary which laid eight eggs on eight consecutive days, and sat on same. All the eggs were fertile, but only five chicks hatched out; the other three were dead in shell in different stages of incubation. This is a record so far as I am concerned. I should like to add that during the time the eight eggs were being laid there were five young birds in another nest which the hen assisted the cock bird in feeding. It might be interesting to know that the hen is twelve months old and the cock eight years.

EGGS WHICH HATCHED EARLY.

SIR, I have a Linnet and Canary that have paired, but which lost the youngsters through non-feeding. The Linnet will not touch the egg-food, and will not let the hen come off the nest, and is feeding her all day. A most unusual thing happened with me. The hen laid on the 21st, 24th, and 25th of June. I took the eggs away as laid, and on Wednesday morning at eight o'clock I found two young ones hatched out, the hen having sat twelve days. I replaced the eggs on the night of the 25th.

EARLY BIRD.

A ONE-WINGED CANARY.

SIR, I have read of chickens being hatched with four legs, or two heads, or with something else unusual and abnormal. And I have never had a bird with anything worse than a deformed foot or wing, which might have been caused by an accident when the bird was very young. But this season I have had a Canary hatched which has only one wing, instead of two. It is just the same as any other Canary in all respects but this. The place where the wing should have been is quite smooth, and is feathered over now. The other wing is on the side of the bird in quite the usual manner. The Canary is able to get about easily enough, but, of course, is unable to fly. When it makes an attempt to fly, it is not able to balance itself, and consequently rolls over on its side. It was one of a nest of three. There were also two young birds in one egg in the same nest; these were dead in shell having failed to hatch out. They are six weeks old now and are doing for themselves.

GOLDFINCHES BECOMING BLIND.

SIR,—As another assurance to your readers, especially the lovers of the Goldfinch, who find themselves about to be disappointed by seeing their favourite Goldie gradually and surely being deprived of his sight, I would relate a case of my own experience. The bird, a splendid singer and two years caged, gradually had his left eye wither away and close up. Then the right eye showed the same signs, and within a fortnight started to look dim and also gradually closed up, leaving the bird totally blind. The song ceased, and with great apparent patience he learnt to find his seed and water; he remained in one position for hours, with the peculiar drooping of the head, and then quickly raising it again the whole of the day, similar to a person nodding in a sleep. It seemed almost cruel to allow him to live in what appeared to be torture, but after one year in that mute state he has now commenced his song again. It seems as though the disease of the eyes temporarily affected the power of song.

DO BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES EAT MICE?

SIR,—Who has heard before of a battle between a Blackbird and a shrew mouse? When walking down the road the other night with some friends, we witnessed what we thought an unusual thing—a Blackbird fighting hard with a shrew mouse, amongst the grass on the roadside. They fought for a considerable time, until the Blackbird picked the mouse up and flew away with it, but had to drop it again on the road, and the fight commenced again. This time the Blackbird killed the mouse, and flew away with it. Is it a usual thing for Blackbirds to kill these kinds of mice, with the idea of eating them, or is it something unusual?

Morpeth. W. A. DIXON.

SIR,—Quite recently I came across a letter signed by "A. J. L.," and I am sending it to you in the belief that it will interest others as it has interested me. The writer says: While resting recently under the shade of my garden, I noticed a family of five little mice playing on the smooth surface of the lawn. The tiny creatures were popping in and out of their holes, and gambolling merrily on the smooth grass. Presently a fine Song Thrush came swiftly running out from under some shrubs near by, halted within a foot of one of these little mice, made a sudden dash, struck the mouse with his beak, knocked him over, seized him, threw him once or twice in the air, then picked him up and carried him off to eat. The same Thrush repeated this manœuvre three times more in the course of an hour, till but one only of the five little mice was left. That the Thrush ate them I know, for I saw him take the fourth victim on to a gravel path and peck away at the body till it was consumed. I have never seen Song Thrushes attack mice before, but if it is their usual practice it is an additional reason for wishing to preserve the lives of these delightful songsters.

The March of the Ants.

The Nightjar, or "Goat Sucker," as it is called, is another of our regular summer migrants, and one that is rarely seen in captivity, possibly because of the trouble involved in feeding it. I saw a hand-reared specimen a couple of years ago in the possession of Mr. Galloway, of Caversham. It was exceedingly tame and a very curious bird, but I believe required to be hand-fed even when full-grown. It was, from appearances, quite old enough to feed itself when I saw it.

In general colouring, the Nightjar is similar to the Wryneck, but considerably larger, measuring 10 inches or more in length, and 7½ in the wing. It lives entirely upon moths and other insects which it hawks at twilight or when the moon is shining. When reposing, it usually sits lengthways upon a stout bough with the head frequently lower than the tail.

I think Mr. Galloway told me he had reared his bird principally on live ants' eggs, mealworms, etc., and I thought him very fortunate in having a good supply of live ants' eggs at hand during the summer, for the mere trouble of an excursion into the lovely woods that surround him, and, thanks to him, I was able to see some of the sources of his supply. They were large ant hills tenanted by millions of the large, black ants. The day I saw them they were evidently on the march, for we traced a column about 2 feet wide leading to a pine tree, up which some were swarming, whilst others were making the return journey, some 10 or 15 yards, each loaded with a small insect, or, perhaps, several busily engaged dragging a small stick to add to the already large collection which formed the hill.

If one were so situated that he could obtain a constant supply of these live ants' eggs, there would be little cause to worry about getting mealworms or gentles, or to search the coal cellar for a few stray beetles.

The Rarely-caught Wallcreeper.

Another bird I have had the good fortune to see on many occasions during the past year is the Wallcreeper, exhibited during the past show season by Mr. C. T. Maxwell. It was, I feel sure, the first specimen ever exhibited in England, and was shown in a cage fitted up to represent as near as possible its natural surroundings, namely, the face of a stone wall or cliff. I daresay most of your members saw it, so that I scarcely need describe it; but in case any of you did not have the opportunity of seeing it, I will give you a brief description.

The adult male—Mr. Maxwell's was a male—is slate-grey above, but slightly darker on the head and darker still upon the rump; the flights are very dark and tipped with dull white, wing coverts crimson; the tail is black, tipped with white, and the throat and breast are black. The bill is black and long, and is curved like that of the Treecreeper. It is about 6 inches long, but scarcely looks so large, as its bill is a great length for the size of the bird.

It is strictly insectivorous and lives on spiders and other insects which it finds on the face of walls or cliffs. The tail feathers, I should mention, are not stiff at the ends, like the Treecreeper's or Woodpecker's, and the bird somewhat resembles the Nuthatch, except that it has a curved bill.

It inhabits the mountainous regions of Europe, and but few specimens are recorded as having been obtained in England. I think our Continental friends must be very expert bird-catchers to secure a Wallcreeper, and must also be very smart at "meating off," but I daresay whoever was the lucky catcher was well repaid for his trouble, for I understand Wallcreepers are expensive birds. Anyone fortunate enough to secure a specimen of this rare bird should not spare expense in securing the best food obtainable. Here again there can be nothing better than fresh ants' eggs, but failing these the best dried ants' eggs, a little freshly boiled egg, cream cheese passed through a sieve, and just a small quantity of crushed biscuit. All the spiders, flies, etc., you can find should be given, and the bird should be placed in a roomy cage, as it is, like our more familiar Treecreeper, very restless and requires plenty of room for exercise.

The Treecreeper in Captivity.

It might, perhaps, be as well to make a few remarks on the Treecreeper. This species, at any rate the imported specimens which are scarcely distinguishable from the true British variety (except that they are perhaps a trifle lighter in the plumage), is a resident one, and dwells in suitable localities, namely, in most woods. It can usually be seen running up the tree trunks diligently seaching for food, which consists of the many small insects concealed in the crevices of the bark. It usually alights at the lower part of the trunk and works its way upwards, thrusting its long, curved bill between the crevices as it goes.

It is a small bird and delicately constructed, and it can, therefore, be readily seen that it requires a lot of attention to keep the bird in good fettle in captivity. It should be fed as I have already recommended for the Wallcreeper, and the cage—the larger the better—should be lined on all sides with Virginia cork. The cork should be so arranged that the bird can find a hole or crevice it can get into to sleep. The show cage should, I think, be one of good dimensions and lined with dark-red or green baze, so that the bird can easily cling to it.

I remember that a Treecreeper a few years back was an almost certain winner anywhere. The birds were much sought after, but now the case is altered, and one sometimes sees three or four specimens in a class, and one then has an opportunity of comparing them.

I am again indebted to Mr. Galloway for shewing me the largest number of Treecreepers I have ever seen at one time—somewhere about 30 of various ages, and all looking well. The Treecreeper usually builds behind some loose piece of bark, and Mr. Galloway, knowing this, found that by nailing pieces of bark loosely to the tree-trunk in the woods near him, was usually able to go later on and get a few young 'creepers, but, personally, I would rather pay for one which has got over the moult than rise at daybreak for several weeks to tend to the appetites of a dozen or more hungry Treecreepers. I once tried my hand at rearing six, but soon had enough of it, and turned them over to Mr. Turnbor, who reared them until they were able to feed for themselves.

*Knows a Thing or Two.

A lady had a very tame Parrot which was allowed to walk about while she was entertaining her guests. One day at a garden party, the Parrot was paying its respects as usual to one of the visitors when the lady, sitting next to her exclaimed, "Look the stone has fallen out of your ring." "What! my diamond gone?" screamed the other. Indeed, it was so, and there was no sign of it anywhere, though all the party searched for it. "I am afraid Polly's at the bottom of this," said the bird's mistress. "Only a week ago she picked a stone from my necklace. But I can soon find out." And to the astonishment and amusement of all, she seized the Parrot, which began to scream, and held it by the tail in the air, shaking it violently. And out of its beak forthwith dropped the diamond. Sent by C. T. Wills (age 14), 10, Ashburnham Road, Northampton.

*Robin Redbreast & the Children.

Is the story true, Robin,
That you were so good
To the little orphans,
Sleeping in the wood?
That you saw them lying Pale and cold and still,
And strewed leaves about them,
With your little bill?

Whether true or not, Robin,
We are glad to see
How you trust the children,
Hopping in so free.
Hopping o'er the carpet,
Picking up the crumbs,
Robin knows the children,
Love him when he comes.

*A Friendly Sparrow.

A friend of mine found a little Sparrow on the grass in the garden, so she took it in and fed it. It was very young, and could hardly fly. The little bird became very tame and would hop about the table at meal-times and sit on my friend's shoulder to be fed. One day he disappeared at dinner time, and could not be found. The following Saturday, my friend was standing on the grass when she heard a twittering noise at her feet; it was the baby Sparrow back again. She coaxed him with some bread crumbs and he flew on her shoulders. She kept him about a week and then let him go, but he returns every day to be fed. Where he went those three days still remains a mystery.—Sent by Mabel Mazzoni (age 13), 4, Rye Villas, St. Aidans Road, E. Dulwich, S.E.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

I am pleased to inform you that I have had a most successful breeding season, both with the Borders and the Norwich, and from what I hear, other Border Fancy breedehs in and around London have done equally well. So we may expect some keen competition in the Border Fancy classes at the forthcoming autumn shows.—R. BROWNLIE (Brockley, S.E.)

I have had over 20 young birds and have only lost one.—J. CRABTREE (Manchester).

We are having some rare good luck about here—plenty of nice young birds.—WM. PINCHIN (Marske-by-the-Sea).

The Fancy is very quiet hereabouts, and so far breeding operations have not been very successful.—THOMAS SMITH (Glasgow).

Aberdeen Mule breeders are doing fairly well at present. One noted fancier has bred some grand Greenfinch, Linnet, and Siskin Mules, amongst which are two clear Siskin-Canary Mules—one yellow, absolutely clear and of good size, the other a buff with only a dark ring round neck. I hope he may be able to bring them through a good moult.—JOHN LYON (Aberdeen).

I have had a most successful breeding season up to the present. In fact it is the best I have ever had, and I have had to get a number of new flight cages to accommodate the youngsters, which number nearly one hundred.—J. BERTIE (Mapperley).

I am having a splendid season. I have 80 young birds, and hope to finish up with a hundred—the same as last year, all of which I then sold through your grand paper, CAGE BIRDS.—A. BROWN (Wood Green, N.)

I have done well with Border Fancies both in breeding and in showing.—W. J. HONEYSETT, chairman of the Battersea C.B.A.

I have had a good season, having reared 27 young birds altogether.—J. SMITH (Warrington)

Kirkintilloch C.B.S.

Our members have done well. Mr. A. Chalmers has 45 young birds, mostly Norwich. Mr. McLay 47, Norwich and Crests, Mr. Martin 25 Norwich, and Mr McAuley 47 Borders. The rest of our members not having put up so many pairs average about a dozen each.—D. CAMPBELL, sec. of the Kirkintilloch C.B.S.

Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

Weeds and Seeds of the Field and Wayside described

By R. MORSE.

With Footnotes, etc., by G. E. Weston.

Cock's Foot Grass (Dactylis glomerata)

This is a valuable agricultural grass, and is abundant in meadows and by waysides throughout the summer. It is a coarse grass about eighteen inches high, with long, broad leaves. The spikelets are thickly clustered, and irregularly arranged. (The plant derives its generic name from the Greek word "daktulos," a finger, from the finger-like clusters of the spikelets). It is a perennial grass, and its flowering season is from June till August.

Cock's-foot Grass.

Field Gentian (G. Campestris).

This is a very well-known grass to large numbers of country people, who gather it and lay it about their homes in bundles, for as it dries it gives off the delightful perfume of new-mown hay. Indeed, it is chiefly this grass which imparts that well-known scent to the hay-cocks, so much admired by lovers of the country and wild life.

Field Gentian.

It is an erect, shining plant about a foot high, and has hairy leaves. The flower heads sometimes reach a length of four or even five inches, and have a purplish appearance. It may easily be tested by laying a bunch on one side to dry, when it will give off the odour referred to above.

It blooms during May, June, and July, and is a perennial (i.e., it does not die each year as annuals do). It is an abundant grass throughout the country.

Couch Grass or Twitch (Agropyron repens).

This is one of the most troublesome weeds we have in this country, and yet it is surprising how few know the seed heads of it. I suppose this may be explained by the fact that gardeners generally destroy the weed before it has time to produce flowers and seeds. But if fields and waysides be searched during the summer months, no difficulty will be experienced in securing a good supply.

The roots creep very extensively underground, and the solitary stems, free from hairs, reach a height of about two feet, and are hollow. The flowering spikes somewhat resemble those of rye grass, but the following fact will make them easily distinguishable. The separate spikelets of rye grass are placed with their edges towards the stem, while those of couch grass are arranged with their broad sides towards it.

Knotgrass (Polygonum aviculare).

Common Knotgrass is an exceedingly abundant plant, but one which is almost always overlooked. This is a pity, for although it is sometimes a troublesome weed, it is nevertheless useful for many purposes. It has a branched stem, which usually lies flat upon the ground. The size of the plant varies very much, it being occasionally found only a few inches in length. The more common length, however, is about a foot, and it may even reach two or three feet.

The leaves are "lance-shaped," and have little chaffy or silky membranes at their bases known as "stipules." The flowers are exceedingly small and inconspicuous, and grow between the leaf-stalks and the stems. They vary in colour from pink to a greenish white. The seeds of Knotgrass may be gathered in abundance at the present time, and will form a valuable food for seed-eating birds.

The plant is held in high esteem by large numbers of people in Germany, for it is claimed that it possesses valuable medicinal properties. Herr Bilz, the founder and proprietor of a large sanatorium which bears his name, and which is situated near Dresden in Germany, says (while speaking of the effect of an infusion of Knotgrass on the kidneys): "The action of this simple tea is often so marked that all pain will disappear."

Common Privet (Ligustrum vulgare).

Autumn is pre-eminently a season for berries, and at the present time large numbers of our native birds are living almost entirely upon them. The Privet is a well-known and widely distributed shrub, being often planted to form a hedge round gardens, etc. The leaves are somewhat oval in shape, and are placed opposite to one another on the stems. They are very smooth, and are what might be called "semi-evergreen," for they do not fall till quite late in the season, and the Privet is oft-times seen almost in its full beauty when the surrounding shrubs have not a vestige of green left upon them.

The flowers are white, and appear in dense clusters in June and July. They have a well-known, rather sickly scent. After the flowers, come shiny, globular berries, which turn black as they ripen, and are then greedily devoured by hungry "berry-eaters." Large supplies of these useful fruits can be easily gathered throughout almost the whole Autumn.

Barberry (Berberis vulgaris).

This shrub is not at all uncommon in hedgerows and woods, where it may be found in bloom during May and June. The flowers are of a pretty yellow colour, and hang in pendent clusters. The wood of the shrub is of a yellowish colour, and the whole is covered generally with three-forked spines.

The fruits, or berries, change to a pretty orange-red when ripe, and are much elongated. They have a very pleasant acid taste, and are often gathered and preserved for Winter use. The somewhat slightly spinous leaves have also a similar acid taste, and are often eaten by children.

My Experiences with the Parrot Family.

By EDWARD LIGHTON.

Having kept all kinds of birds during the past forty years, I am in a position to speak of the larger species of foreigners I have owned during that period. The first I ever purchased was a young Lemon-crested Cockatoo, which should have been white, but I fancy his domicile had been in or somewhere near the chimney corner.

What the Moult Did.

This purchase was made in April. To wash it was quite out of the question, so I waited patiently for the completion of the moult, which ended in October. She came out such a beauty, that I determined to show her in the following month at Norwich. I did so, and she won 1st prize against large foreigners. She afterwards won prizes at the Palace, etc., in all thirteen at twelve shows.

I kept her on a stand. I feel confident that all large birds kept thus maintain themselves in better plumage than when kept in a cage, be it ever so large. Some will say that a bath or spraying adds to the sheen of the plumage of such birds, but I have found that Nature provides them with a powder, and the only precaution I took before sending her to a show, was to give her a dusting from the puff box, and then only if her plumage was soiled. But it was seldom that Nature required any assistance. The bird's diet consisted of maize, dari, hemp seed, fruit, and pieces from the table, meat excluded. I had her for about five years. During her last summer she laid thirteen eggs. She died in good plumage, and through the breaking of a blood-vessel. I had her stuffed, and she is now in a glass case.

Big, Sullen and Artful Birds.

I next bought a Giant Leadbeater in a large cage. He was the biggest I ever saw. After keeping him a few weeks, I sold him "at a big figure" to a lady who, within a month, won a first prize with him. We had other Leadbeaters, but none as large as this one. Next I had a Corella, which seemed of a more sullen disposition. One day, however, when in the garden, I opened the cage door, and the bird proved himself much too lively for me. He escaped, and soaring up like a Lark, he never saw the cage again.

After that, I had another Lemon-Crested Cockatoo on a stand. This one had a most peculiar habit when in the garden of making a hole in the ground, starting it with his beak, and when it was large enough for him to get in, scratching out the mould with his feet, exactly as a mole does. He persevered in this until the hole was large enough for him to hide in from view.

Cockatoos and a Military Macaw.

Next, I bought a Salmon-crested Cockatoo—a very small bird, but the best talking Cockatoo I ever heard. For, although they are often advertised as being good talkers, I have never with this exception, heard one which could get much farther than "Pretty Cockatoo." But, of course, there are exceptions to the rule. I have had other Cockatoos, but to give details of all would take up too much space and time. I have found their habits very similar. They are exceedingly hardy, providing they are not pampered with, or kept in draughts; they will stand the most severe weather, without any danger whatever.

To leave the Cockatoo and pass to other species; I think I now possess the largest Scarlet or "Military" Macaw in England. He is five years old, and a splendid talker. But, having been kept in a cage, he is not in such fine plumage as he otherwise would have been if kept on a stand. He keeps in perfect health, being fed and treated like the Cockatoos. For "Extras" he has all kinds of nuts and such fruits as are in season.

"An Old Blackguard."

A word about Parrots will not, I think, be out of place. I have had about a score of them at one time or another. Some of them have come to me freshly imported. Their stay with me was generally for about six weeks, after which they went over to the "great majority" dying from the same complaint that about 90 per cent. of these birds die from. One day I was asked to purchase a Grey of some thirty summers, which I did for the nominal sum of £2, the deal including a brass cage.

I was aware of the fact that her vocabulary was large, but not select. Her first speech in her new home was, like her last, not fit for children to hear. And being a parent, I at once, and with the aid of a very small twig, commenced to try and break her of her foul sentences. In two months, I had fairly succeeded with my task, using the rod of chastisement on her back directly I heard her commence. Just at this time I was asked for a Parrot such as she had previously been, and giving her a few lessons, strange to say, she re-learned in a week what it had taken me two months to break her of. I sold her at a big figure, and she gave great satisfaction. If she is still living, she might certainly be truthfully called "An old blackguard."

I have had Blue and Yellow-fronted Amazons, all good talkers; but I have never had such a distinct talker, as the South Coast Grey. I once possessed a Grand Eclectus, but found him a somewhat delicate and mopish bird. Although it is gorgeous in plumage, I should not care for this species of bird. I have found its habits similar to those of the Cockatoo, but it is a more delicate species.

The Prevention of Feather-plucking.

I may say that I have never had a feather-plucker. I always keep a cotton-reel in the cage for them to nibble, and also a piece of old mortar, which I think with proper feeding, is a sure preventive of the trouble.

One word about water for these birds; some contend that the Parrot family of birds require no water at all, but I am an advocate for giving them water two or three times a day. I do not, however, let it remain in the cage with them. I knew of an instance of a Red-Crested Cockatoo being kept for five years, without a drop of water, yet he was in perfect health and plumage. But what is one man's medicine is another man's poison, and so with birds. The exception does not make the rule perfect.

As regards the sexing of these birds, different persons have their different ideas, such as judging from the hand the bird takes its food with, etc. But my experience teaches me that the male bird will invariably take to, and be the best of friends with a woman, whilst the hen bird, takes equally well to a man.

I might say, in conclusion, that I have kept other species of Parrots, such as Parrakeets, Peach-faced and Red-faced Love-birds, Cockatiels and Budgerigars, but none afford me so much pleasure as the larger kind.

The Use of Cinnamon Blood in the Norwich Plainhead.

By W. SHEPHERD.

Lecture delivered before the members and friends of the Leicester and Leicestershire Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. on May 19.

At the conclusion of the ordinary business of the meeting, at which Mr. Gibbons presided, Mr. Shepherd delivered the following lecture, which was listened to with keen interest:—

There is no subject connected with cage birds that I feel I could not do fuller justice to and with which I could not deal more confidently than this one. My experience, covering a number of years, teaches me that the more one meddles with cinnamon blood the more perplexing and intricate the problem becomes. Through ill-luck in inbreeding, I have not been able to carry out my experiments with this cross as far as I could have liked; still I have seen enough to justify my saying that with judicious mating there is something to be gained by it.

I know I am treading on very debatable ground. Some fanciers I have mentioned the matter to simply ridicule the idea. I do not wish to dogmatise, but give credit to every one for having his own opinion; I can tell you, however, that it would take a lot to shake my own convictions on the matter.

How the "Dun" was Produced.

I will deal with the subject as briefly and as concisely as possible so as to allow plenty of time for discussion. Many here have probably carried their investigations further than I have. When and where the cinnamon feathers are likely to turn up in your stock are sides of the matter which I do not intend to touch upon any more than is absolutely necessary. It is the blood you require without the feather; and the latter you can bring back at any time, should you so desire. That old and esteemed fancier and judge, Mr. Bexson, was the first, I believe, to introduce the cinnamon Canary, or "Dun," as it was then called, to the Fancy. It was bred, as we are led to understand, from a cross with the now nearly extinct London Fancy and the Lizard.

Those of you who remember the beautiful quality of the London Fancy of 20 years ago can readily understand why the advice to use the "dun" blood became at that time a tip for getting quality. Whether the modern cinnamon is as good for crossing purposes remains an open question. Personally, I think it is better. It is close on 20 years now since I first heard of this cross. I well remember an old and esteemed fancier who, slightly elevated in his own opinions and consequently tongue-looseued, wished to put me on the royal road for breeding winners.

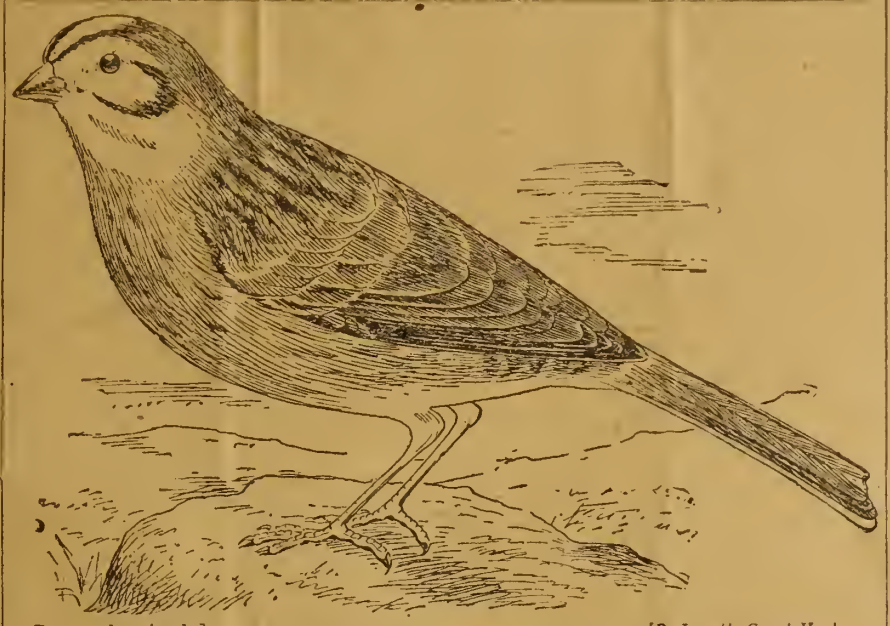
Much of the information imparted for my benefit I afterwards found to be, in the main, reliable. To him it was a panacea for every fault in a Norwich Plainhead.

Pairing for Cinnamon Norwich.

I cannot go so far as to say that, gentlemen. In the first place the fancier about to introduce this cross naturally wishes to know what he will lose and what he will gain. Before I make an attempt to answer these questions it may, perhaps, be as well if I give you my description of an ideal pair of birds for the cross. I will deal with the hen first. Unhesitatingly I say, use the cross on this side. You should do this for the simple reason that you will not then turn up the feather which you do not require, as you are likely to do by using the cock. Purchase the best yellow Cinnamon hen you can lay your hands on. It need not necessarily be a solid one; in fact, I prefer a broken one, especially if bred from solid Cinnamons, as they breed more colour than solids. Let the bird be large with plenty of front. There need be no objection to a bit of body feather, but see that the bird carries no superfluous feather about the head. You must watch this latter above all things. In the eagerness to secure size in the modern Cinnamon a lot of Crest blood has been introduced, and the birds of to-day are not nearly so clean on the head as they might be. I need hardly tell you, in this connection, that nothing looks worse in a Norwich Plainhead than a horned head or one badly guttered behind the eyes. See that your hen has plenty of colour and is cobby.

You will probably have to pay dearly for a hen of this description, although if you use a fine-feathered one you should be able to get it for about half the price you would have to pay for a solid bird. But in any case, don't think any hen will do for the purpose, or you will become disgusted with the whole thing, and put the matter down as a perfect farce. You must apply the same rule as you would if purchasing a Norwich hen—get the best and biggest possible. You will then have something good to work from.

The cock bird should be a variegated buff, again as large as possible. You cannot get too much size. By "size" I mean a big frame (not a mere bundle of feathers), plenty of colour and good, deep markings. Such a bird you will find easier to procure than you will the hen.



The Fountain of Colour.

From this pair you should produce some valuable birds for stock purposes, and if they do not come up exactly as you expected or hoped they would, do not discard them, as it is usually two or three seasons before one usually sees the benefit of this cross. I am speaking now, generally, of course. I have known winners to come from the first cross, but this is the exception rather than the rule. The first birds are usually too heavily variegated, however good they may be elsewhere, to be of much value to anyone on the show bench.

I should not advise you to run these birds into the whole of your stock, but take two or three of the finest, and to the best of your ability pair them with suitable birds from your own stock. Whatever you do, keep a pedigree book, by which you will be able to see to what extent the blood has been of value (if any) to you. Don't be afraid of using the green blood in your stock, fearing to get too much variegation. Remember that green is the fountain of colour. I have usually found the greens of this cross, when bred for good colour, far better in colour than the offspring of the true Norwich Greens. The two bloods seem to blend and bring out that beautiful bronze, glossy green which we so much admire. At the same time the body marks will leave the feathers sooner than in the case of pure Norwich birds, or rather birds that are free from cinnamon blood.

Where cinnamon blood runs in the veins of a bird, there is a tendency to throw clearer than in the case of pure Norwich Canaries. That, I presume, is the reason why our light-mule-breeders play on this blood, to the extent they do. You should therefore breed in a couple of seasons, or rather from your second cross, more clear and lightly-variegated birds than by starting with green or heavily variegated Norwich, at the same time holding well to your colour.

I remember once seeing two yellow, variegated hens, second cross from the cinnamon, and for colour and quality, I think I have never seen their equals. They belonged to one of your own members, but, unfortunately, and owing to a sad mishap, they were lost. I can, therefore, claim colour for the cross without there being too much variegation,

WILD BIRD LIFE.

Birds and the Fruit.

During a long spell of dry weather such as we have just had, some kinds of bird food must be getting scarce. This may somewhat account for the larger insectivorous birds being more troublesome than usual among the fruit crop. Half a dozen Blackbirds will do considerable damage to a plot of strawberries in quite a short time. Unfortunately they are very fond of sampling, and one can see many fine berries with just a beakful taken out of the ripest side. Thrushes are not so destructive, but where Starlings have access to market gardens and cherry plantations, they will do more damage than either of the others. A friend lately told me of someone who covered in the whole of his currant bushes with a properly constructed framework covered with galvanised wire netting. The birds had had several crops, and he was determined to get some for himself. The first year there was no fruit at all, and the second year there was neither fruit nor leaves; the caterpillars had devoured the lot. Had he allowed the birds free access to the trees, excepting just when the fruit was ripening, he would no doubt have had his usual crop. Such instances as these are object lessons in the usefulness of wild birds. However much we may regret the partial loss of our crops, we cannot possibly do without the birds. In some gardens the rose trees have been greatly disfigured by small green caterpillars, which feed at the underside of the leaves, entirely eating them away; so that the trees have the appearance of being ragged and badly clothed.

Wrens Singing at Night.

The common Wrens have been known to sing at night. When they roost in a shrubbery and the light from an open window falls suddenly upon the bush where they roost, they will generally burst out into song.

Heron and Trout.

It is recorded that a Heron has been seen to swallow a trout weighing two pounds. Considering the dimensions of the fish and of the bird this appears almost incredible, but we are frequently noticing smaller birds disposing of objects almost as large in proportion, so that such a feat as that recorded is not impossible to so powerful a bird as a Heron, which disposes of its prey in a wholesale manner.

The Shrike's Victims.

The Redbacked Shrike is strong enough to kill and impale young Thrushes, which fact is constantly being attested.

Diving Birds.

Most diving birds, or birds which live upon fish, catch their prey by means of the beak; but the Osprey is an exception. It plunges into the water from a height clutching the fish with its feet. These birds are exceptionally powerful, and are armed with great talons.

The Extinction of Rare Birds.

Mr. E. K. Robinson, writing in the "Country-Side," tells that he had been looking through the catalogue of a collection of birds' eggs formed by a Mr. W. H. Hurle, and he says:—"Judging by his collection, I should say that he has contributed largely towards the answer to one question of great interest—namely, Why are rare British birds becoming extinct? The Chough, for instance, is one of the most interesting of our disappearing birds; and Mr. Turle's collection contained at least forty-three clutches—over 190 specimens—of the eggs of the Chough, all taken, apparently, within a period of five years in one county! . . . Mr. Turle's collection also contained as many as seventeen eggs of British Peregrine Falcons." That any British collector should have been allowed to possess nearly two hundred eggs of a vanishing British bird, all taken in a few years from one of its last strongholds, is, Mr. Robinson thinks, absurd.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post free, 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

A HIT.

There is one volume the publication of which bird-keepers have annually, for the past five years, awaited with eagerness and pleasure. It is recognised by old fanciers and by young fanciers as absolutely indispensable to everyone who desires to get the maximum of pleasure and success out of the hobby of bird-keeping. That volume is

and this year it has made

THE BIGGEST HIT OF ITS CAREER.

Such Marvellous Value has never before been offered.

See what You Get for Your Money.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

Fully illustrated with sketches from specially-taken photographs, this is the finest article on the art of washing birds ever published. By following the clear instructions, and studying the diagrams, the veriest beginner can successfully compass the washing of his own birds.

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

A contribution from the pen of a well-known judge, which will make the fancier think.

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars or subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.
Directory to Judges of Cage-Birds.
Standards and Scales of Points for Canaries and British Birds.
Useful Postal and other Information.
Directory to the Bird Trade.
Ruled Cash Account, etc.
Six full-page illustrations on art paper, and numerous other drawings.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

See last week's issue for important note.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

If you have any doubt as regards the best and strongest netting, send stamp for sample. Genuine Holly bark bird lime, guaranteed to stand the strongest sun, 1/6 lb., 10d. ½-lb., 6d. ¼-lb. Catchers, send for sample tin and test it, 3d., post free. Drag nets, 20 yards long, 9 feet deep, 12/-; 25 yards, 15/-; loose Lark netting, 15 feet deep, 6d. yard, post free. Bird brace swivels, 2d., post free. Dealers in netting and cages; send stamp for list.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS.

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

for the ensuing catching season by having all your appliances ready? If not I can supply you with everything you require at lowest prices consistent with quality; clap nets, made from finest thread, ¾-in mesh, 3 yds. long, 4/- pair; 4 yds. 5/-, 5 yds. 6/-, 6 yds. 7/-, 7 yds. 8/-, 8 yds. 9/-, 9 yds. 10/-, 10 yds. 11/- per pair, all 5½ ft. deep and 4 ft. fly; all clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted with poles, pegs, lines and everything ready for immediate use; bat folding sparrow nets fitted on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair, ditto fitted on 19 ft. poles, 6/6 pair; loose netting, pure thread, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd., post free; scores of different sizes of nets always in stock; single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to immediately reset itself soon as bird is caught, 1/6 each; self-acting spring net traps, 24 in. long, 1/- each; 18 in. long, 9d. each; carriage 4d. extra; these net traps are totally unlike any other on the market, being much larger, more simple to use, require no pegging down, and will catch and hold unlimited any bird from Wren to Rook; real Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, will not run in sun, and guaranteed to hold a hawk: ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample box 3d.; all post free; pure hemp pull lines, 65 yds. long, specially spun without "snarl," or "back twist," 1/4 each, carriage paid; bird brace swivels, 6d. doz., post free; stave poles, flirt pegs, store cages, and everything required by catchers always in stock; for full printed list send stamp; all the leading professional catchers use my appliances, and will have no others. Everything sent on approval at my risk, either cash or deposit system, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given; last season I publicly asked every disappointed purchaser to smash up the goods I sent him if they did not prove in every way exactly as advertised, and described, and I would return every penny of his money, but not one article was broken up, nor was I ever asked to return a copper; this offer is still open to one and all. (Imitators please copy.) The reason I am so confident as to value of my goods is because no expense is spared to make them as durable as possible, and my workmen are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced Birdcatchers as well, and so know exactly what is required. Thousands of testimonials received and published during past few seasons; don't forget the old name and address; no connection with any other house in the trade.

W. GORE, 131, Gooch Street, BIRMINGHAM.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all times to send my Parrots on four weeks' trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Vfolet Street, Liverpool.

EXETER AND DEVON C.B.S.

The first young bird show took place on July 11th, in the Market Hall. There were twelve classes, and these attracted near 80 entries. The show was quite as good as expected. Yorkshires formed the strongest section, but Norwich buffs and Crest-bred and the Goldfinch classes came out exceedingly well. The Hon. Secretaries, who discharged their duties well, were Messrs. W. A. Cornish and M. S. Adams. The Mayor (Mr. A. Gadd), who is President of the Society, and the Mayoress visited the show during the afternoon, and there was a moderate attendance. The judges, Messrs. J. W. Jackson (Yorkshires) and Mr. J. Rushmere (remainder), made their awards satisfactorily.

GRIMSBY.

In connection with the Charity Gala Show held in the People's Park, Grimsby, on July 9, a few classes were provided for Cage Birds, and considering the unsuitable period of the year, these were well supported. The exhibits were carefully staged and well looked after. They made a very pleasing group. Unfortunately it rained in torrents all the morning, but at mid-day it cleared up, and during the afternoon thousands of people attended. A large number of the visitors paid the extra charge to enter the marquee to see the livestock. Quality was good, the Britishers being excellent. Mr. Sam Lee, the secretary, is a very able organiser, and the gala committee are extremely fortunate in having such a capable official. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

ORMSKIRK O.S.

The Nest Feather Sbow was held in the spacious club room of the "Buck-i'th'-Vine" Hotel, on July 11th, when about 80 birds were staged. It was a very nice sbow, considering that it was a members' show, and tbat the society is comparatively young. Messrs. Tiffin and Mose, the hon. sec. and the treasurer respectively, bad arrangements well in hand, and all the birds were in full view facing the light. The quality of several of tbe Norwich was A1, and tbe leaders in both yellows and huffs were grand lor botb size and type. The Yorkshires were very good, and the yellows particularly stylish and racy. The Buffs were led hy a real beauty, which captured special for second best Canary in show, the special for best going to a varieg. Yellow Norwich plainhead. A very pretty Norwich Green won in the A.O.V. Canary class, and a good-sized young dark Linnet-Canary in the Mule or Hybrid class. There was a fine show of Britishers. Mr. C. Houlton judged, and his decisions were well received.

ACCRINGTON & DISTRICT C.B.S.

The second annual members' First Feather Show was held at the Central Conservative Club, on July 11th. It was not a large show, owing chiefly to many of our members having a poor breeding season. The exhihits totalled 38, many of which will, no douht, he heard of again. The Norwich were the most numerous, and show a great improvement in quality. In the Britisb bird class there were some good exhibits. Where, however, are the Yorkshires, of Charter-street fame? Mr. R. Haworth (Blackhurn) placed the cards, and gave general satisfaction.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The second annual young hird show of the Clapham and District C.B.S., was held on July 11th, in the Avondale Hall, Landor Road, S.W., and proved a gratifying success, 102 exbihits being staged, which shows great progress compared with the society's initial venture last season. The excellent display of birds was nicely arranged in the convenient and well-lighted room at headquarters, and a goodly number of visitors patronised tbe fixture. In the unavoidab'e absence of the popular hon. secretary, Mr. Baker, the duties of show manager devolved upon Mr. A. C. Lucas, who discharged the task with credit. He received valuable help from Mr. W. H. Vale, and the hardworking stewards, Messrs. Askew, Cutting, Gooch, Hathaway, Sandy, Thorpe, and Yeoman. Competition in the Canary section was very keen, the "Champion" Norwich of Miss Turner, and Messrs. Vale, Woolhouse, and Eames, and the Yorkshires of Mr. Hathaway being excellent specimens for botb type and quality. The "Novice," Norwich and Yorkshires were a very warm lot, Messrs. Baker and Gooch, Rogers, Tutty, and Cutting putting down some smart youngsters in the former section, and Messrs. Thorpe, Yeoman, and Wall some Yorkies of excellent length, style and quality. Border Fancies were very strongly in evidence in the A.O.V. class. The hest young Hybrid, a Greenfinch-Canary, shown by Mr. Askew, is a hird of considerable promise. The British hirds were a good and interesting lot. Messrs. Francis, Sandy, Vale, Cutting, Hathaway, Saxton, Askew, and others making a close fight of it for the prizes, with very nice specimens, conspicuously well staged. The special for best Canary shown by a local member fell to Mr. Thorpe, with a grand wing-marked Yorkie, a lengthy finely drawn, neat, and altogetber promising "hahy"—a good one for a first-year novice. Other winners of specials were Messrs. Woolhouse, Hathaway, Baker and Gooch, Thorpe, Askew and Francis. Mr. G. E. Weston judged.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

The third table show was held on July 8th at Lockhart's Cafe, Grainger-street, Newcastle. There was a good muster of fanciers present, and the hirds were much better than on the two previous occasions both as regards numbers and quality. The walking-stick given by the secretary for most points over the three shows was won by Mr. Ellwood with 34 points, whilst Mr. Davison closely followed with 33, and Mr. Grieve with 26. Our chairman, Mr. J. Slack, judged, and everyone was pleased with bis awards.

During judging a meeting was held to allot patronage for autumn shows; challenge cup for best young hird bred by a member; Gateshead judge, Mr. H. W. Battye; novice competition (classes guaranteed by members or club); medal for best bird (no member can win more than one medal in one season), and 10s. for most points, 5s. second, 2s. 6d. third, and 2s. 6d. fourth. South Shields, Newcastle, Blaydon, Wallsend, Jarrow, and Gateshead. Open competition: gold medal most points, gold centre silver medal second, with three nominated birds at the following shows: Newcastle, South Shields, Blaydon, Wallsend, and Sunderland. The secretary was instructed to write Carlisle, and enquire who is their judge and what their classification, and if their reply is satisfactory Carlisle will he the other selected.—T. C. PRESTON O.S.

The annual First Feather Show was held on July 11th, in the rooms of the Preston Scientific Society. The entries were not as numerous as in the previous year, there heing 86 on that occasion and only 66 on this. But the exhibits on the whole were of exceptionally high quality. Mr. T. Edwards (Burnley) officiated as judge, and the Rev. S. E. Collinson as steward.

POPLAR C.B.S.

A very nice little show indeed was the first venture of the Poplar C.B.S., which was held in the Newby Place Schoolroom, on July 11th. The entries totalled 122, and the quality was considerably above the average of initial attempts. The room had heen tastefully decorated with flowers and foliage hy some of the members' wives, and presented a very pleasing appearance. Of the Norwich the Yellows were much the hest, and to them le'l both the specials, that for the hest being taken hy a sweet-bodied yellow of Mr. Cowles, which was put down in the pink of condition, and that for the second hest by another yellow, owned hy Mr. P. Hunt, a better headed hird, hut lacking the hloom of the first named. Yorkshires were a very strong lot, especially the Variegateds, which the committee decided at the last moment to divide into two classes. The special winners of Messrs. T. G. Hunt and A. Plumb were especially good, and other very typical hirds were staged by Messrs. Cook, Lowrie, Hammond, Depradines, and Dearing. Mr. J. Hunt held a strong hand in Crests and Crest-hreds, and annexed both the specials in this section. Linnets made a nice show, and had Mr. Priseman's bird been more steady, it would doubtless have secured the special over Mr. Kidman's; the latter had it in shape and steadiness, whilst Mr. Priseman's was the hest in markings and co'our. A very finely grown, well plumaged young Jay won first in the A.O.S. class. The result of this show should encourage our Poplar friends to still greater efforts, as the show was a distinct success, and spoke volumes as to the keenness and enthusiasm of the members. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NOR. CL. (12): 1, sp., Cowles, a little gem, fails slightly in head; 2, P. Hunt, grand shape, hut past his best in feather, should moult out well; 3, c, Ash, shapely, nice feathered huff; vhc, Hammond; hc, Boyson. VARIEG. CAMBRIDGE C.B.S.

A young bird show was held on July 11, when, along with the British Bird classes, about 100 birds were judged hy Mr. Harrison (St. Ives). Both in numbers and quality, the show surpassed any previously held by the society at this time of the year. The medal for best young bird was awarded to Mr. Ison with a clear yellow Norwich, while the special for best Britisher fell to Mr. Williams, with a good Goldfinch. The show was excellently arranged by Mr. Moore (the hon. sec.), and his assistant (Mr. Gifford). During the afternoon a large number of fanciers spent an enjoyable time inspecting the birds. The awards were as follows:—

GLASGOW & WEST OF SCOTLAND N.M.B. AND F.B.C.

Our First Feather Show was held at Glasgow on July 11th, and although many of our members are shopkeepers, and not a few are on holiday, the show was an advance on any previously held, both in quality and quantity. The judges, Messrs. G. McPhaill and J. L. Burnett, expressed pleasure at the quality of the birds, and experienced no little difficulty in arriving at their awards, the competition being so keen. There were in all 17 classes.

NORWICH AMATEUR C.B.A.

The annual First Feather Show was held on June 27th at St. Peter's Hall. Taking into consideration the bad season that has been experienced there was a fair number of entries, and some of the birds showed promising qualities. In the clear yellows the prize winner was considered the best specimen in the show. The huffs were present in large numbers, and there was a fair display of evenly-marked; among the ticked yellows and buffs, too, were many good birds. There was a very large number of entries for the variegated buff class in which were to be seen many useful and good stock birds. Mr. W. Thompson won the prize for the best Plainhead, and Mr. A. Thompson for the best Crest. Mr. J. Carlton was the most successful exhibitor, and was awarded the silver medal. The judges were Messrs. S. Roberts and A. Woollard. The secretary, Mr. E. Fox, had the arrangements well in hand, and is deserving of much praise.

MANSFIELD AND WOODHOUSE.

This annual fixture took place on July 14th. The entries were smaller than we are in the habit of seeing, owing in some measure to the fact that hereabouts the moulting season has commenced very early, and birds were not therefore in condition for competition. Mr. Money, the courteous secretary, was in his usual place, doing all in his power to make the show a success. Catalogues were got out and cards put up in his usual smart way. The judge was Mr. W. Vardy, and his awards gave satisfaction. Mr. W. Roslyn represented the C.B.U.

CHESTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Our annual nest feather show was held on July 1st at The Boot Inn, Eastgate-row, N. There were about 40 birds staged; this was not quite so many as last year, but the quality of the exhibits was good, notably the Norwich shown by Mr. Braeegirdle, his clear Yellow being considered the best bird in show. Mr. A. Wellings placed the cards.

ATTERCLIFFE & DISTRICT C.B.S.

The annual Nest Feather Show was held on July 4th in the Attercliffe Vestry Hall. Owing to the very poor season most of our members have had there were only about one hundred birds staged, but these were of the highest quality. The judges were Messrs. H. Taylor and F. WIGAN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual show of Canaries and Mules in their nest feather held at the Adelphi Inn, Harrogate-street, on July 11th. The entries were not so good as usual, as some of the members have had a very poor breeding season. Mr. S. Andrews (Widnes) judged, and gave every satisfaction. About 40 birds were staged, the best of which were to be found among the Norwich. Mr. Dyer won special for best bird in open classes, and Mr. H. Young for best in novice classes. The show was visited by quite a large number of local fanciers, and all passed off well.

GWENNAP.

In connection with the Gwennap Horticultural Society the annual show of cage birds (under C.B.U. Rules) was held on July 16th at Trevinee, where nearly 100 birds were staged. Considering the time of the year, the quality of the exhibits was good throughout. Mr. F. Collins made the greatest number of points, 56, but having won the points special two years in succession, he was not allowed to receive it this year, so it passed to Mr. J. Davies, with 25 points. The weather was very bad all day, which affected the gate considerably. The stewards did their work well, and are deserving of much credit. Mr. W. Medlyn (Falmouth) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

WEST BROMWICH & DIST. C.B.S.

The nest feather first annual show was held on July 4th at the Dartmouth Hotel. The birds were nicely staged in good time, the indefatigable secretary, Mr. T. Duffield, and the officials having matters well in hand. Mr. Duffield is the right man in the right place. For a first attempt the members deserve much praise, about 60 specimens being tabled for competition. Some of the classes contained very typical birds. Mr. A. Paddock, King's Heath, judged, and his awards met with universal satisfaction. He also gave a silver medal which was won by a Norwich bred by Mr. Russell.

NOR. CL. YELL.: 1, spl, Russell, typical specimen, lovely quality, good head and neck, well across perch. BUFF: 1, Russell, good size and quality feather, very typical. FALMOUTH AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

A first feather show (including British and Foreign birds) was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Falmouth, on July 8th. Mr. J. T. Trerise judged, and his awards gave satisfaction. The show was well patronised by fanciers. A framed oil painting, presented by Mr. Thos. Burton, was won by Mr. W. J. Medlin, with twelve entries, scoring 61 points. The judge expressed a high opinion of the exhibits, of which there were 63 in all. They were pronounced to be far in advance in quality of those of former shows. The Fancy is therefore making rapid strides in the "Cornish Riviera." Altogether the show was a great success.

NOR. CL. YELL.—1, Cooper, beautiful shape, nice wing carriage, good head, and chest, wins easily; 2 and 3, Medlin, really fine birds, shapely, and full of quality and colour. BUFF: 1 and 2, Medlin, both clinkers, well up in quality, full of colour; 3, vhc, Cooper, 3, shapely and stylish; hc, Barnicoat. TKD., ETC.: 1, 2, 3, Medlin, trio of the best three birds in show, beautifully staged, full of quality and substance, very shapely, should be heard of again; vhc, Cooper; hc, Barnicoat. c, Gosling. YORKS. YELL.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Tiddy and Son, three good Yorkies, well up on leg, nice quality; hc, Gosling. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Tiddy and Son, same quality as Yellows, Buffs slightly better heads, will improve after moult; vhc, Webb; he, Gosling. TKD., ETC.: 1, Webb, beautiful Cinnamon marked buff, ought to be heard of later; 2, Gosling, another fine Yorkie. CINN. YELL.: 1 and 3, Medlin, winner possesses good head and wing carriage; 3, very nice bird; 2, Burton, lovely feather and quality, splendid colour. BUFF: 1 and 2, Medlin, winner deserves place, good quality throughout; 2, another good one; 3, vhc and he, Burton, full of quality. A.O.V.: 1, Medlin; 2, Barnicoat; 3, Richards. GOLDFINCH: 1, Legassick, magnificent bird, beautiful feather, nice square blaze, wins easily; 2, Cox, nice bars and buttons; 3, Cooper, grand bird, good colour. SMALL BRIT.: 1 and vhc, Burton, really nice Bullfinch, fine dense-coloured cap, grand wing bars, shapely and very steady; 2, Barnicoat, a good Bramb'finch, ought to improve after moult. FOR.; 1, 3, vhc, he and c, Cox; 2, Opie.—Thos. Burton.

DEAL, WALMER & DISTRICT F.A.

An open radius show was held on July 15th and 16th; the quality of the cage birds entered was excellent. The secretaries, Messrs. M M Avis and W. B Thompson, did their work well, and carried out the arrangements to a successful issue. Mr G. H. Billett (attending, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

NOR. (5): 2, 3, Mrs. Wood; 4, vhc, hc, Thompson. YORKS. (5): 2, hc, Chapman; 3, vhc, Thompson; 4, Franklin. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 2, Sharpe, 4, Franklin. FOR. (3): 2, Franklin; 3, Thompson, 4, Prescott. LOCAL MEMBERS' CLASS (8): 2, 3, vhc, Thompson; 4, vhc, Mrs. Wood. Canaries 60, 67, 69, 70, 71, 72, and 74 were examined.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

A members' Nest Feather Show was held at Crown Hotel, Station-street, on July 15th. Mr J H. Roe judged. Unfortunately the exhibits of Messrs. Burke and Coton were delivered into the wrong room, and were not found until the evening. Had these birds faced the judge, it is probable the awards would have been placed differently in the Yorkshire section. Mr. A. J. Smith won special for best bird in show, with a grand Crest.

NOR. CL. YELL.: 1, 2, Eckersley; 3, vhc, Broadhurst. BUFF: 1, 3, Broadhurst; 2, vhc, Eckersley, he, Marlow. TKD., ETC., YELL.; 1, spl, 2, Eckersley; 3, Broadhurst. NOVICE: 1, 2, 3, Marlow. SELL.: Two firsts, Dipple.—J. H de Maillet, Hon. Sec.

WALTHAMSTOW F.A.

The first feather show of the Walthamstow F.A., which was held in the Workmen's Hall, on July 11th, was not the success which had been expected, owing to several of the most prominent members being from home, and unable to send their birds. Still, if entries were poor the quality was quite the best we have seen at a Walthamstow fixture. Mr. Marley put down an exceptionally strong team, and won the special for best Norwich and best bird in the show with a most charming yellow. The second special fell to a very handsome crest, shown by Mr. Farmer, a rare headed bird, but unfortunately he has a stiff back claw. The arrangements were well carried out by Messrs. Handscombe, Voss, Andrews, Smith, Jack, Marley, Beresford, and Rolph. Messrs. Forse and Stone, the secretaries, were unfortunately not able to assist owing to absence from home. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NOR. YELL.: (4), 1, 2, and two specials, Marley, magnificent colour and quality, nice shape; 3, sp., Williamson, nice colour and quality, not so chubby; vhc, Handscombe. BUFF (5): 1, 2, Marley, neat and chubby, nice feather and colour; 3, he, Williamson, good shape and feather, bad lost a few feathers over beak; he, Williamson. MKD. YELL. (5): 1, 2, Billingsley, neck ticked, and eye marked, two gems for shape and quality, winner the tightest in feather; 3, Marley, ticked head, capital shape, beaten in feather; vhc, sp., Williamson; hc, Handscombe. BUFF (5): 7, Billingsley, eye ticked, beautiful shape, nice quality; 2, 3, Williamson, rump ticked, nice body shape, beaten in head; 3rd lovely eye ticked, set down in tail, very promising; vhc, Marley; he, Handscombe. YORKS (4): 1, vhc, Bennett, grand shaped buff, good head, nice style and feather; 2, 3, Burbidge, shapely yellows, hardly so good in head. CREST (3): 1, 3, sp., Farmer, grand length and droop, beautiful centre, radiates well all-round; 2, Watchem, very neat wing marked, nice quality. C.B. (3): 1, 2, Farmer, lovely yellow green, rare shape and quality; 3, variegated, more feather, but hardly the quality or shape; 3, Watchem, another nice green. GOLD, or BULL. (4): 1, vhc, Handscombe, very neat Bullie hen, capital shape, and well marked; 2, Burbidge, nice coloured Bullie, fails shape; 3, Marley GREENFINCH, ETC. (5): 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, sp., Marley; 1st, Greenfinch, a wonderfully fine bird for quality and colour, grand shape, 2nd, charming linnet 3rd, very sweet Siskin.

HAMPSTEAD, HIGHGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The members held their first show of young stock and British and foreign birds at Headquarters, Spencer Hall, on July 11. The entry was an excellent one, about 140 exhibits being staged. Mr. W. Reynolds, the hon. secretary, with his assistant, Mr. Neal, had made every arrangement for the comfort of the exhibits, and the convenience of exhibitors. The cages were staged at a convenient height to view comfortably, and the staging was prettily draped, the liberal supply of flowers and pot plants lending much charm and colour to the whole. About 30 special prizes were awarded, and the competition was generally keen. Norwich and Yorkshires held pride of numbers, and some excellent specimens were on view. The British birds, too, were of high merit. In the Champion classes, Yorkshires were conspicuous by their absence, but the Novices came up well. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged. In the evening the special prizes were presented by Mr. Coun. Solomon (St. Pancras).

TWITTERINGS.

The advice you gave me anent my Canaries answered very well indeed, writes Mrs. A. M. Collins (Thornton Heath).

I have had a splendid year, writes Mr. G. B. Leclair (Leytonstone), and I may say that CAGE BIRDS is the only journal I advertised in.

We are having a "question and reply" night on August 12th, write Messrs. Williams and Easby, the hon. secs. of the Hartlepools C.B.S.

I am very pleased with the CAGE BIRDS CHART (No. 8, Norwich Canary) which you sent me a short time ago, writes Mr. F. G. Lester (Chelsea, S.W.)

Allow me to say how very interesting, writes Mrs. M. J. Bright (Bideford), CAGE BIRDS is to us each week. We look forward to its delivery each Friday.

My advertisement in your paper, writes Mr. F. Miles (Watergate, Wight), proved all that could be desired. CAGE BIRDS is before any other paper for advertising in.

At the close of the judging at our Nest Feather show, held on July 18th, writes Mr. Ed. Carlisle, hon. sec. of the Barnsley and Dis. C.B.S., we made two new members.

A pair of pure white Sparrows, it is reported, have made their appearance in the Willesden Infirmary grounds, and have been subjected to a good deal of ill-treatment by other Sparrows.

Mr. A. E. Bishop, of Worcester, writes Mr. P. Philpot (Guildford), has bought up the whole of my breeding stock, including the winners at Reading, Weybridge, Reigate, and Guildford.

I should like to thank the Rev. C. D. Farrar, writes Mr. John Hocking (Swansea), for his very original and breezy articles, entitled "Through a Birdroom Window," now appearing in the columns of CAGE BIRDS.

We are advised by the sec. of the Eagle Cage Bird Society that a show of Belgian Canaries is to be held on August 9th, at the headquarters of that society, "La Maison Blance," 34, Pelican Street, Antwerp. A capital exhibition is anticipated.

The Nest Feather show of the Northern Yorkshire C.C. will be held on Saturday, July 25th, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, the hon. sec., in the Co-operative Hall, Newgate Street (entrance, Darn Crook). The judge is Mr. J. Shepherd. We anticipate a record entry.

We have not fixed our date for the open show yet, writes Mr. C. J. Robinson, hon. sec. of the Hanley and Dis. C.B.S. We are thinking of trying a radius show for one season to see if we can get a bit of ready money, as all our open shows have resulted in financial loss.

Through pressure of business I have been compelled, writes Mr. W. R. Murrell, to resign the secretaryship of the Spalding F.A. All correspondence in connection with the society should now be addressed to Messrs. Elviss and Mouncey, Station House, Spalding.

We hold our First Feather show on July 25th, writes Mr. D. Campbell, sec. of the Kirkintilloch C.B.S., when we expect to see some good birds exhibited. We invite the Glasgow fanciers to come and have a look round. Mr. Hugh Morcland (Falkirk), judges.

Please stop my advertisement of bird nests, writes Mr. James F. Dewar (Edinburgh), as season is finished. I have sold 47 gross, which I consider very satisfactory, and fully a third more than in any previous season. CAGE BIRDS, I may say, was the only paper I advertised in.

The following gentlemen have agreed to judge at the annual show on September 19th, writes Mr. Thos. Smith, sec. of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A.: Messrs. A. Clark (Rutherglen), A. Hamilton (Caldercruix), J. Kean (Edinburgh), and J. Watson (Glasgow).

The local fanciers of Buckhaven and district have decided to hold an open show on November 21st, writes Mr. Lamrie, the show sec. Mr. A. Leslie (Thornton), will judge the Scotch Fancy, and Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside), the Norwich and Border Fancy Canaries, and the British and Foreign Birds.

Messrs. A. J. Slade, W. Povey, A. Atteridge, T. A. Norris, and W. Edmonds have been elected members of the Dulwich O.S., writes Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, the hon secretaries. Six silver rose bowls have been kindly given for best birds in the various sections at our forthcoming open show. Mr. Wilmot has contributed three of them, and Messrs. Woolhouse, Rogers, and a friend, the other three. Mr. Butler has promised a two-guinea casket of scent for best bird exhibited by a lady.

It looks as though the House Sparrows were beginning to seek fresh quarters, out of the reach of Sparrow Clubs and the like, for two Sparrows, it is said, have begun to build their nests in a tug-boat at Rye Harbour. During last week the tug was absent from the harbour for two days, but when it returned the birds resumed their nest-building.

The following gentlemen have consented, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, sec. of the Loanhead and Dis. C.B.S., to judge at our second annual show, to be held on October 10th. For Scotch Fancies, Mr. Adam Melrose (Galashiels), for Border Fancies, Messrs. Bennet and Hardie, and for Norwich, Mules and British, Mr. James Winter (Edinburgh). The cup is for the Scotch Fancy section.

We intend holding our Young Bird Show on July 29th, in the "Eureka Hotel," Frederick Street, when Mr. John Gilhespy will place the cards, writes Mr. Wm. Duke, hon. sec. of the Shields C.B.S. We have three specials, viz., for most entries, for most points in classes 1, 2, 3, 4, and for best bird in the last five classes. We have 17 classes in all—Canaries, 1 Mule or Hybrid, and 4 British and Foreign bird classes.

At our last meeting we decided to have two members' shows, writes Mr. Hy. Dobson, hon. sec. of the Seaham Harbour and Dis. C.B.A., one on November 14th and the other on November 28th. For the convenience of those of our members who reside at Ryhope, we shall hold the latter show at that place. We have secured the services of Mr. R. S. Bewick (Durham), as judge at one of the shows, and are hoping Mr. E. Tunkard (Seaham), will judge at the other.

At a meeting recently convened by the Kent Fruit Growers' Association for the purpose of discussing the caterpillar pest, it was unanimously agreed that a serious mistake is made by those who destroy birds so ruthlessly. The good done by insectivorous birds of all species was freely acknowledged. It was stated, too, that fruit growers in some districts were paying a heavy toll to-day in the shape of crops which had been attacked and destroyed by the caterpillar.

I had a copy of CAGE BIRDS sent to me this week (the first one for eighteen months), writes Lance-Corpl. T. Smith, The Buffs, O.R.C., South Africa. I always took it in civil life (never was without it), and it won't be my fault if I am without it now. It is so very interesting. It reminds one when abroad of many pleasant rambles taken at home, and which I live in hope of enjoying again. I consider CAGE BIRDS by far the best paper published at the present time about birds, and it is invaluable to fanciers and novices.

[We regret that owing to the pressure of First Feather Show Reports, a deal of interesting matter has had to be held over until next week.]

We notice that Mr. W. H. Gill, the hon. sec. of the Douglas and Isle of Man C.B.S., has published a letter in a local contemporary which he has headed "A plea for our local wild British birds." He deplores the decrease in the number of Goldfinches, which at one time were so plentiful on the Island, and regrets the possibility of their becoming extinct, like the Bullfinch. The host of soft-bills and rare birds, too, have their enemies in the way of egg-collectors, nest-raiding being a hobby which he can never understand. The writer's dominant plea is for the safeguarding of birds at certain times of the year, and the establishment of a definite time for the catching of wild birds.

In the notice which appeared in our columns last week of the death of Mr. D. Hope, chairman of the City of Hull C.B.S., we omitted to give the names of those who attended the funeral. These included among others, Mr. and Mrs. Calam, Mr. Foster and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Raglan, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Cresby, Mr. and Mrs. Moore, sen., Mr. and Mrs. Moore, jun. (of the Grimsby and Dis. O.S.), Mr. and Mrs. Sellers, Mr. and Mrs. Oliff, Messrs. Stubbs, Harland, Perkins, Oliver, Pepper, E. R. Ridley, Longhorn, Clews, Barwick, Kling, Crossley, Castle, Whitehead, and Walker. We have also received obituary notices from Messrs. F. F. Potter, hon. sec. of the City of Hull C.B.S., and E. W. Oliver.

We have seen many sizes and various colours of eggs produced from Norwich Canaries this breeding season, writes "J.E.N." in the "Eastern Evening News," some of which have been extraordinarily large, whilst others have been exceptionally small. Complaints have been rife as to the exceedingly small nest of eggs. Now it is my pleasure to record a beautiful nest of eggs—nine in number. A popular Norwich City football player, not being able to resist the fascination of Canary breeding, started this season with a few birds from a noted Crest-breeder, and he has "scored" well—seven youngsters in one round. The hen laid eggs on nine successive mornings, but the anxious footballer unfortunately broke two. However, luck is with him, for it is stated they are young birds that he may well be proud of. I may add they have been made up into two nests—a three and a four, two pairs bringing them up.

Winners of Many Prizes.

I hear, writes a local correspondent, that Mr. J. B. Tasker (Skelmersdale), who is so well known locally as a breeder and exhibitor of Norwich Plainheads, and who figured recently as a successful vocalist, has been adding two more prizes to the silver cup he won several weeks ago—a silver tea-pot and a case of silver fish knives and forks. It was not a case of only one, two, or three competitors in the class, but the full "birdie" number sang on each occasion. When the open season commences with birds, I hope to see Mr. Tasker's birds adding to his numerous prizes. That successful "Yorkie" breeder and exhibitor, Mr. R. Gardner (Ormskirk), is also to the front in the way of prizes, other than in the "birdie" line, his prowess in the literary line having won him a substantial money prize in a leading periodical. Owing to the satisfaction given on previous occasions, Mr. Richard Hunter (Ormskirk), has again been appointed judge of the cage bird section of the Anghton and Dis. H.S. This show is always looked forward to with keen interest by local fanciers around Ormskirk and District.

Wandering Budgerigars.

Mr. Dunston, of 29, St. John's Road, Weston, Bath, had the misfortune to lose a pair of green Budgerigars from their cage last week. They were last seen flying about St. Michael's cemetery. Observers, please don't shoot in mistake for a rara avis.

To Preserve Humming Birds.

Speaking recently before the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Importation of Plumage Prohibition Bill, Lord Stanmore stated that he had heard of an order coming to Trinidad from New York for 10,000 Humming Birds. In order to stop that sort of traffic he suggested a duty on the skins of rare and beautiful birds, believing that would have an immediate effect in preserving the various species.

Numerical Strength of Sparrows

A census of birds within an area covering a narrow strip of country 428 miles long, was recently taken in Illinois, America. The number of birds found totalled 7,740, being 645 to the square mile. No less than 85 species were represented, and of the whole number 18 per cent. were English Sparrows. On this basis the bird population of the State is computed to be 30 millions, of which the Sparrows would account for 5½ millions, or about the same as the human population of London.

Southern Yorkshire Canary Club.

The patronage of the above club has been allotted to the following shows, Cardiff and Bournemouth being subject to the appointment of judges:—Champion Section: Cup Competition, Cambridge, Oct. 22nd and 23rd, judge, Mr. J. Spreading Birdie Education.

It has been suggested to the London County Council that pictorial representations and printed descriptions of the various species of birds in the aviaries and other parts of the London parks would not come amiss to many who are not well-versed in bird-law. The suggestion is still under their consideration.

Scottish Norwich Plainhead C.C.

Will members please note that subscriptions for 1908 are now due, and should be forwarded to me without delay, to ensure their names being included in the membership list. Breeders of the Norwich Plainhead in Scotland should join, and assist in further popularising the bird of colour. A number of valuable prizes will be competed for during the coming show season, and the International Contest with the Plainhead Club of England will take place at Glasgow this year. All particulars may be had from me.—J. BROWN, sec., 97, Petershill Road, Glasgow.

A Favourite Yellow Bunting.

I beg to thank you, writes Mr. T. H. Inman (Bradford), for so kindly reproducing in last week's issue of your interesting and instructive journal the picture of my Yellow Bunting. I may say he was the steadiest Bunting I have ever had or even seen. Out of the eight or nine times shown in open classes, he did very well. I could do almost anything with him—he was so tame. I sent him away in the country a short time since to have a good moult, but I am sorry to say he is dead. Still, I have another one which I think will moult out better with good luck. I might say I have gone in this time for a few Hybrids (British and Canary). My Bullfinch hens have laid well, but have produced no good eggs as yet. I have had eggs (two and three nests each) from Greenie-Bullie, Redpoll-Bullie, Goldie-Bullie, and Chaffinch-Canary. I have also had two Linnets, that have run three very large Yorkshire hens, and I have three Mules already taken away from, and four still in the nest. Another nest is due this week. I have had altogether a dozen Linnet Mules hatched. So I don't think I have done very badly. I have had a Bullie hen, which paired to a Goldfinch, and I shall know this week-end whether there are any good ones, or not. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success. I have been a reader of it almost from its commencement, and have been a fancier for practically all my life.

Back to Town.

Mr. R. A. Mills, a member of the Welsh Cage Bird Club, has left Brecon for London, his native town, writes Mr. D. H. Tedstone. Mr. Mills has only heen in the Fancy about two years. This season he has taken up the Border Fancy and left Brecon with a few pairs of very good stock. I hope that now he has come to town a few good brother fanciers will look him up. I have not the least doubt but that he will join one of the clubs in the district. His address is 42, Longmead Road, Upper Tooting, S.W. Personally, I have lost a friend whom I respect, and I feel sure that we have lost a very promising member; hut our loss will be London's gain, and we wish him every success in the future. Mrs. Mills, too, is a keen fancier.

The Farmer's Friend.

The gentle Turtle Doves are friends to the farmer. We constantly notice them now settling among the growing corn. There is no corn there yet for them to eat, so it is only reasonable to suppose they are seeking the seeds of wild plants. At this time of the year if the crop of a Dove is opened it will generally be found full of tiny hlack seeds somewhat resembling rape. This is the seed of a straggling plant with small purple blossoms. In some districts it grows so thickly among the corn, taking away all the moisture from the roots, that the half-starved stalks fail to grow good ears of corn, and thus a thin crop is the result. Turtle Doves are always interesting birds. They have a very graceful gliding flight, and when settling they expand the feathers of the tail, showing a considerahle portion of white. They are now generally seen in pairs, or the parents with one or two of their young. They only rear one brood in the year.

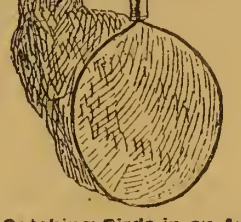
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, birdroom or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 225.

A NET FOR CATCHING BIRDS IN AN AVIARY.

Sent by Harry Midgley, Newmillerdam, Nr. Wakefield.

I enclose a sketch of a net which is very useful for catching birds in an aviary. It is made as follows. First obtain a cane stick about 9 ins. long, and make a hole about 3 ins. down it. Then get a piece of cago wire 28½ ins. long, bend this into a 7½-in. circle. Start bending at about 3 ins. from the end of wire. After bending it you will find that there will be about another 3 ins. left. Twist these two ends together, and push them down the hole in the stick. All that is required now is some fine netting. This can be fastened on the wire ring with cotton, and when complete forms the net. To finish, lap some small wire round the top end of the stick. This keeps the wire from pulling out of the stick, and also helps to keep the stick from splitting. When caught in the net birds are not as frightened as when caught in the hand.—HARRY MIDGLEY.

No. 226.

A HANDY SEED HOPPER.

Sent by F. W. Carver, 1, Bloomfield Place, Holborn Street, Woodhouse Street, Leeds.

I enclose sketch of a seed hopper, which I am using. When filled, it will last two birds for four days, without any fear of their going short of food. The side view shows the partition of the shoot, the drop, and the slanting bottom to throw the seed to the cage front. The front of the hopper is a piece of glass slotted in, to be taken out when one wishes to clean the hopper. It can be made of tin or wood.—F. W. CARVER.

SINGING CONTESTS.

SKINNINGROVE.

Open competition held at Marsk on July 11, when twelve birds competed for silver-plated teapot and copper kettle. 1, Havelock: 291 changes; 2, Jackson and Hodge; Havelock's bird put in some splendid breaks and won bands down. Judge, Mr. F. Canby. —M. DOBSON, secretary.

LEEDS.

Linnet Contest held at King's Head, Shannon Street, on July 11, when the judge, Mr. T. Summers, made the following awards:—1, Hollingworth; 2, 3, Stead. Twenty birds sang. Another contest on July 12, when 25 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Cooper and Hardcastle:—1, Hollingworth; 2, Stead; 3, Sissons.—WILSON NAYLOR, hon. sec.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, on July 18th, when 21 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Summers and Clark. 1st, Hollingworth; 2nd and 3rd, Stead. Also on July 19th when 25 birds sang. Judges, Messrs. Summers and Cooper. 1st and 3rd, Stead; 2nd, Crowther.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Contest held July 19th, when 16 birds were hung up. Result: 1st, Towers; 2nd, Stead; 3rd, Sissons. Judges, Messrs. Jackson, Jennings, and Allen.—W. DEAN, Sec.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds." 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE. Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Insects and a Poser.

"AVIS."—The very best thing under the circumstances is to dissolve one ounce of camphor in half a pint of methylated spirit, and paint with it two or three times a week about the joints, corners and any crack or crevice about the cage, and on the end of perches. Use a small camel hair brush for the purpose. You will find this extremely fatal to both mites and lice, but it spoils the varnish on cages, if they happen to be done with a spirit varnish. This, however, is easily remedied by revarnishing after the pest is thoroughly eradicated. My own opinion of the fluid you mention is that it is several streets behind the above solution for effectiveness. For baths you may add a small teaspoonful of essence of quassia to a quart of water, or infuse a dessertspoonful of chips in a pint of boiling water; allow it to stand until cold, strain off the clear liquid, add an equal quantity of water, and use for the bath. It is quite possible the growing baldness on the youngster's head is due to insects. Add fifteen drops of chemical food to the water for a week or two. As to whether green or marked birds are really stronger than clears, it is too large a question to tackle here. Many people appear to think they are, and some evidence certainly seems to point in that direction, but it may, after all, be simply a coincidence. Clear birds being small in numbers compared with green and marked ones, every death or illness amongst them is more noticeable. Glad to hear of your great success by following advice given in CAGE BIRDS.

Hind Claw Coming Forward.

No Name.—If the claw has been forward some time you will have to put on a rubber band for a time. Make this by cutting off about an eighth of an inch of the tube of a feeding bottle. Bathe foot for a minute or two in warm water, and allow the bands to lie in the water meanwhile. Then dry them, and, holding the three front claws altogether, place the band over them, and roll it up on to the shank of the leg along the back of which you will be holding the hind claw. When you have the band nearly as far up the leg as the end of the claw, and the hind claw enclosed with it, leave it there, and serve the other foot the same. Put in cage small, round perches, about as thick as a lead pencil. In about a week you may remove the bands, but leave in the thin perches a few weeks longer. If the claws have only just begun to come forward, you will probably find the thin perches sufficient to cure, and may dispense with the bands, which are certainly a great trouble for a novice to put on.

Roller Making Wheezy Noise.

Janet.—Am afraid the bird is in a bad way, otherwise it must be in a very unsuitable position. Is its cage kept in such a position that it is exposed to a draught from a window that is perhaps only opened during warm weather? If so, this must be remedied, and the bird placed where it will be quite free from draughts at all times. After attending to this point give the bird a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five drops of sherry mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the intervening days add to its drinking water twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus. Shake well together when giving it. Give a spray or two of chickweed daily.

What Birds are They?

Miller.—(1). This is evidently the Violet-eared Waxbill, a beautiful African species. This makes a good exhibition bird, and likely to be in the money if in condition. (2) The description is not sufficiently complete, but I am of the opinion it is a Quail Finch. If you will describe the bird a little more minutely, I will give you a definite reply in next issue.

About Colour-feeding.

K G C.—1. I really could not tell you how long a pound of colour-food would last four birds. I have no time to acquire statistics of this kind. Besides, all birds are not given the pepper in the same strength. At a modest estimate, four British birds would dispose of one large teaspoonful of sweet pepper (blended, of course, with soft-food) in a day. If you find out, therefore, how many full teaspoonfuls of pepper there are to the pound, and allow one extra per week, for waste, you will get somewhere near its lasting power. 2. I should use red-feed, not very strongly mixed, for a Yellow-hammer. 3. I don't like colour-fed Chaffinches, as they are lacking in colour contrasts—the red-feed brings them out too much the same tone of colour all over. Given a Jonque bird to commence with, all he needs is a quick and early moult, and a good supply of privet, black and other berries, etc., rich in natural colouring matters.

Out of Condition.

Norwich.—The bird is probably a little run down with the season's work. As the young will be quite able to do for themselves now you should cage him off separately in a large cage or flight where he can get plenty of exercise. Feed on a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part rape, and three times a week give a small piece of bread scalded with milk, pressed nearly dry, and with four drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped about it. Remove at night all that is not eaten. Give a good supply of green-food daily. In the drinking water give one day four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid and three drops of tincture of gentian, and the next day twelve drops of chemical food. Continue giving these on alternate days for a fortnight.

The Old, Old Story.

Mrs. C. Grayshott.—The young bird clearly succumbed to bowel troubles, which I am inclined to think are due to some fault in the diet, though I cannot gather from your letter just what is wrong with it. Therefore, you had better adopt the following general treatment for the young from the time they leave their parents. Let them stay with the parents now as long as they will feed them, if the hen does not ill-treat them. If she begins to pluck them after they leave the nest take her away, and leave the cock to finish off the young alone. When he ceases feeding them, put them in a separate cage, and give a pan of egg food, a little canary and rape seed, and a little slightly cracked hemp seed. Give no green food for first week or so after taking them away. As soon as you see by the empty husks that they are cracking seeds, begin to drop off the egg food, and when you see they are eating Canary freely, drop soft food for a whole day at a time, and in a few more days get them on to a staple diet of Canary seed, with a teaspoonful of dry rape twice a week; ditto of egg food; and the same of hemp seed, slightly cracking the latter until birds can manage it themselves. Give each of the extras alternately, so that the birds get something different each day. When they are five or six weeks old you may give plantain stalks, seedy heads of shepherd's purse, chickweed, and groundsel, more freely, but do not overdo it. Make your egg food with hard-boiled egg, minced finely, and twice the bulk of crushed sponge cake added, or you may use equal parts of egg, sponge cake, and stale bread crumbs. Place the young birds now ill on the treatment at once. For one day only give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and fifteen drops of whisky in each ounce of drinking water. After this give instead three drops of aromatic sulphuric acid and two of tincture of gentian in the water each day for four or five days.

A Bald Patch.

"Baldhead."—It is not very uncommon for birds, especially when they get a little aged, to become bald at the back of the head at this season. As the bird seems quite healthy and has filled eggs well this season, it will probably moult out all right, unless age is against it. To give it the best possible chance of recovering the feather on this spot, keep it in a rather warm, moist temperature, which is equable, and quite free from draughts. Give it twelve drops of chemical food in its water every second day, and twice a week, choosing bright warm days, give a dose of sulphur and potash. To do this take as much flour of sulphur as will cover a threepenny piece, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and twice the quantity of fine powdered sugar. Mix all well together, divide into four equal parts, and give one of these portions well mixed in the egg food for a dose.

More Crest Matters.

"White City."—1. The bare places on the back of the necks of your young Crests are natural defects, which will certainly tell against the birds. I doubt whether you can do anything to remove them or cause feathers to grow there, as nature has not provided for any. All you can do is to get as much length and substance as possible into the adult plumage, when the natural result will be to cover over and hide the blemish to some extent. The best way to do this is to adopt the treatment recommended to "Baldhead." You might also do something by patient and careful training of the crest at the close of the moult. When the crest is getting fine, catch the bird daily and spend some little time gently stroking the crest feathers, so as to make them droop naturally in the required direction, to give a nice circular shape to the crest without breaks. At the same time, cover any thin or bare patch that may exist at the back of the head. 2. Young Crests seem to continue making up for some months after first moult, and will gain substance after second moult, but little rapid growth is noticeable after the first two or three months. 3. Feed on a staple of Canary three parts, rape one part; and add a little egg food, hemp, split groats, rolled oats, and bread and milk occasionally—not altogether, but ringing the changes on these items. Let them have access to a piece of cuttlefish regularly. 4. Certainly young show birds should have some size in them, and be soundly built, like a Bullfinch. 5. This depends solely upon the bird and the quality of crest it possesses. A bird with a good large, nice-shaped, and heavily-feathered Crest will always have a fair chance of winning, irrespective of colour or marking. Crest is of prime importance; markings are quite a secondary consideration, and would only tell when crest and typical points were otherwise equal.

Getting a German into Song.

Nelson and Buller M.C.—It is doubtful whether the young German will gain much in song now until it has moulted, unless it is already over the moult. The best way to get it on song is to feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape, as a staple, and give in addition a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake twice a week, and half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week. Give a little green-food daily, and let it hear a good singing bird for a few weeks to incite it to emulation.

An Avine Flirt.

Fanny, N.C.—If properly treated from now until next spring there is no reason why the hen should not breed successfully next year. Keep her in a good large flight where she can have plenty of vigorous exercise. Feed plainly, and chiefly on a diet of Canary seed only, with a half teaspoonful of egg-food twice a week. When the weather gets very cold give a pinch of hemp twice a week as well. Give green-food daily as long as it lasts, and afterwards a piece of sweet apple or raw carrot two or three times a week. Give a little Epsom salts as an aperient about twice a week until the fat condition is reduced.

Brevities.

Canary Seed Sample (T. S.).—The seed is a very fair sample in most respects, but has a slight foreign flavour, which I imagine has been acquired in storage. It is not musty, and whether the flavour would be detrimental I cannot say. I should not care to risk feeding valuable birds upon it if I could get other without such flavour.

A Young Squeaker ("Squeaker").—Am inclined to thing the bird is simply so full of energy that it goes about constantly uttering a subdued twitter, which you mistake for a squeaking noise. Observe well, and see if this is not the case. You may add a few drops of glycerine to the water, and give a scrap of fat, boiled bacon between wires for it to peck at. Also give it a small spray of chickweed every second day. The bird, however, seems bright and healthy.

The Passing of a Monarch (F.E., Miles Platting).—Am sorry to hear the bird died after holding out so long. It was evidently in a very bad way physically, and would be quite incurable from the first. Such a bird would have been an interesting subject for post-mortem, and it is a pity you did not send it on to our post-mortem expert to make one.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

In an Aviary.

Beginner.—To enable you to fit your place up to the best advantage, you would do well to buy a copy of the book on Aviaries, published by CAGE BIRDS. Box, privet, holly, and fir bushes are all suitable, while an old ivy-covered stump or two (or wall) provide excellent shelter. Then you could arrange a kind of weedy jungle by sowing seeds of tall grasses, and such cereals as wheat and oats; and do not overlook ordinary Canary and rape seeds. As regards the birds to put in, you appear to hug the belief, like many other new beginners, that it is only necessary to turn in a good number of mixed species of birds to breed hybrids by the dozen. Experience, I am afraid, will soon disillusion you. The best way, however, and probably the only in-any-way certain one, is to turn each would-be hybrid couple into an aviary by themselves; or, at least, to give them but few companions. In a big, well-filled aviary, something generally happens to the nests, or eggs, or young of those couples which set up housekeeping; it is not often that young attain maturity under such conditions. If you are keen on breeding, then I should advise you to turn in a few of the better-known Finches, all males, and a dozen or so hardy hen Canaries. Such a combination would be the likeliest to bring success. Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Chaffinch (one), Linnet, Redpoll, Twite, and Siskin, all or any would do. Afterwards you could add other species if you thought fit.

Linnets and Larks.

Red Flag.—One of the best possible seed mixtures for Linnets is: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, summer rape and charlock one part each, linseed half a part, by measure. During the moult add one part of hemp, and towards the finish of the moult increase the proportion of linseed to one part. Also give a little maw seed now and again, and a little niger, too, while wild seed mixture is very much relished. Seeding green-food, such as shepherd's-purse, chickweed, knotgrass, etc., is very good for them. Game, or partridge, or chicken meal (without grit) makes an excellent stock food for Larks, if moistened with hot (or cold) water, or cold boiled potato (mashed) or finely-grated carrot, or minced lettuce or watercress; vary these latter things as much as possible. But it may be much improved if to six parts of the game meal (by measure) are added one part each of ground silkworm pupæ, dried flies and ants' eggs. A few mealworms should be given daily, and other suitable live foods should be provided in season. During the moult a Lark requires a free supply of live food, and half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced, should frequently be mixed amongst its daily food portion. It should also, at all times, have a good deep dust bath to "roll" in, and so keep itself free from lice, its great enemy when in a cage. A turf of clover grass is also much appreciated by the Lark; or a little chopped fresh clover given amongst the food.

Goldfinch Ailing, etc.

Trap Cage.—I will answer your second question by saying that a Robin which was colour-fed would be sure to look a better colour after the moult than one which had not been given colour food. As regards the ailing Goldfinch, you should give him a change of food at once. Mix two parts of niger seed with one of maw, and let him have it ad. libitum daily. A little thistle seed would also, no doubt, do him good if you could get it. It is late in the season though, now. Still, if you can get out into the country lanes, in sunny, sheltered places you will find hardheads and small thistle heads ripe enough to gather, and these would be certain to prove acceptable to the Goldie, and perhaps put him to rights again. The medicine most likely to do him good would be citrate or iron crystals. Get one ounce from a chemist, and in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water dissolve as much as will lie on a sixpence. This has a binding effect on the bowels, and is a good "pick-me-up" at the same time. The strength can be increased, if it seems necessary, after it has been given for two or three days, and of this you can judge by looking at the bird's excreta. Don't overdo it.

Colour-feeding a Thrush.

M. Hussey.—There is no need to give a Thrush, or any other British bird, hot pepper. Sweet (tasteless) pepper is quite sufficient. It is a moot point whether the use of hot pepper is of advantage with any bird; some Canary fanciers hold that it "fixes" the colour to a certain extent, i.e., that the artificial colour produced by the admixture of sweet and hot pepper is less liable to fade than that produced by sweet pepper alone. Some fanciers of my acquaintance deny there is any ground for this belief. I never knew a softbill bird yet that would not eat colour-food (sweet). Of course, it is necessary to begin with a very tiny quantity, as the change in the colour of the food makes them shy of it unless very gradually brought about. The bird should be kept in a fairly well-lighted spot, but out of direct rays of light, especially the rays of the sun. How strong the colour-food should be given depends on the natural colour of the bird. To give a Jonque Thrush, naturally a deep brown, the colour-food extra strong, would be to make him unsightly. Such a bird only needs sufficient to slightly enhance its natural colour, and put a gloss on its plumage. With certain birds (Mules, chiefly) I have used the colour-food one in two—perhaps even stronger, though I don't think it had any good effect. One in four (one teaspoonful of pepper to four of food) is strong, and sufficient for most purposes. Perhaps one in six may be quite enough for your Thrush. It must be continued until the moult is right over; for about a fortnight (to be safe) after you cease to find cast feathers in the cage. The last part to finish is generally the head, and the pepper should be given for some little while after pen feathers (or quills) cease to be noticeable thereabouts.

Brevities.

What Bird? (Whittemite).—Yes; the description you give fits the Snow Bunting quite accurately, and there can be no doubt the bird you have is of this species.

Hardheads, etc. (Tucker).—You should send to the manager of CAGE BIRDS for the two numbers containing descriptions and illustrations of chickweed and hardheads. They appeared in the article dealing with wild seeds and plants. Then you ought to be able to easily identify them.

Broken Beak (E. Taylor).—You can't do anything for the bird, and as it can crack its seed all right, I don't think you need worry over the occurrence. The beak will almost certainly grow again to the normal, though it is very slow to do so, usually. Whether you give the bird its liberty is a matter, of course, about which you must please yourself.

Identity of Bird (Aln Wilf).—Your description is rather puzzling, but answers fairly accurately to the Twite, which I should say is what your three birds are. I should hardly call the Twite, however, "about the size of a Greenfinch"; I should consider it decidedly smaller. It might, in fact, well be termed a slim kind of Linnet, for in colouring, markings, and action these two birds are much alike. The Twite, though, has a more or less yellow-coloured beak.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

An Amazon with a Cold.

E.M.B.—You give no details as to how you are dieting the bird. However, you will find full directions in recent issues of CAGE BIRDS. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into four times its bulk of water, and let the bird have nothing else to drink for one day, at any rate, till this is consumed. Give three other similar doses with a two day's interval between each. Spray or cleanse (with a camel's hair brush) the bird's nostrils two or three times daily till the discharge ceases. Wipe its mouth out with honey and borax twice daily. Keep the bird strictly out of draught, yet not in a vitiated atmosphere. You had better report progress in a fortnight's time with full details. It will be advisable to isolate the bird from any others you may have, as it is quite possible the throat trouble may be contagious.

A Feather-eating Grey.

S.S.—Your diet is not at fault, and yet the bird is evidently in a heated condition. Try putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water every third day, and continue so long as its excrement does not become watery. Spray daily with quassia solution. Whatever the weather conditions the bird should be kept indoors and out of draught till it is dry. On such days as you are not giving the magnesia make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Continue to supply it with cotton reels, etc., and keep it where it will always have others around it, providing their movements are not so sudden and abrupt as to scare it. When indoors, the best place is the general living-room. I have always found it best with a timid bird to have others with me when attending to it, talking quietly to it the while; and so it gradually becomes accustomed to others besides the one that supplies it with food, etc. Note anything it is specially fond of, and only offer it such, with your fingers. It will thus recognise that those it fears are its friends. Till such takes place, any time the bird appears very scared at the appearance of a stranger, place a screen of some kind in front of its cage, but only partially screening it. Let me know how matters are progressing a month hence.

Grey Parrot Indisposed.

Liscard.—The difficulty has been to give you from your meagre reports definite advice, and even now you do not describe the character of the growths at side of beak. If they are hard, touch them lightly with tincture of iodine, but if they are soft and contain humour, then as soon as ripe they must be lanced and emptied by gentle pressure, and then well cleansed with warm water. Continue the honey and borax, but stop the chlorate of potassium in the drinking water. While the breathing remains heavy put one teaspoonful of the following mixture into four times its bulk of water; do not give anything else to drink each day till this has been consumed. Mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts. In all other respects continue treatment as per previous reply. You had better report progress again in about a week or ten days hence. Such cases cannot be cured immediately; they are often let go too far before advice is asked for, and consequently the remedies merely check the trouble temporarily, while in the end the bird succumbs. However, I hope this will not be the case with your bird. When writing again try and give me fuller details

Treatment for an Amazon.

T T—I presume you have given the Dimsdale's Magnesia; if not, do so, but instead of giving it in the drinking water, soak it into a piece of plain biscuit or Madeira cake, or something similar which the bird will eat. Give any future doses necessary as above. The magnesia must be given sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving freely, but not to allow them to become watery loose. Get from your chemist the following mixture:—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts, and give one teaspoonful of the mixture in four times its bulk of water, letting this be its only liquid till breathing is easier. Of course, you will supply a fresh portion daily. As soon as breathing is relieved put the bird on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food as already directed. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food.

Aviary for Budgerigars, etc.

A.A.P. (1): I consider two pairs sufficient for this aviary for breeding purposes, and do not consider that at any time there should be more than twelve in it. If you overcrowd, not only are breeding results interfered with, but the birds encroach so upon one another that tragedies result, and disease comes or later appears. (2) All you name I have wintered out of doors without difficulty, but please understand they will not do so in cages, and the aviary they are kept in must have a shelter shed attached, to which they can retire at nights, and also during the day if they so desire; the flight, too, must be large enough to allow for wing exercise. (3) The Sugar Birds are known as creepers in the tropics, and more than one writer so describes them. It is a skin of the Blue Sugar Bird.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

T.A.L.—A nice selection for your aviary would be two pairs Budgerigars, one pair Cockatiels, and one pair Rosella Parrakeets. These will all thrive on the same diet, make a pleasing variety, and should ultimately breed when they have settled down and got accustomed to their surroundings and owner. None of them are unduly noisy or wild. You must fix up a nest box (concave bottoms) for each of the Cockatiels and Roselias, and four logs for the Budgerigars. With these birds you cannot give too much grass in flower so long as you can procure it free from frost. Tender lettuce and a little fruit are also very wholesome for all of them.

What Bird is it?

Dido.—It is a Sulphur-breasted Toucan. Give it as much ripe fruit as it will eat, also mealworms, cockroaches, beetles, any small mice you can capture for it, table scraps, and some good soft food mixture, into which put a few (scalded) grocer's currants. When grapes are plentiful and cheap it can have as many as you like to give it. It will do out of doors up to the end of September, providing you have a shelter shed to which the bird can retire at nights. The moult is irregular when they first come over, but afterwards usually takes place in the autumn or late summer. I should want a full description of your aviary before I could say if you could leave them out during the winter.

Budgerigars Egg-bound.

T A.B.—I should say the hen is in a weak state; possibly constitutionally so. If you can get any old mortar rubbish or lime plaster from some old building, do so, and pound it up to the size of millet, and keep a pan of it in the aviary. One or two large pieces may be left about the cage and aviary. Supply the birds with as much grass in flower as you can get at this season, and make their drinking water the colour of port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food for a month or more. Also give a few oats every other day. The bird will be better in the aviary, but for a few weeks I should keep her in the cage by herself and do not give her a husk. A month's rest or so should make her materially stronger. I should not atempt to breed with such a bird this season.

Breeding Budgerigars in Cages.

R.T.—While I have witnessed cases of these birds breeding in quite a small cage, such events are by no means common. I consider their cage ought not to be less than 2 ft. by 1½ ft. by 1½ ft., and if you can induce them to nest, they will undoubtedly rear all the young they hatch out. They will do well enough in an ordinary room, but should have the coolest position that is, at the same time, free from draught. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seeds, also a few oats twice a week, and a regular supply of grass in flower, lettuce, etc., cuttlefish, crushed egg-shell, and old mortar rubbish. There is no way to induce them to breed other than keeping them fit, and to keep a husk hung up at either end of the cage.

A Grey Out of Condition.

"Redfaced Cuckoo."—Get a proper Parrot cage for the poor creature in the first instance. Don't keep the bird within the cramped compass of a Canary cage. The poor thing cannot possibly keep a tail in such quarters, and its wings must also get terribly frayed. Instead of the salad oil, etc., give the bird half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the mouth, and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels gently moving, but not watery loose. Get the following mixture from your chemist, and put one teaspoonful of it into four times its bulk of water, and do not give anything else to drink each day till this has been consumed. Mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine. When the breathing is easier, stop the mixture, and make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Diet: A seed mixture three parts each of Canary and millet, and one part each of wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds. Also give, so as to vary the diet, ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in its cage, and do not give tea, coffee, and milk sops, table scraps, nor yet any kind of animal food.

Amazon Parrot Unwell.

Inexperienced.—It will be better for the bird when it will take the dry seed mixture, but most Amazons are the better for a little boiled maize, say, twice a week. Keep the boiled maize up for the present, but underneath it put some of the dry mixture, and I think you will ultimately find it eating the seed mixture. For one day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia over its boiled maize; that is, soak it into same before putting into cage. Several doses can be given, but there should be a couple of days between each, and if the excrement becomes watery loose stop for a time. For the next month make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. You can give ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and a little green food (lettuce, green peas, etc.) for variety. If there should be any discharge from the nostrils bathe same with diluted glyco-thymoline. The muscle won't disturb or injure the bird in any way; keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, and have folk continually about it. This will keep it lively, and it will soon begin to talk and mimic. Do not give it any table scraps or other messes.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Cutting (Mrs. M. J. Bright).—Thanks; the case, however, had already been reported for us, although, owing to pressure on our space, the account had to stand over.

Photo (H. Foden).—Accept our thanks for the photograph, which we have pleasure in reproducing in this issue.

Article (G. A. W.)—The article which you sent we perused with much interest, for which kindly accept our best thanks.

Young Bird Show (Tomtit).—While always ready to ventilate the grievances of our readers when these are well-founded, as the show concerned in this instance is confined to members, it seems to us that you will gain your ends by lodging a protest with the secretary or committee.

Emu's Eggs (J. Titterington).—You could dispose of such easily enough, we imagine, to a London taxidermist, but at not more than two or three shillings each.

A ONE-WINGED BUDGERIGAR.

SIR,—With reference to the letter of "J.S." in your last number, about a one-winged Canary; it may interest him to hear that I have had a young Budgerigar hatched lately exactly as he describes—i.e., perfectly smooth plumage where the left side wing should have been. The bird was perfect in every other respect, but I put an end to its existence. All my birds are doing well this season. Some pairs of Moustache Parrakeets are very interesting, and I am hoping for a nest. B.C.

AN OLD FANCIER'S APPEAL.

SIR,—I am an old fancier, and have had a lot of bad luck with my birds this season. I started this spring with four pairs and have lost them all through fever. I have been out of employment for a considerable time, and cannot afford to buy any more birds. I should, therefore, be very grateful to any brother fancier who would spare me a bird, old or young, mismarked or otherwise; it does not matter. It is the first time for over 20 years that I have been without a bird. F. BRETT.

WINDSOR AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

SIR,—A very successful meeting was held at the "Star and Garter" Hotel, Windsor, on July 16th, when it was decided to form a Cage Bird Association in the Windsor District. It was unanimously agreed that the new Society be called "The Windsor and District Cage Bird Association." Mr. John Simms was appointed chairman and Mr. P. S. Robinson, of Albany Villa, Old Windsor, honorary secretary. The meeting was adjourned till July 30th, at 8 p.m., at the "Star and Garter" Hotel, and in the meantime the secretary was asked to communicate with influential gentlemen with a view to securing a president, and vice-presidents. It was agreed that the entrance fee be 1s., and the yearly subscription 2s. 6d. And any lady or gentleman residing within a radius of 10 miles of Windsor, who is desirous of joining the Association, should communicate with the hon. secretary. P. S. ROBINSON.

CUCKOO'S STRANGE NESTING PLACE.

SIR,—I clipped the following from a local newspaper, and have no doubt it will be of interest to your numerous readers:—A curious discovery was recently made in the works yard at Wolverton, a bird's nest being found in a barrel. It appears that several barrels containing broken glass were lying in the yard, one of them having a hole broken in its side. Two Wagtails have been observed on these barrels frequently with food in their mouths, but no nest could be seen. One of the staves was prized open, and at the other end, amongst the broken glass, the nest was discovered. Instead of young Wagtails, the nest was found to contain a young Cuckoo, nearly fledged, which fiercely attacked all who attempted to touch it. Apart from the very curious selection made by the Cuckoo in depositing the egg amongst the glass, the wonder is how the parent bird managed to put it in such a place, the entrance being very small and necessitating the bird creeping amongst the broken edges of the glass. R. REYNOLDS.

WIBSEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second mat feather show held July 11th, when 39 birds were staged in four classes. Mr. R. Garnett (Windhill) placed the cards to the full satisfaction of all.

CL. YELL. YORK.: 1, 3, Ba tow; 2, Chapman and Bateman; 4, Crowther; vhc, Thornton; hc, Humphries; c, Musson. Mr. J. Crowther won special for most points, Messrs. Chapman and Bateman and C. Bastow being second and third respectively.—E. W. JONSSON, Hon. Sec.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.B.F.A.

The members held their First Feather Show at the George Hotel, on July 18th, when about 40 birds were staged. There was a good attendance of visitors during the afternoon, and some very promising young birds were shown. Two special prizes were given by Mr. Brownless (vice president) for the best Canary and best British bird shown. The special prize for best Canary was won by Mrs. Cuthbertson with a fine young Yorkshire, and for best British bird by Messrs. Wildsmith and Hawkins with their winning Goldfinch. Mr. T. Hill (Thornaby) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

WOLVERHAMPTON & DIST. C.B.S.

A table show of Canaries in nest feather, together with British and Mules any age, was held at the Swan and Peacock Hotel on July 14th. The number of exhibits staged was not large, owing chiefly to a thunderstorm that unfortunately prevented many of the members turning up with their birds. But what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality. The medal for best Canary was won in the Norwich section, Mr. Willoughby's bird being a grand clear Buff—a good all-round youngster that will doubtless be heard of again. The medal for second best Canary went to Mr. Howes, who staged a clear Buff Yorkshire of grand type and quality. The medal for best British bird or Mule went to Mr. Osborne with a Goldfinch, a real beauty, as pretty as paint. Mr. Crundle placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction.

HARTLEPOOLS C.B.S.

A very successful show of Canaries and Mules in nest feather and also of British birds was held at headquarters on July 15th, when good entries were obtained in the Yorkshire section. Norwich did not come up to our expectation, and the classes had to be amalgamated. A few very choice birds, however, were staged. Mr. H. J. L. Williams gave two specials, and Mr. Mustard one. Mr. Ben Evans judged.

COVENTRY O.S.

The twenty-eighth annual First Feather Show was held at headquarters on July 18th. The room, as is well known by Midland fanciers, as being one of the best possible for a cage bird show. The entries came in well, and exceeded last year's total. Competition was very keen in the Norwich section, and some very fine specimens turned up. Mr. C. H. Walton (Leicester) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Mr. G. Peters made an admirable secretary, and had the arrangements well in hand.

CITY OF HULL C.B.S.

The annual half-day Nest Feather Show was held on July 18th, at headquarters, Oddfellows' Hall, Charlotte-street. The room is an ideal one both as regards light and absence of draughts. There was a very good entry considering that most of the members have had such bad results from their earlier rounds. Many of the Yorkshires, though young, were not only good in shape, but showed plenty of style, and there were some very good Norwich, especially in the novice classes. Some of the birds with a good moult should give a very good account of themselves at the shows later on. In the A.O.V. class were some very good Cinnamons. The British bird section was good, and the birds were in exceptionally good feather and condition considering the lateness in the year. Mr. W. Clews judged Canaries, and Mr. F. Medley the British birds, and their awards gave entire satisfaction.

CUCKOO FED BY ROBINS.

SIR,—Can any of your readers say if it is a common practice of the Cuckoo to deposit its egg in the nest of a Robin? A young Cuckoo, almost full-grown, can be seen, fed daily by its foster parents, the Robins, in the grounds of this establishment.

A POINT ABOUT EXCHANGING.

Who Should Send on First?

SIR,—Your correspondent H.D.S. would like to know if anyone else has been "taken in" in exchanging birds. I would like to say how I was nearly "had" and how I got out of it. I saw an advert (not in CAGE BIRDS, I am glad to say), to the effect that a trio of Bantams was wanted in exchange for Yorkshire Canaries. I thought, here was my chance, as I wanted to start in the cage bird Fancy, and I had a real, good trio of Bantams that I was willing to exchange. I expect our friend, the Rev. C. D. Farrar, will laugh should he read this, as I purchased them from him and gave £2 5s. for the trio, so that there is no question as to their being good ones. What is more, they were not a bad lot to look at. Accordingly I corresponded with this "exchanger," and in reply he sent me a billhead that astounded me. He was a breeder of nearly every variety of fowl, etc., and the bait caught on. He would let me have two pairs of Canaries. My eye! how I saw the youngsters coming out over the nest. I caught the fever at once, and sent my Bantams on. I waited, but got no reply for a bit; so I had to wake him up a little. Yes, he had received them, but such a lot of "wasters" he had never seen. He could not possibly give me more than a beautiful Yorkshire cock for them. Well, I thought I had better have it, as I could get a hen for him. I told him to send it on. He did; but what a weed!—a common German hen. I at once sent it back, demanding my birds back. But, alas, they never came. A friend of mine was going up that way, so I asked him to call and see the place where this great poultry breeder lived. He did, and it was a house with a bit of a yard and a poultry run, with a big, black dog, which sniffed suspiciously at his legs. I at once wrote to the chief constable of that place, and that gentleman very kindly took my case up, and told me that if I did not receive my birds back at once to let him know. They came almost as soon as his letter, after six weeks. But in what a condition! They were literally half-starved, and I think after that and other cases, I have learnt a lesson, and I don't think I shall be the first to send on first in any future exchange I may enter into. JOHN HOCKING.

THE TWITE FOR MULING AND HYBRID-BREEDING.

SIR,—The Mountain Linnet, or to use its common name, the Twite, is a bird much used in Mule and Hybrid-breeding. It is sometimes known as the grey Linnet. It is some 20 years ago since I had my first pair of these birds. A man who had been out catching, caught some in the early winter in a clap net. They came with the Linnets in a flock to a call-bird (Linnet). As he did not know what they were he brought them to me for identification. This I did, and found they were a pair. He then gave them to me. These birds I kept for nearly two years, and I shall never forget it. Do what I might, I could never tame them or get them used to cage life. At last I gave them back again, and asked him to catch me some more, which he did. Whether the first pair were old birds or not, I cannot say. They were certainly in grand plumage and were fine birds; in fact, I have not seen any so good since. As regards the colours I only wish I could get hold of a few of their equals. My next birds, I should say, were younger ones, the plumage not being nearly so good, nor the markings so distinct. I had three which were all males. I at once placed each with an old hen Canary. As they were caught in December I soon got these birds steady, and by the time the breeding season came round, they had become quite tame. One of these I put up with a Canary and had two good young birds from this cross; but as show specimens they would not have been thought much of. Both of them being cocks, I kept them for some 18 months and expected to get some kind of song from them, but I was not rewarded. So in the end I gave them away. The other two I let some friends have. Since then I have had several of them, and when once I can get them tame, I am a great admirer of them. Although the first pair I had I could not tame down, it does not follow that they can not be easily tamed. They can, if one will only use a little common sense. They should be put with old steady birds, and where they can be seen, handled and approached. Feed them with titbits, etc., but I should always advise anyone who thinks of going in for Mule-breeding to get their British birds as early in the autumn and winter as they can. Another advantage is that they can get them cheap then, and the birds are, besides, full of vigour. After you have obtained your birds let your maxim be: "Follow nature," for no one can improve upon it. And, if you are going to keep birds, keep them properly, and get in a stock of nature's foods for them before the winter sets in. All kinds of natural food can be easily got, especially to those who live in the country. Those who do not live in the country, can now, thanks to our enterprising specialists, obtain the foods even in penny packets. All these foods not only help to keep the birds in health and full vigour, but aid in giving them the natural colouring, particularly if they can be moulted out of doors. I hope the day is not far distant when our most excellent club, the N.B.B. and M.C., will put down their foot and stop the colour-feeding of British birds, which, in my humble opinion, spoils them, besides keeping back from becoming good show birds. The classes which are supported for natural or field plumage should open this Society's eyes and get them to lead the way in the boycotting of colour-fed birds. I shall, with your permission, have something further to say at a future date on the subject of the Twite, meantime permit me to wish CAGE BIRDS all the success it deserves.

W. H. ARMITAGE.

VARIEGATED SPARROWS.

SIR,—When reading CAGE BIRDS of July 11, I noticed in your correspondence columns an account of another variegated Sparrow. These and others appear to be quite common now, as I saw quite recently a White Robin with a red breast, in the vicinity of Upleatham. He was a little gem. I have in my possession a cock Blackbird, which has white wings and a few white feathers in the breast. He is a very large bird, and has a wound on his back, probably through being shot at. Variegated Birds are evidently gradually increasing each year. Whether it is due to in-breeding or not, or to the season, I cannot tell. Perhaps some more enlightened person will be good enough to enlighten us on this subject through your valuable columns. WM. PINCHIN.

WHAT IS "QUALITY" LINNET SONG?

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little space in CAGE BIRDS in answer to the three gentlemen on the quality of the Linnet's song. Mr. T. Jump and "Lover of the Linnet" have described what they know of the Linnet very well. But I don't think much of Mr. Fred Allen's version. He says that jowing is a bad note. He also says that Linnets should not commence with scraping. I say that jowing is a good note—one of the best notes a Linnet does—and that a good Linnet can start off with any good note. If he pieces it up well with good work, I call him an excellent bird. I am getting on towards 70 years of age, and I am induced by these young Linnet fanciers to give a bit of my experience on the Linnet. I have kept Linnets ever since I could get seed for them. An old friend of mine gave £11 for one in Manchester, and an enormous number of people came to hear this bird sing. They used to call it "Jenny Lind," after the great singer. The best Linnets that ever I heard had similar songs. He started off: "Tolie, tolie, tolie, weet, weet, weet, weet, weet, weet, qui, qui, qui, qui." That "quiying" is scraping in four and five voices; it goes down to mad quacking like a duck. Another song is that which begins: "Tit, tit, tit, tot, tot, tot, pee, pee, po, po, peo, peo," and with "iggling," "widdling," skittleing," "winnying" running "dins" and "urrs," the bird changing them in different voices. Then there is the lock note in different voices and ricking in four or five different ways, and piecing them up without a break. Then there is the bell note in three and four ways. It is wonderful to hear such as "till, till, tong, tong," and "twang, twang," driven three and four times longer than others. I have heard Linnets scraping in so many voices that they have been exhausted and could not go to another place until they have had a rest. And I have had Linnets that could "jow" in four and five voices, and piece it up until they have done forty and fifty strokes of it. I don't care whom I meet in talking on the song of the Linnet. This is the first letter I have written on this grand songster. My advice is, if you want to get a good bird hand-rear a nest or two and buy two or three of the best you can afford and teach the young ones under them. Your young ones will then beat the old ones the following spring. I have got a good bird now which is not half as good as those I have had in years gone by. As to learning the song of the Linnet, nobody can teach you like a real good Linnet. Of course, you must go to the contests. I would rather have a really good Linnet than a couple of other sorts of birds. A. HOLT.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS.

By C. P. ARTHUR.

(with additional notes by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., and W. Laskey).

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

How to Keep, Feed, Breed, Tame and Teach to Talk.

A handbook which should be on every bird-lover's book shelf. Two full-page illustrations.

ARE BIRD-CATCHERS A "ROUGH" SET?

SIR,—My attention was directed to a lengthy article, appearing in a certain daily newspaper. The article was written against bird-catchers, and was so construed as to make it misleading to many. I should, therefore, be pleased if you would allow me space for the statement of the facts. I may say that I am myself a bird-catcher; that is, I spend my spare time bird-catching just as anyone might in shooting or fishing—not for any money it may bring, but for the hobby it affords. I also go in for bird-keeping and Canary-breeding. I am also a keen naturalist. Now the time I spent on my holidays was chiefly among these "gangs" of bird-catchers. But as for their being "rough, I did not find it so; in fact, I was very well received and nicely treated by them. Anything I wanted to see was shown me, and I also went out with them and saw them at their work; and I must say as regards the way these men treated their fresh-caught birds, it was a case of birds first and men second. Out of the hundreds of store cages and cages used for sending birds away in, I did not see one that was only 4 ins. high, and since reading the paper in question, I have had a look, and find that they are between 6 and 7 ins. high (inside measurement), and not one under 6 ins. I found that the men fed their young birds on the different kinds of bird rape which had been soaked, and one man was feeding his birds on soaked summer rape, a very expensive seed as compared with the others. I never saw a single dirty cage; some were soiled, but the majority were new ones. The bulk of last season's cages had been broken up for firewood. As to any act of cruelty, I only saw one, and in this case it was a youth who only did a bit of catching now and again, and after I had spoken to him about it, I was able to secure the release of the two birds in question. I also found many nests of Linnets and Finches, but in no case did I find a deserted one or one with dead or starving young, and I am quite sure that the inspector who said he found scores of such cases did not even find a score of Linnets' or Finches' nests in the time he stated. The reason is that you do not catch at this time of the year one old one to one hundred young ones, and when you do you will get the whole family, that is the cock and hen and three or four young ones. I am speaking now of the use of the clap-nets. As to why the farmers so readily give permission, it is because around here there is a quantity of seed grown, the fen land being good ground for this purpose, and when it is a forward season, the young birds, chiefly Linnets and Greenfinches, visit it in large flocks, doing great damage, not by what they eat, but by what they waste. I watched them crack a pod of sprout seed open, and by the time they had shelled and eaten one seed the rest had fallen, and then they tried another pod, thereby wasting twenty times as much as they ate. Another point I should like to mention is, that the birds being sent away in the evening, i.e., at roosting time, do not want food or water then, so that the omission of food is not a form of cruelty. There is always a certain amount of seed sent with each cage, and upon arrival all there is to do is to hang on the drinker, and when daylight comes there is the food and water sooner than they would perhaps find it in the fields if they were wild. I may mention that I have several written permissions for bird catching, and one from a J.P. From what I have seen during these last few seasons, I find that Linnets, and especially Greenfinches, are steadily on the increase, and my opinion is backed up by the leading seed growers in the district. I heard from a catcher that there is a great gathering of Goldfinches in a certain district near here (Cambridge), estimated at more than a hundred dozen.

WHERE TO GET PEACOCKS' FEATHERS.

SIR,—I am a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, and I would be very thankful to know if any of your readers can tell me where I can buy some Peacocks' feathers, as I want about three or four hundred of them. J. P.

ON KEEPING FOREIGN BIRDS.

SIR,—Our old friend the Canary has its admirers, myself among them. Britishers there are too, of kinds most charming. But the foreign species of birds combine all the best qualities of both the other classes, and have many more to commend them. Hundreds of different sorts of our feathered friends are imported to these isles, all with peculiarities which make them well worth our study. They are sufficiently diversified to suit all tastes, both in colour, shape and size. There are kinds which breed as freely as Canaries, and more which breed so rarely in captivity that when success does happen to come, it is all the more welcome. Many species inter-breed, forming fresh and strange combinations in their offspring; and several by their tricks and power of mimicry of voices and sounds endear themselves to their owners. Many are so hardy as to live out of doors in our climate the year round, while others are like delicate exotic plants—beauties which require the utmost attention and a fair share of heat to bring them through the unaccustomed phases of our fickle climate. I would advise those who wish to keep a number of species to dismiss the idea of having them in cages, and get a spare room or outdoor aviary prepared as advised so often in CAGE BIRDS. The main point is to have plenty of room, and to avoid overcrowding. There is nothing like plenty of exercise and fresh air for keeping birds in the pink of condition. The more common foreign kinds can be divided roughly into Finch-like birds and Parrakeets, which should be kept apart, as the latter are apt to bully their smaller companions. The kinds most frequently imported like a simple seed diet, which makes them very easy to cater for, and there is very little more trouble feeding an aviary-full of birds than one Canary in a cage. Green food is always acceptable, and although many birds when first obtained partake sparingly of it, yet, after a time, when they learn from their companions, they eat of it greedily and to their benefit. The Budgerigar or Grass Parrakeet is a very popular kind, and I consider it the bird par excellence for the busy man, as they give so little bother. They generally breed freely, rearing their young without fuss and requiring no egg or soft food at any time. It is said sometimes that they require no water for washing or drinking purposes, but I find mine the same as other birds in these respects. When about to bathe, they perch on one end of the water tray for a while, then take a sudden run through the water, and out at the other side, never splashing and spluttering like the Finches. I suppose this is because in their wild state they bathe by running through wet grass. They can be readily tamed and taught tricks, and are very handsome and novel-looking birds. There are many classes of Finch-like birds which are a perpetual source of pleasure to their owners, requiring only seed, green food and water. Among them are Javas, Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Saffrons and Bengalese, all fairly free breeders in the aviary; many kinds of Mannikins and Waxbills, not breeders, but interesting and lively birds; singers, such as Grey and Green Singing Finches, Alario, and Serin Finches, and birds interesting because of their beautiful nuptial plumage, such as Combassons, Weavers, Bishops, etc. All of these are to be had for a few shillings per pair. But for preference buy acclimatised birds; though somewhat dearer they are more satisfactory in the end. Then if longing for a wider scope one can have some of the rarer Finches from Australia; for instance, the many kinds of Part-Softbills, such as Pekin Robins, gorgeous Tanagers of all hues, Nonpareils, Cardinals. And there are also those which live entirely on soft food and ripe fruit, and such as the Bulbuls, Mynahs, etc. All these require rather more attention and a liberal menu. We can also have specimens of the Parrot tribe, from the little Budgerigar, to Cockatoos, Parrakeets, Cockatoos, Grey and Amazon Parrots and the resplendent Macaws all of which make very companionable birds. In conclusion, let me say that even the commonest and cheapest species are handsome and interesting. By starting with such, we can gain experience, which is the best teacher. I do not doubt that those who begin with these will gradually add other and better sorts according to the means and space at their disposal.

A Nest Feather Show was held on July 17th. Several of the old hands not exhibiting this year, the novices had a chance which they appreciated. There were a number of choice young birds. The awards, which were well received, were made by Mr. J. C. Wilmot.

CL. YELL.: 1, Goodman, rare body properties, fine size for a yellow, as smooth as a bottle; 2, 3, Mortimer, 2nd rare type, full of quality, lovely colour; vhc, Goodman, Osborne; hc, Beanland, Millard. BUFF: 1, Mortimer, rare quality bird, well made; 2, Parrott, well formed bird, not far behind winner; 3, Osborne, another very nice youngster; vhc, Wiggins; hc, Goodman; c, Millard. VARGT. YELL.: 1, Osborne, excellent type and quality; 2, Finding, heavily marked, correct type; 3, Corrie, close up, not much between the three. BUFF: 1, Mortimer, lightly marked buff, of excellent quality; 2, Parrott, heavily marked bird, correct type; 3, Wiggins, smart, nice quality.

REIGATE F.A.

Second annual young bird show, held on July 13th, at Mutton's Hotel, Redhill. The judging was entrusted to Mr. F. J. Green, who gave satisfaction in his awards. The silver challenge cup for best Canary was won again by Mr. A. J. Kilby, and the medal for best British bird given by Mr. F. J. Green, by Messrs. Cosier and Crisp. There were 61 entries, including some very good birds. The Yorkshires were especially strong in number and quality.

YORKS: 1, 3, Tillet, very nice buff, grand position; 2, spl, Weller, lovely bird, good feather and wings. NOR.: 1, spl, cup, Kilby, grand bird, will be heard of again; 3, Cosier and Crisp. PELTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The third young bird show was held at the Colliery Inn, Pelton Fell, on July 11th. Mr. T. Dixon, of Bedlington, judged, and gave general satisfaction. The entries numbered 72, in 14 classes. The hon. secretary, Mr. L. Hall, carried out his duties in a most businesslike manner, being well supported by a hard-working committee of real fanciers. The show was a success in every way. Mr. S. Elliott won Mr. A. Brown's special for best young bird in novice classes. All prize money was paid on the same day.

NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE FEDERATION OF C.B.S.

The third combined Nest Feather show of the Hanley, Leek and Longton Societies was held at the Albion Hotel on July 18th, at Hanwell, when without doubt the cream of the district were on view. Both Norwich and Yorkshires were the best ever seen at a nest feather show in the district. Mr. F. Bate judged, and gave every satisfaction. This Federation is a fine means of helping one another, and brings the fanciers more into touch with each other. We are in hopes that the Potteries and Dis. C.B.S. and the Crewe and Dis. C.B.S., being close neighbours, will join this combination. Each society guarantees a given number at each show, which number will be settled by the representatives of each society who constitute the committee of the Federation. The shows, of which this was the last, have, without exception, been great successes.

NOR. CL. YELL.—1, Birks, grand shape and quality; 2, Hall, grand size and shape, splendid colour; 3, Bickerton, nice shape and size. HARROGATE C.B.S.

The second First Feather Show was held on July 18th, when some very fine birds were on view, especially those in the Novice Classes. Competition was keen in this latter section, no doubt being due to the handsome rose bowl given by the President, H. Milling, Esq., J.P., for the novice member gaining most points with young birds at the two shows (June 20th and July 18th), who had never won a first prize. The winner was Mr. H. Robinson, who put down at each show a very strong team. Great credit is due to him for the manner in which he staged his exhibits. The runner-up in the rose bowl contest was Mr. A. Mason. Mr. S. Dean (Great Horton) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Hen Who Wouldn't.

A week ago my dad had a Canary which had four young ones, but she was what is called a "sweater." She would not get off the young even to feed them—she was so lazy. Her mate had to feed her before she would feed them at all, and then she would only stand up and supply their wants. Two of the little ones died. Then I said, tie a piece of cord over the top of the nest-box so that she cannot get in on them. My father tried it, and the others are doing fine.—Sent by L. Davey (age 9), 1, Henry Street, Plymouth.

Sparrow's Nest in a Coat Pocket.

"Jim" is the name of a Sparrow which is the pet of the engine drivers and firemen at one of the railway centres in the north of Scotland. It is stated that he was hatched within the noisy precincts of a busy locomotive stable, but falling out of the nest before being fully fledged, he was placed in a cage and tenderly cared for in the railway office. He quickly became so tame, that one day when his owner (the local railway engineer) was writing, he flew on to that official's hand and quickly fell asleep. The bird chooses very queer places for his nests, the oddest and most awkward so far being the inside breast coat pocket of his owner, whom he would follow wherever he went. He stuffed the selected pocket with miscellaneous material. Jim is now six years of age.—Sent by Doris Lycett, (age 12), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffordshire.

*Where the Threads went to.

A gentleman who was very fond of birds told me the following story. He was once out in some foreign land, and his wife being an invalid, used to sit at the open window doing fancywork. She was constantly losing or mislaying pieces of coloured silk. One day on entering the room suddenly she observed a little bird flying through the open window with a piece of silk thread in its beak. She called her husband, and together they followed the little robber. It flew straight to a tree overhanging a brook, and there the gentleman found a most peculiar nest, shaped like a bottle, and intertwined amongst the long grasses of which the nest was composed. The gentleman had found his wife's missing pieces of silk.—Sent by Sissie Cornwall (age 10), 38, Princes Street, North Shields.

OUTINGS.

Ashton-under-Lyne and Dist. O.S.

The second ramble took place on July 4th, to Chew Valley. It was a grand day for the occasion, and a fairly good number of members put in an appearance. The car left Ashton at 2.45, proceeding through Mossley to the Roaches. We then made our way through Freezeland to the Chew Valley, which was a treat for all present. It is a splendid place for scenery and wild bird life. There were plenty of birds to be seen, especially Blackbirds. We reached the Chew House at about six o'clock. We afterwards proceeded homewards, arriving in good time. Everyone who joined us had a very pleasant time.—H. FODEN, hon. sec.

IN THE COURTS.

NIGHTINGALES IN CAPTIVITY.

William Atkins was summoned for a breach of the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880, by having in his possession four Nightingales at Raunds on June 6th.—Defendant pleaded not guilty. William Hooker, Northampton, inspector R.S.P.C.A., prosecuted.—P.C. Smith, Raunds, deposed that on June 6th, he received a complaint that someone was catching Nightingales. He made inquiries, and afterwards visited defendant's premises, where he saw four Nightingales in separate cages. In answer to witness, defendant said he had not caught any Nightingales, but that the four were those he had in a deal last February. Defendant did not choose to say anything further, and witness told him the birds appeared to have been recently caught, and that he should report the matter. The birds appeared to be in a wild state.—Inspector Hooker said he spoke to defendant, and told him they had received numerous complaints from influential persons in Raunds of the loss of Nightingales which had made their homes in the neighbourhood for a great number of years, and that defendant was suspected. Defendant then said he had them from a man named Howe, who had gone to New Zealand. Witness afterwards inspected the birds, which were in a wild state, and there was every indication of their having been recently caught. Defendant, in his statement, said that at the end of January or the beginning of February he made a deal with Howe, from whom he had the cages and birds. He fetched the birds himself.—The Chairman said the Bench were unanimously of opinion that defendant was guilty of taking these birds recently, and convicted him of the charge. He would be fined 10s. per bird, and the birds must be handed over to the police and liberated. It was a very great offence, in the opinion of the Bench, that defendant should be taking Nightingales, which were a source of so much pleasure to the community at large, and they felt that they must mark their sense of it by inflicting this penalty.—Prisoner said he was sorry to say he could not hand over all the birds because he had given one to a friend of his.—The Clerk: The friend will have to hand it over, or he is liable to be summoned for having a bird in his control. The sooner he gets rid of it the better.—Money paid

PROTECTION OF WILD BIRDS.

At Braunton Petty Sessions, on July 8th, John Symons, head keeper on the Fremington estate, was charged under the Wild Birds' Protection Act, 1904, with permitting to be placed on a pole a trap calculated to cause bodily injury to any wild bird coming in contact therewith.—Mr. R. Hendy, who prosecuted on behalf of the R.S.P.C.A., said on June 22nd the inspector found in a pole trap in a wood at Fremington, a Blackbird caught by its legs. In a bush near he found the body of an owl which had evidently been caught in the trap.—In reply to the inspector, defendant said he knew the traps were there, but had not set them. Defendant was the head keeper for the coverts where the traps were found, and admitted having the traps about, knowing they were illegal. This brought Symons under the section.—Inspector Roberts, R.S.P.C.A., said the trap was fixed on a pole three feet from the ground.—The Defendant said he told the inspector the owl had been shot. There was a public path near, and he suggested that someone put the bird in the trap out of spite. His man told him he had not been near the spot. The trap had been there for years, and he had not set it.—The Chairman (Mr. G. C. Davie), said it was the first case of the kind that had come before the Bench.—Mr. Hendy said the Society had determined to put a stop to the use of these traps, and meant to prosecute in every case.—As it was the first case, the Bench imposed a fine of only 1s. and costs.

THE POWERS OF THE R.S.P.C.A.

Sequel to a Bird-catching Case.

At Soham County Court on June 12th, an interesting case came before His Honour Judge Milligan. This was a claim for £1 17s. 6d. for the alleged wrongful liberation of three Goldfinches and a Yellowhammer. The plaintiff, George Fenn (32), of Isleham, describes himself as a birdcatcher, and the defendant, Herbert George Reade, is an inspector of the R.S.P.C.A.

On the evening of Friday, May 1st, the defendant was at Isleham, and saw a lad taking a box of birds to Isleham Railway Station. The box was labelled for Newcastle. He examined the box and found that three of the birds were Goldfinches, which are protected in Cambridgeshire all the year round under the bye-laws of the Cambs. County Council. As the birds were fluttering against the bars of the cage, defendant acting as inspector of the R.S.P.C.A., concluded that they were "recently taken," and caused the lad to take the birds back to his home. Defendant told the lad's father, the plaintiff in the present action, that he had no right to take Goldfinches in Cambridgeshire. According to the defendant, plaintiff, replied, "I know all about it. It's hard enough for me to catch them without such as you interfering." Plaintiff, however, denied making such a statement. Defendant then said, "If you will not release them, I will." He took the birds to the house of P.C. Rawlinson, and in that officer's presence set them free.

The inspector then prosecuted Fenn at the Newmarket (Cambs.) Police Court. Fenn was represented by Mr. T. P. Bendall, and the defence was that the birds were caught in the parish of West Row (a couple of miles away), in Suffolk, in January. The county of Suffolk has no bye-laws for the protection of wild birds, and the prosecution relied on the Wild Birds Protection Act, which prohibits the taking of Goldfinches from March to August. Fenn and his witnesses swore that the birds were caught at West Row in January, in which case the Act would not have been infringed. The prosecution relied on their evidence as to the wildness of the birds as an indication of their being recently caught. Mr. Bendall argued that the birds were frightened by the inspector. The magistrates consulted with the clerk, in retirement,, and on returning to court the chairman said: "The Bench will give the defendant (Fenn) the benefit of the doubt. The case will be dismissed, but each side will pay its own costs." Subsequently Fenn entered his plaint in the County Court for £1 17s. 6d., the value of the birds, relying on the magistrates' decision to prove that they were wrongfully liberated. The plaintiff (Fenn) was not represented by a solicitor at the County Court. Mr. Polhill, solicitor from the head office of the R.S.P.C.A., defended Inspector Reade.

The evidence given and the conflict of it was practically the same as that given in the police court, except that his Honour did not think P.C. Rawlinson's evidence necessary, and he was not called. Inspector Reade again stated that when he told Fenn he should liberate the birds Fenn said, "You can do as you like." Fenn denied this, as he did at the police court. Mr. Polhill pointed out that the magistrates had refused to give Fenn his costs, so that the decision in the police court was not a justification for him. He was simply given the benefit of the doubt.

I am in great hopes some day they will enable me to win another medal, but at present they are recuperating. They are most amusing birds to watch and are great bathers. I have written this paper to let my fellow members of the Fancy know that I am once more on the war path and very much alive, and I make no sort of doubt but that I shall find that before very long I shall be able to say of bird-keeping what Napoleon once said of war—"Eh, bien c'est un grand je—better occupation."

Jay Thrushes, like all rare things, are rather expensive, but then, in bird-keeping, expense, like silver in the days of Solomon, is nothing accounted of. They are not suitable birds for a cage, no matter how large, as they are soft-billed birds, and like all soft-bills, their excreta is very strong and offensive in a room, and their feet soon get sore.

Give them a good, big aviary, to themselves, if possible, if at any rate you regard those with whom you put them; otherwise, like the celebrated lady who went for a ride on a tiger, your Thrushes will some day return, as did the tiger, with the birdies inside them, as he did with the lady.

In breeding all these big Thrushes, it is best, if you possibly can, to give them an aviary to themselves. It is difficult, I grant you, but then, one has to overcome difficulties. It is better to have only two or three breeding pairs, each in a separate aviary, than to have a big, mixed collection that are always fighting and devouring each other. Then, in a mixed lot, the food question is always a difficulty. You can't supply unlimited mealworms, unless you have the purse of a Rothschild, and you can't prevent the biggest and strongest bird from getting the lion's share. I know, by experience, how difficult it is to say "No," when a pair of rare birds is offered you, but there are times when it must be done, for expediency, if for no other reason. I don't always practise what I preach mind, but it is right for all that!

CHAPTER XV.—Breeding of the Many-Colour Parrakeets.

I hardly like to remember how many years it is since I possessed my first Many Colours. I recall distinctly the first time I ever saw one alive. It was at a shop in the West End, and by their sick and sorry look they reminded me at once of the chant of the Roman gladiators, "Ave, Cæsar, morituri le salutant." "Hail, Cæsar, those about to die salute thee!" As, I believe, the price asked was £10, I did not invest in them, but I fell desperately in love with them. It was a genuine case of love at first sight, and I made up my mind, if I could ever afford it, to get a pair.

Many Colours are very hard to get, and still harder to keep. Only a very few come over every year, and these are eagerly snapped up by rich people at prohibitive prices.

The first time I had a chance of any was about five years since. A friend who used to go to Sydney wrote to me from Port Said that he was bringing over six Many Colours—four hens and two cocks. (This was rather wonderful, as the males generally far exceed the females in foreign birds that come over). Would I like them? I wrote a big "Yes," and anxiously awaited the result. Alas, it was sad when it came. The cock Many Colours had all died in the Red Sea, he said; would I have the hens? I said I would.

One morning they arrived quite safely. For weeks I kept them indoors, and as the weather got warm (it was Christmas when they landed) I put them out of doors. How I used to watch them! How I hoped against hope that one might develop into a cock! I thought that one had rather a masculine head and a rather brighter shoulder patch. I wanted it to be a cock so badly; but it was no good; they all remained of the feminine gender.

Of the four, two, alas, died. Some disease of the throat carried them off. If you see Many Colours with an apparent difficulty in swallowing, make up your mind that you are going to lose them.

Where was I to get a cock bird from? I wrote to my friend Mr. Savage at Rouen, but he could not help me. "Many Colours are," he wrote, "as scarce here as in England; I have not seen any offered for sale for years." Then I wrote to Mr. Peckholtz. Could he help me? No. But he gave me the address of a German dealer who sometimes had Many Colours. I wrote off, and after a time got the offer of a cock bird at a very great price. They say "a fool and his money are soon parted"; they were in this case. I sent off the money and the Many Colour arrived. He "had been" a good one, but was so no longer. Moreover, he had that horrid difficulty in swallowing I knew so well. I tried to think he was healthy, but in my heart of hearts I knew better, and I felt that the days of mourning were at hand. They were. He lingered a fortnight and "many a time" like Tom Hood.

"I watched his breathing through the night," and then one fine morning I had a lonely corpse. Many months have passed away, and there was nary a sight of a Many Colour anywhere, as poor Artemus Ward would say.

Then one morning I got a postcard from a dealer, saying he was sending me two cock Many Colours. How my heart went pit-a-pat. Alas, when they came, and I opened the cage, one was quite dead. He was such a beauty, too. They had arrived by the last train at night, and were not delivered till the following morning. The other, I was delighted to see, was equally good as his dead brother, and seemed alright after a rest and some needful refreshment.

For a long time I kept him in a cage, as I did not dare trust his precious life out of doors in our abominable climate. The two hens remained out of doors, in separate compartments, as they did not seem very amicably disposed towards one another. Ladies do sometimes quarrel when confined together too closely. As the spring advanced, I suddenly missed the younger hen. I feared she was dead or had got out of the aviary somehow. What was my delight and astonishment, after a long and careful search, to find her sitting hard on four eggs. She was sitting so close that she even allowed me to pull her off the eggs. She sat steadily, but, of course, with no result. Just as she had finished sitting, I got the cock. Too late, of course, and a season gone. Any intelligent man will understand that it was a situation calculated to amuse the ungodly; but without any real fun in it. I own I felt as melancholy as if I had been editing a comic paper; but there are limits even to depression, and after the most awful fit there suddenly comes the rebound, as certainly as day follows night.

As the season advanced I put the cock in with the older hen, as she had not nested, thinking she was the more likely to do so of the two. With the perversity of the male creature, the cock did not approve of my selection. You remember that once, Alcides, having gone through all the fatigues of life, took a bride in Olympus, he ought to have selected Minerva, the staid and sober, whereas he chose the merry Hebe. He evidently, like Jacob, preferred Rachel to Leah.

The cock Many Colour was always seductingly whistling through the wires and making violent love to the younger and fairer lady, and so, at last, I had to let Nature have her way, and transferred Leah from his side and substituted Rachel. Leah would not take at all kindly to the arrangement, and, but for the dividing wires, I would not have been answerable for the consequences, as the police say.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

THE cricket match between the Gt. Horton O.S. and the Wibsey O.S. ended in favour of the boys from Horton, who won by a margin of 23 runs. Mr. H. Simonett proved to be the mainstay of Gt. Horton's batting, scoring 26 of the 84 runs secured by vigorous hitting, whilst Mr. Oliver surprised many by his clever use of the ball. For the Wibsey side, Messrs. Ogden Bros. went in first and made a great stand, many of the Hortonians quaking in their shoes in fear of a defeat, before they were parted. After the match all adjourned to the headquarters of the Wibsey O.S., there to partake of a grand pie supper. To add that justice was done to this particular department, would be superfluous.

TO-DAY (Saturday) the Gt. Horton Good Intent O.S. are to listen to a lecture on "Colour Feeding," by Mr G. R. Rushworth, and as this is now the predominant thought of every fancier, it will be wise for as many as can to attend this meeting and see what wrinkles can be picked up. An interchange of thoughts and methods is always interesting, especially when the subject is one that is of such vital interest as the present one, at the time of the discussion.

THE Harrogate Society held the second of their First Feather shows on Saturday last. The entry did not come anywhere near the total of their last show, but some good birds were staged in all classes, upon which the society is to be congratulated.

THAT pushing young Bradford East O.S. are trying to secure two "rose bowls" for competition at their first open show next winter, which trophies, I understand, are to be open to all exhibitors in the unflighted Yorkshire classes. Their value is to be at least £2 10s. each, and they will probably have to be won three times before becoming the property of any one winner.

THE Yorkshire Union novice medals, etc., which have been back to have the bird in centrepiece improved, are now being returned. Part of them have already been sent to their owners, and the remainder are expected this week end

SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

About 220 birds were exhibited at the Nest Feather Show, held in the Montgomery Hall, on July 18th. There was close competition in most of the classes, but the work of the judges—Messrs. W. Oxley, T. Tow, T. Hemmings, and E. E. Smith—was carried out with satisfaction and ability. Messrs. F. Pearce, J. Memmott, A. Bradshaw, and T. Bishop acted as stewards, while the work of organising the event was executed by Messrs. H. Lindsay and W. Bingham, the hon. secretaries. Throughout the afternoon and evening the show was patronised by a large number of bird fanciers and of the general public.

Management of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries.

By THOMAS SMITH.

Mild and hot weather have their dangers in the way of contaminating food and water, and every care should be taken to keep the cages, nests, and dishes scrupulously clean, and to remove everything that will infuse impurity into either food or water.

Red Mites and other Pests.

If the sensible precaution has not been taken (when putting up the pairs) to paint the outsides of the nests with Jeyes' or other strong disinfectant, red mites, small Canary bugs, and large lice, with the advent of the warm weather, will come into evidence, and if permitted to multiply will work sad havoc. The red mite is not an agreeable companion, but is not nearly so bad as the bugs and lice. It betakes itself to the crevices of the cage during the daytime, and can be kept down by painting its haunts with paraffin or disinfectants; but the vicious bugs and lice keep crawling over its victims, the birds.

I recollect my first introduction to the large lice. I purchased a buff hen, and I noticed that she was always picking herself and shaking her feathers. I caught her for examination, and in a few moments my hand was literally covered with the pests, which created a very disagreeable feeling.

They are unbearable, and where the three pests appear together everything possible should be done to exterminate them. That course is absolutely necessary if breeding operations are to be a success. The various disinfectants are more powerful and effective than the many kinds of powders. Quassia is a very good thing for the bath, or for putting into the spray water.

Breeding should be at its height in early June. Usually the weather is mild then, and the day long. Green food, too, is plentiful. In short, the conditions all round, are of the most favourable nature. The sittings in May should, as far as possible, be so arranged that as many eggs as possible shall hatch out in the first week in June. It is an immense advantage to have four or five birds in each nest under reliable feeders. Then the young thrive, and, in short, everything favours the making of hay while the sun shines—in June.

Preparing for the Exhibitions.

The question is often put: Will Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries hatched in June be ready for the opening shows? From practical experience I have found no difficulty in getting young ones that were hatched within the first ten days in June to moult and be ready for the show-bench by about the end of September. May and June hatchings are strong and healthy, and they pass through the moult quicker than the earlier or later hatched birds. Hence the necessity of making the most of the sunshine.

Early young birds will, by now, have betaken themselves to the perch, and care should be taken to see that there are no vacancies in the wire work to admit of their escaping. Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries are so finely constructed that they are easily maimed for life, and readers know what that may mean at the close of the year.

It is a great benefit, as soon as the young get on to seed, to put one bird in each cage. This prevents plucking and waste of feathers; and if there are style and position in the bird it will help to maintain and develop these qualities.

An extra-promising bird I have always put into a large cage with, say, three perches. This gives it every opportunity for exercise, with the least risk of doing itself injury. A really good bird is usually steady and well-balanced. A show bird should, of course, be steady and well-behaved, and the time for training is in early youth.

First Feathers.

First-feathered Scotch Fancies are frequently most deceptive in appearance. A Scotch Fancy Canary which, in the first feather, may give every indication of being an undisputed first prize and cup winner, may, after it has passed through the moult, prove quite unworthy of a "commended" ticket. And on the other hand, what gives little promise at first may moult into the premier winner of the season.

Treat all young Scotch Fancies alike until they are complete and declare, with no uncertainty whatever to the fancier, what they can do in competition. They can be weeded out after the moult; but until then be careful in expressing an opinion. Fanciers like to see a Scotch Fancy Canary looking well at all times, but it is not wise to build up hopes, or form low opinions of birds while in their first feather. Patience should be exercised.

Feathers should be preserved. The long feathers cast in the first moult, so that if they become deformed or wasted, it involves plucking out, which many hold is hurtful to the birds.

To keep the tail of a Scotch Fancy or Belgian Canary in form, a very good thing is to have a small glass inside the cage, so placed, near and slightly under the perch, that when the inmate moves about the tail will go into the water to the extent of not exceeding a quarter of an inch.

At this time of the year, when dirty glasses have a bad effect upon the water, the drinking glass should be thoroughly cleaned every morning, and pure, clean water supplied. A great deal depends on clean dishes, food, and water, especially in the summer, when the least thing may taint food and water.

Young Birds in Nest.

In case young birds should be pulled out of the nest, an occasional glance at the nest platform and at the bottom of the cage should be given. This is a means of saving life that should always be kept in mind. Every bird saved increases the chance of your having a cup winner among the number. Looking after the young means making the most of the present opportunities.

Having bad feeders is one of the greatest disappointments in Canary breeding. Every fancier knows what this means when there is not another pair available. It means that there is no alternative but to resort to hand-feeding. Hand-feeding may be commenced at any time irrespective of the bird's age, and it is surprising how the young take to it when compelled.

The food to give is the ordinary hard-boiled egg mixture, moistened with the fancier's own saliva. If the young are only a few days old, and the hen continues to sit upon them let her do so, and when you are ready to hand-feed them put her off the nest and touch them with your fingers; if they are not too far gone and hungry they will freely gape, and partake of the food.

A convenient way of conveying the food is by a piece of wood reduced and rounded off so that it will hold on the tip just sufficient to pass into the bill. Care should be taken not to gorge the young birds; rather, give food frequently, say every two hours. As the young advance and gain in strength they will worry the hen for food. In some cases she yields and sets to the feeding, in which case stop the hand-feeding, and give her every opportunity of rearing them.

Hand-feeding should only be adopted as a last resource. Hand-reared birds are not easily weaned, and are seldom equal in strength to those birds which are brought up by parents or foster parents. Should it be necessary to keep on the hand-feeding till the young can do for themselves, all droppings ought to be daily removed from the nest.

Some Nest Matters.

It often happens that the vent gets blocked up with droppings, and if not removed it will prevent further passage, and probably lead to inflammation of the bowels or to some other disorders.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Blackbirds and their Bath.

The Vicar of Haywards Heath, having received numerous complaints of flowers having been removed from graves in the parish churchyard, gave instructions for a watch to be kept. After remaining in hiding for some time the verger was about to retire, when he saw a number of Blackbirds upon the graves. They plucked the flowers and scattered them about the churchyard, afterwards returning to the graves to bathe themselves in the water in which the flowers had stood.

The Bird's Third Eyelid.

In addition to the true lids, says Dr. Casey Wood, President of the American Academy of Opthalmology, birds possess a third eyelid such as is found in reptiles. A lid which acts as a scraper for cleansing purposes, and which is also used as a partial screen from blinding sunshine. With this third eyelid a bird protects its sight when fighting or seeking food.

One of the keenest observers of bird life in Cheshire has seen the Tufted Duck breed in one of the Cheshire meres this season. This is the first recorded instance.

An Epping Forest "Ghost."

I was walking with a friend across Warren Hill a week or so ago about 8.30, says a writer in a contemporary, when suddenly I was struck a heavy blow on the back of the head, as I thought, with some instrument, which knocked me almost to the ground. My friend, on looking round, discovered a large owl sitting on a low bough close by. I at once went to throw at it, when I was struck in the face by another, causing a scratch on the nose, the birds swooping round screeching. They have a nest close by, and it appears have been in the habit of swooping down on passers-by.

Blackbird Suspended by a Thread

Mr. H. Gould, of Morton, when in his garden, it is reported, noticed a Blackbird suspended in the air immediately beneath its nest in a tree. Not being able to see what was the cause of its being held in this position, he secured the bird and found that it had somehow managed to hang itself with a length of fine thread, one end of which was woven into the nest and the other end had been left hanging outside. The bird was quite dead when discovered in this strange position.

THE LOCKED DOOR and the Key.

Have you ever tried to open a locked door without a key? Then, when the door has been ruined, found the key?

That is what the cage-bird fancier is doing who tries to do without "CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL."

C.B.'s ANNUAL is the KEY to

Everything worth knowing in the Cage-Bird World.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

Fully illustrated with sketches from specially-taken photographs, this is the finest article on the art of washing birds ever published. By following the clear instructions, and studying the diagrams, the veriest beginner can successfully compass the washing of his own birds.

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars or subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.
Directory to Judges of Cage-Birds.
Standards and Scales of Points for Canaries and British Birds.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARR.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

BIRD CATCHERS.

The old firm for nets, traps, and every up-to-date appliance. The catching season is at hand. To be successful use only the best-made appliances. I have an enormous stock now ready; all the latest improvements; finest and best invisible netting possible to manufacture; all clap-nets will be fitted with improved steel sockets, and money returned if dissatisfied. Used by all the leading catchers, who will accept no other make. Beware of cheap imitations. Clap-nets, poles, sockets, irons, lines, two nets, carrying bag, full directions for setting, with sketches, 9 ft. long, each net 3 ft. wide, 6/-; 10 ft. by 3 ft., 6/6; 12 ft. by 3 ft., 7/6; 18 ft. by 3 ft., 9/6; 18 by 4, 11/-; 24 by 4, 12/-; 24 by 4½, 14/-; 30 ft. by 5, 17/6; 36 by 6, 21/-; 48 by 6 ft., 25/-; spring net traps, the "catch all," easy carried, self-acting, takes alive uninjured; Goldfinch size 1/3, two 2/3; Rook Pigeon Blackbird 2/-, two 3/6; carriage paid; swivel bird braces, 20 years reputation, no injury, no tying, three 3d.; dozen 8d., with sketch; brace bird poles, 9d., bird lime, best quality, Japanese hold Rooks, any weather, 1/8 pound, half pound 1/-, quarter 7d., large box 4d., carriage paid; lime twigs, holder and four, 7d., with eight 9d., post free; call cages, green, 6d.; store cages, 1/3, 2/3, 3/3; trap cages, double 1/-, treble 1/9, four compartments 3/-; for all other appliances send stamp for 40-page illustrated catalogue, also 7d. for large book (copyright) Hints on Birdcatching, feeding, taming, setting nets, selecting sexes, useful hints where to set baits, etc., etc.; life experience with nets.—S. Young, Net Trap Manufacturer, Bird Catcher, Crewkerne, Somerset.

for the ensuing catching season by having all your appliances ready? If not I can supply you with everything you require at lowest prices consistent with quality; clap nets, made from finest thread, ¾-in mesh, 3 yds. long, 4/- pair; 4 yds. 5/-, 5 yds. 6/-, 6 yds. 7/-, 7 yds. 8/-, 8 yds. 9/-, 9 yds. 10/-, 10 yds. 11/- per pair, all 5½ ft. deep and 4 ft. lly; all clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted with poles, pegs, lines and everything ready for immediate use; bat folding sparrow nets fitted on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair, ditto fitted on 19 ft. poles, 6/6 pair; loose netting, pure thread, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd., post free; scores of different sizes of nets always in stock; single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to immediately reset itself soon as bird is caught, 1/6 each; self-acting spring net traps, 24 in. long, 1/- each; 18 in. long, 9d. each; carriage 4d. extra; these net traps are totally unlike any other on the market, being much larger, more simple to use, require no pegging down, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook; real Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, will not run in sun, and guaranteed to hold a hawk; ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample box 3d.; all post free; pure hemp pull lines, 65 yds. long, specially spun without "snarl," or "back twist," 1/4 each, carriage paid; bird brace swivels, 6d. doz., post free; stave poles, flirt pegs, store cages, and everything required by catchers always in stock; for full printed list send stamp; all the leading professional catchers use my appliances, and will have no others. Everything sent on approval at my risk, either cash or deposit system, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given; last season I publicly asked every disappointed purchaser to smash up the goods I sent him if they did not prove in every way exactly as advertised, and described, and I would return every penny of his money, but not one article was broken up, nor was I ever asked to return a copper; this offer is still open to one and all. (Imitators please copy.) The reason I am so confident as to value of my goods is because no expense is spared to make them as durable as possible, and my workmen are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced bird-catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required. Thousands of testimonials received and published during past few seasons; don't forget the old name and address; no connection with any other house in the trade.

W. GORE, 131, Gooch Street, BIRMINGHAM.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS.

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

CLUB REPORTS.

PRESTON O.S.

The July meeting was held on July 6th, when 22 members were present. In the absence of the Chairman and Vice-Chairman (who, however, turned up later), Mr. Lewis was voted to the chair. The following were elected members: Messrs. R. Bannister, J. Taylor, G. Atkinson, and C. Cliff, all of Preston. This brings the number on the roll to 56. —W. HY. HEATHCOTE, Secretary.

BROUGHTY FERRY C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held in the Bakes Rooms on July 1, Mr. Carmyllie presiding. The secretary reported the arrangements for the annual show were progressing favourably. After the usual business a friendly discussion ensued on the best food with which to rear young birds. The verdict was in favour of the long standing mixture of egg biscuit. The meeting was brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the chairman.—R. WHITTON, secretary.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

At the special meeting held in Liverpool, on July 25, Mr. Handley in the chair, patronage was allotted to the following shows:—Oct. 23, 24, Rochdale; Nov. 6, 7, Liverpool; Nov. 13, 14, Warrington; Nov. 21, Bradford West; Nov. 27, 28, Leeds; Dec. 5, Altrincham; Dec. 10, 11, Welsh National; Dec. 18, 19, Widnes; Dec. 31, and Jan. 1, 1909, Scottish National; Feb. 5, 6, 8, 9, Palace. The motion to alter colour of Norwich show cage was lost. It was decided not to give patronage to any more shows this season.—S. HADWIN, Sec.

ST. ANDREW'S O.S.

The annual meeting was held in the Court-room of the Town Hall on July 5th, Mr. P. Whettet presiding. The balance-sheet was read, and showed a balance which was considered very satisfactory. Mr. Auchterlonie, who has been secretary for six years, asked to be relieved of the secretarial work, and while assuring the members of his support in the future, thought that Mr. Alex. McIntyre would prove a very suitable man for the post. This being seconded, was unanimously agreed to. Mr. P. Whittet was again appointed president, and Mr. C. Moss vice-president. A working committee was then elected, consisting of Messrs. J. Brown, J. Mackie, C. Moss, jun., A. Robertson, and T. Auchterlonie. The date of the show was then fixed for October 4th.—A. B. MCINTYRE, Secretary, 31, South Street, St. Andrews.

GREAT HORTON v. WISBEY O.S.

A cricket match was played at Wibsey Park on July 18, between the members of the Great Horton and Wibsey Societies. It resulted in a win for the Hortonians. The men from Horton went in first, and piled up a score of 84. The Wibsey men followed with 61. The following is a list of the scores: —Great Horton O.S.: Mann, 3, Simonett 26, Hammond 3, Cruise 11, Stansfield and Hodgson 4 each, Oliver 7, Kellett (not out) 14, Waterworth, and Self, 1 each, and extras 10. Total, 84. Wibsey O.S.: L. Ogden 19, T. Ogden 12, Johnson 4, Thornton and Hinchcliffe 2 each, Myers 14, Bretherick 5, and Broadbent 3; total, 61. After the match they sat down to a meat tea at the headquarters of the Wibsey O.S., and a real good one it was. Then followed an evening of amusement, which everyone seemed to enjoy.—J. HOLROYD, Hon. Sec., Great Horton, O.S.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

A meeting was held at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester, on July 18th, Mr. John Garner in the chair. Some very important business was gone through, the chief items being the selection of societies for club show and patronage. The club show will be held in connection with the Rochdale O.S. The Lancashire and Lizard fanciers will have a treat, seeing we have secured the services of such experts as Mr. R. Barrass, of Lancashire fame, and Mr. L. Butterworth, one of our oldest Lizard breeders and exhibitors, who will judge our two varieties. We trust our members and fanciers in general will show their appreciation of the society's enterprise by sending some bumping entries. Challenge cup and medals were also allotted to Manchester, Nottingham, Littleborough, and Crystal Palace, for both Lancashire's and Lizards, and the Rochdale Good Intent for Lizard Challenge Cup and medal only. Two or three more societies will most likely be added to above at our next meeting, which will be held at Glossop on August 16th. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman brought an enjoyable meeting to a close. Fanciers are invited to join the society.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

A special meeting was called at the show held by the club on July 25th for the purpose of considering the resignation of the secretary. Mr. J. R. Slack, chairman, who presided, explained that he had received a letter from the secretary in which it was stated that having been suspended by the No. 1 District Committee of the C.B.U. for showing two birds at his native place at a mixed show on Whit Monday, he (the secretary) felt he could not retain his position as secretary unless he had the full confidence of all the members, and therefore placed his resignation in their hands. He (Mr. Slack) expressed his opinion that the action of the C.B.U. Committee was too oppressive altogether, and appeared to be the result of malice, and he hoped the members would not accept Mr. Crawhall's resignation. Mr. Shepherd moved "That Mr. Crawhall be requested to withdraw his resignation, and that the members present thank him heartily for the honourable way he has acted in the case, and express their full confidence in him." Mr. Crawhall, he said, had been the founder of the club, and they could not afford to lose him as their secretary. He also expressed regret that the local committee should have been so harsh as to deprive their secretary from showing at more than half of the shows to which their club gave their patronage. Mr. Tindale seconded, and expressed the hope that Mr. Crawhall would long continue to hold the position of secretary. The motion was carried with acclamation. The secretary replied that it would have grieved him very much to give up the position after the two pleasant years he had spent with them, but he felt that his honour was at stake, and that so long as a reflection like that severe sentence of debarring him of showing at five out of the seven local shows was upon him he could only appeal to his brother fanciers by resigning. But as the chairman, Mr. Shepherd, and others had so kindly expressed their sympathy and their confidence, he would continue to do his best for them as their secretary, and hoped that if the same enthusiasm was displayed in the future as in the past we would soon not be afraid to meet the members of the S.Y.C.C. in competition, though they had a few years' start in the race for honours. He thanked the members for their kindly confidence in him, and hoped he would always earn it.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BELFAST N.C. & Y.C.C.

Usual monthly meeting, held in the Avenue Hall on July 6. In the absence of president and vice-president, Mr. A. South, was asked to preside. It was proposed that we adjourn the matter re Rule 13 which was to have been discussed at this meeting until next meeting, owing to the small attendance, and that the secretary be instructed to summon every member under a penalty, as per Rule 20. Members will please note this, as the rule will be strictly enforced.—A. SOUTH, assistant secretary.

GREAT HORTON GOOD INTENT O.S

There was a moderate turn-up of members and friends on July 25th to hear Mr. G. E. Rushworth lecture on colour feeding. The hints and information that he gave showed that he is not a novice. His methods were questioned by many present, which he explained satisfactorily to all, and many exchanges of views on the subject delighted those present. After the usual vote of thanks an enjoyable evening was brought to a close.—H. SCHOFIELD, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN B.B. M. AND F.B.C.

At our last meeting, the patronage of this club was granted to the following societies: Newcastle, Wallsend, South Shields and Gateshead. There were other applications from several societies, which were left over until next meeting, to see if any more applied from a distance, our members being anxious to give their support to any societies which meet with their approval. There are three silver cups to be competed for (one for each section) for three nominated birds, gaining most points over all shows under our patronage, and also three silver medals for most points at each show. There are over fifty members on the books, and anyone wishing to join may do so by sending subscriptions of 2/6 per annum, together with their names and addresses to the Hon. Secretary, J. R. SLACK, 115, Stanhope-street, Newcastle.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

The committee appointed at the general meeting, met at 142, High Street, Edinburgh, on July 11th. Those present were Mr. Richardson, president, Messrs. Watson, Hamilton, Smart, Arnot and Brown. Applications for club patronage were considered, and it was decided that in cases where club members had accepted more than two judging engagements, the first two applications received by secretary should get patronage only. A motion that instead of six novice medals this year there should be eight, was passed. Nearly 50 societies were granted the club's support. Those societies which have been granted patronage will be advised by secretary in the course of a few days. The secretary was instructed to use his own discretion regarding any application coming in for club patronage after date of meeting.—M. JAMIESON, Hon. Secretary, Green Terrace, Hawick.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

The usual fortnightly meeting was held on July 18, in the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. The correspondence included letters from the secretary of the C.B.U., and secretaries of the various specialist clubs. The secretary of the Border Fancy C.C., having notified us that seven classes for Borders would entitle us to receive their patronage, it was carried that we allot the seven classes, providing we obtain the B.F.C.C. patronage. The secretaries were instructed to inform the United Kingdom Lizard Society that four open classes for Lizards would be given at our Open Show, November 20 and 21, providing we received their patronage. Much satisfaction was expressed by the members when the secretaries intimated that we had been granted the patronage of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, and the Northern Yorkshire Canary Club. Mr. J. Riseborough, the C.B.U. delegate, gave his report of the C.B.U. District No. 1 meeting, on July 15, at Newcastle, and his report was adopted. The secretaries then proceeded to pay out the prize money won at the First Feather Show. —REID and MADDISON, Secretaries.

CAGE BIRD UNION DISTRICT No. 1.

Meeting of District Committee, held in Lockhart's Cafe, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on July 15. Present:— Messrs. T. Robson (Northern Crest Club), A. Grey (Morpeth), J. McDonald (Wallsend), H. Maughan (Jarrow), J. Brown (Derwent Valley), W. Thompson (South Shields), J. Davidson (Blaydon), J. Riseborough (Sunderland), G. McPartling (Newcastle), and A. Brown (Gateshead). Mr. Robson was in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A charge of having exhibiting borrowed birds against J. Thompson was not considered proved, and he was exonerated. A claim made by Mr. A. Lister, Gateshead, against the Newcastle Society for a special prize awarded to him according to the judge's slip, but subsequently handed over to another exhibitor on the grounds that a clerical error had been made by the judge was referred to the Council. For exhibiting at an unlicensed and non-affiliated show, Mr. T. C. Crawhall, of Newcastle, was suspended for one month commencing October 17, and ending November 17, 1908. The secretary having tendered his resignation, was requested by the Committee to reconsider same.—A. BROWN, Sec Dist. No. 1.

CINNAMON MARKED Y.C.C.

A committee meeting was held on July 25, to allot patronage for next season. Mr. Gledhill, president, in the chair. The following societies applied for our patronage:—Pendleton and Salford, Accrington, Newcastle, Queensbury, Manchester, Morecambe, Shipley, Laisterdyke, Bradford West, Huddersfield, Harrogate, Eccleshill, Brighouse, Bradford City, Gt. Horton, Windhill, Halifax, Bradford East, and the Palace. Several of these shows are to be held on the same date, or have selected the same judge, and it was unfortunate that the best shows clashed in this way, for as we have a rule of "one judge, one show," and "one show, one week," there were some which were bound to fall out. All those with clear dates and judges were submitted to ballot by hat and the following are our patronage shows for next season:—Queensbury, Shipley, Laisterdyke, Huddersfield, Eccleshill, Brighouse, Windhill, Shipley, Halifax, Bradford East, and Palace. Our financial position was considered, and it was felt we had been too generous with the value of the competition prizes; but before going back on our previous promises we would try and see what we could raise in a social way (whist drives, etc.), during the coming winter season. We hope, therefore, that all fanciers, whether members or not, will help us when the time comes. Intending members should send on their subs., with their names and addresses, to me as early as possible, as I intend having our handbook out shortly.—R. GARNETT, Secretary, 17, Woodside Terrace, Windhill, Shipley.

CIVIL SERVICE F.A.

The Quarterly Meeting and Young Stock Show was held on July 21, at the "Raglan," Aldersgate Street, Mr. B. G. Ager presiding. After the judge (Mr F. Easterling) had made the awards the annual show business was then proceeded with. For the benefit of those not present at the last meeting, the secretary gave an outline of the report of the sub-committees of the "South Metropolitan F.A.," and the "C.S.F.A.," appointed to consider the combination of the two societies for the purpose of holding a grand Annual Show. The show is to be held on Dec. 3 and 4, at the Avondale Hotel, Landor Road, Clapham, S.W. It was agreed to accept "The Grand United Metropolitan Show," as the title. Judges were nominated and their names submitted to the sub-committee for selection. The following resolution was carried:—"That the preliminary expenses in connection with the show be advanced by either or both of the combining societies, as may be convenient. Such amounts to be repaid to the respective societies before determining the profit or loss accruing to such show." Mr. Easterling then clearly defined the objects of the Federation of Cage Bird Societies for London and District, and said it would be to the advantage of every society catering for cage birds to become affiliated. In the end it was agreed that the matter be left over for a future meeting. At the conclusion of the general business Mr. Easterling gave his promised lecture on "Moulting for Exhibition." The lecturer gave us his experience in colour-feeding, so successfully carried out by him. Some very useful information was given and at the conclusion questions were asked and were most ably answered. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Easterling, and to the chairman, brought a most enjoyable evening to a close. Awards:—Nor. Crest or C.B.: 1, 2, Thursby. Yorks: 1, 2, Forster; 3, he, Russell; vhc, c, Harding. Mule or Goldfinch: 1, spl, for best Can. or Mule, he, Talbot; 2, spl best British, Thursby.—A. WATSON, Hon. Sec.

DULWICH O.S.

Presentation to Mr. G. F. Woolhouse.

Usual monthly meeting held on July 23rd, when there was a good attendance to hear Mr. W. T. Butt relate his experience. The "birds he had kept" proved to be very varied. He had also been successful with Norwich, Yorkshire and London Fancy Canaries, but his chief success had been in Mule-breeding. He deprecated the Sib.-bred theory, and recommended what he termed a washed-out Buff hen in colour—almost white. This kind of hen he had found always threw the lightest Mules; especially so in the third round when paired to the Goldfinch. The lecturer stated that in his opinion the best Goldfinch came from Wales. He became very interesting when telling us of the various species of birds to be found in the Western counties—Devon, Somerset, and Cornwall. He did not believe in colour food for British birds. He had a weakness for rarities and freaks, and had kept many Albinos. At the conclusion of the lecture an interesting discussion took place. A vote of thanks to Mr. Butt was given. Messrs. F. Putner and W. Munday were elected members. Mesars. Underhill, Butt, and Rees have offered special prizes for the annual show. An interesting event then took place. Mr. A. E. Rogers said that on behalf of the many friends and admirers of Mr. G. F. Woolhouse, their esteemed chairman, it gave him great pleasure to ask that gentleman to accept, as a token of appreciation of his services not only to the Dulwich O.S., but to the Fancy generally, a handsome case of meat carvers, and a set of knives and forks. It was but a slight way of doing him honour. It would be fresh in everyone's mind, how herculean were the efforts he made in connection with the last show at Peckham, as show manager. He made that show a success, there being a record entry. He was the first to propose a cage bird society for Dulwich, and as one of its founders they all knew with what untiring energy he had worked to make it one of the best. And now he had thrown in his lot with the Dulwich O.S., and had the satisfaction of seeing close upon a 100 members join that organisation. Mr. Woolhouse said he could not find words to express his gratitude for their unlooked-for kindness. It had come quite unawares. He would always value their gift not only for its intrinsic value, but for the kind thoughts that had prompted it. As an official of the old society he had only tried to do his duty, and if his humble efforts could be of any service to the Dulwich O.S. he was only too pleased and ready to help them. After various speeches the health of Mr. Woolhouse was drunk with musical honours, and amid great enthusiasm. This concluded one of the most pleasant evenings in the annals of the D.O.S. —ROGERS and MAZZONI, Hon. Secs.

SEVEN SISTERS B.B.A. (King's Lynn).

A Members' First Feather Show was held on July 20. Mr. C. Grenfield judged, and gave every satisfaction. The entries numbered fifty in six classes—not a bad turn-out for a four-months'-old society. Amongst the birds were some of excellent quality and type, which,—with a good moult, will be heard of again. Some grand light Linnet Mules were on exhibition, lent by Mr. Simpson, one of our committee men.

CROOK ORIGINAL C.B.R. AND P.S.

First open young stock Show under C.B.U. rules was held in the Mechanics' Hall on July 25th, when some excellent specimens came before the judge, Mr. T. Hill (Thornaby-on-Tees), whose awards all through gave general satisfaction. One notable feature of the show was the exhibits of Mr. J. Cuthbertson, a member from Darlington, who, in the open and members' classes claimed five 1sts and one 2nd with six entries. Considering the inclement weather the attendance was very satisfactory, several visitors leaving their names with officials to be nominated as members at the next meeting. The secretarial duties were ably carried out by Messrs. A. Bowes and J. Siddle, secretary and assistant-secretary respectively. Mr. J. Cuthbertson won the silver medal given by the society to members for most points with six entries in open and members' classes.

HAMILTON CADZOW OAKS O.S.

The second annual open show of young birds was held on July 25, in the Royal Hotel Billiard Room, New Cross, Hamilton. This is the only Open Show of Young Birds held in Scotland, but in view of the success attained on this occasion, others are likely to follow. Nearly 200 birds were staged, which for quality and type were superb. The society would be well advised to secure more commodious premises for their next show, as they may require a building next year as large as the Town Hall. So many visitors were present, we had some trouble to get near to take notes. Everything passed off without a hitch, and all credit is due to the secretary and treasurer, Q.M.Sgt. A. Cant, A.P.C., and Sgt. Smith, A.P.C., respectively. They had first, second, third, and other prizes made up and sealed in paper bags, and immediately after the judges had handed in their slips the successful exhibitors received their prize money in full. Mr. Wm. Haddow, President, of Border Fancy fame, also assisted in the management. The late secretary, Mr. R. Gudsden, presided at the smoking concert which followed. The musical programme included songs, comical readings, and flute and gramaphone selections, and the evening passed quickly away. Mr. Andrew Malcolmson judged Norwich, Mules, and Hybrids, and Mr. Thomas Ritchie the Border Fancies. Both gentlemen gave every satisfaction. CL. ETC. YELL. NOR.: 1, W. BRADFORD (East) O.S.

The second members' First Feather Show was held at Park Chapel Schools, on July 25th, Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bolton Woods) officiating as judge. The entries came up very well, 66 birds being staged in eight classes. The quality was of a very high order, and many of the exhibits, with a good moult, will give a fine account of themselves at the winter shows. Competition was very keen throughout, and in many of the classes a rare struggle was witnessed for the coveted points. Many of the competitors are running a close neck-to-neck race in this year's competition, and this has kept the interest in the shows at full height. The winners of most points at this show were Messrs. Cruise, Farrar, Crowther, Stables, Rushworth, and White; and all points gained count towards the Society's specials. The points gained so far by the first half-dozen in either section are as follows:—Champion Section:—Messrs. Farrar and Stables, 55; White, 47; Cruise, 30; Gelder, 35; Hill and Rushworth, 30 each. GLOSSOP, HADFIELD & DIST. C.B.S

The members held their first annual First Feather Show at headquarters, Howard Arms, Glossop, on July 25th. There was an excellent entry of 76 birds in 15 classes, and the members have every reason to be proud not only on account of the success of the show, but also because of the quality of the birds shown. The hon. secretary is Mr. Fred. Grieg, who is deserving of great credit for his able management of affairs. Mr. S. Constance (Macclesfield) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

AYR AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Usual monthly meeting, held in Good Templar Hall, on July 25. (Owing to our President having resigned, Mr. R. McKay, vice-president, was appointed president, and Mr. R. Cummings vice-president. Mr. John Steel (Whitletha), has been appointed on committee in place of Mr. Cummings. The motion to abolish Saturday meetings was put, but it was decided to continue them till May, next year. It was proposed to have a table show at next meeting, on Aug. 24, Mr. Allan Cassidy (New Prestwick) to judge. The classes arranged were: 1, Mule or Hybrid; 2, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite; 3, A.S. Softbill; 4, Greenfinch; 5, A.V. Canary Cock (Old); 6, A.V. do. (Young); 7, A.V. Canary Hen (Old); and 8, A.V. do. (Young). We were pleased to see a few Glasgow fanciers present. C. IRVINE, Sec.

KNOWLE (Bristol).

This show was held on July 24th and 25th in glorious weather. Again the committee were responsible for a very fine display of cage birds. So even in quality were some of the exhibits that in many instances the judge, Mr. G. W. Billett, had great difficulty in separating them. The birds were very nicely arranged and the visitors were many, the tent being crowded each day by well-known fanciers and interested friends. Norwich were a grand lot, and some very nice Yorkies were also staged. The condition all round was most admirable. The management was again in the hands of the secretary, Mr. F. Bucklaud, and the great success achieved again evidenced his fitness for the task. Mr. C. E. Brown won special for best Canary in show, with a fine Norwich. Mr. Brimble also obtained specials for best British with a grandly conditioned, nicely marked young Thrush.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

The third and final First Feather Show was held on July 22nd at the Boro' Restaurant, Plymouth, when 83 birds were staged. In connection with these shows challenge cups were competed for for the second year, the winner being the member making most points in three shows, viz., those in May, June, and July, the cups to be won twice before becoming the property of the holders. Throughout the three shows Yorkshires have had 54 entries, Mr. W. H. Olver winning the cup with 59 points, Mr. C. Harries gaining second prize with 41 points. The Norwich section obtained 66 entries, and in very keen competition. Mr. W. Spillman and Mr. S. C. Tucker each scored 39 points, and it was decided that each hold the cup for six months. Crests and Crest-breds produced an entry of 49 birds, Mr. J. Ryder winning cup for the second time with 61 points. Mr. A. Richards came second with 41 points. The A.O.V. class had but six entries, Mr. Pope winning cup with 27 points for the second year, Mr. C. Harries being runner-up with 14 points. Mules had an entry of 17, Mr. F. Wills winning cup with 51 points, Mr. Pope being second with 14 points. British and Foreign birds mustered 60 entries, Mr. F. Snell again winning cup with 83 points. Mr. Pridham was second with 65 points. Messrs. Ryder, Pope, and Snell thus become absolute owners of cups. The total entry in the three shows was 252, or an average of 84 per show—a result which we cannot but feel proud of. Mr. W. Spillman offered a special prize for the member making most points in July show only, which was won by Mr. W. H. Olver with 31 points, Mr. F. Wills running him close with one point less. The awards were placed by Mr. Cheney (Yorkshire, Mules, British, and Foreign birds), Mr. T. Weetle (Norwich), and Mr. C. Hoar (Crest and Crest-bred). Their awards were received with satisfaction. The attendance for a first feather show in Plymouth created a record. YORKS. YELL. (9): 1, 2, vhc, Olver; 3, 4, hc, c, Harries. BUFF (11): 1, 3, vhc, Olver; 2, c, Harries; 4, hc, Large. NOR. YELL. BARNSLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show held at the Clarence Hotel on July 18th. The entries totalled 45. Many fine birds were staged. The Yorkshires were better, taken all round, than has been seen in Barnsley for some years. Norwich were excellent, Mr. Thorpe winning silver medal for best. Mr. W. H. Lindley (Wombwell) judged Norwich and British birds, and Mr. Rapson the Yorkshires.

MORRISTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Feather Show held on July 25th at headquarters, the club-room of the Woodfield Coffee Tavern. This was an open show, and fanciers from Llanelly and Gorseinon and elsewhere took advantage of the occasion and supported the society well. The quality of the exhibits was excellent, some crack exhibits being staged. Mr. W. S. Kirby was well to the fore with his Norwich, taking special for best bird in show with a rare exhibit. Messrs. D. A. S. Longdon, T. Hopkins (treasurer), and H. Lewis, and the secretaries, Messrs. Jeremy and East, worked very hard, and had everything in good working order; the arrangements were got well in hand and in good time. Close on a hundred exhibits were staged. Mr. Phil Jenkins (Swansea) judged, and his awards met with general approval.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

The second annual Nest Feather Show was held in the Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook, Newcastle, on July 25th. There was a good array of young birds, and though the numbers fell short of last year's total, there is not the slightest doubt the general quality surpassed that of former years. The clear yellow class gave the judge some difficulty in separating. The clear buffs were also a good class, and some of the birds, if they get a good moult, should do well for their breeders, especially those belonging to the novices. The ticked Yellows filled well, and contained birds of exceptional merit. Ticked Buffs, thought not so numerous, were of a very high order of merit, and it was no disgrace in this class to be out of the tickets. The A.O.V. class contained only two entries. Where are those Greens and Cinnamon marks that this class was put on especially for? Mr. J. Shepherd (Newcastle) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

CL. YELL.: 1, best bird in show, etc., Cockburn, large, good head, back and wings; 2, Parker, fine position, nice back and wings; 3, Mather, nice back, well-rounded shoulders; vhc, hc, Carr. CLASS 2: 1, c, Grieve, first splendid Yorks., looks like a hen if so a good one, stands well, excellent feather; 2nd, best in show; 2, Hutler, another hen, good feather, excellent position and type; 3, vhc, Carr, big bird, excellent shape; hc, Heddon. TICKED, ETC., YELL.: 1, hc, Mather, nicely drawn; 2, Cockburn, very big bird; 3, Cockburn, similar in type to 2nd; vhc, Crawhall; c, Slack. BUFF: 1, Mather, ticked on head, good bird, long drawn, splendid flights, good position; 2, hc, Hutter, neck ticked, grand quality; 3, Grieve, wing and head marked, big, long drawn bird; vhc, Carr; hc, Hutter. A.O.V.: 1, Crawhall, foul green, well pencilled, nicely drawn; 2, Slack, cinnamon wing marked.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Hon. Sec.

The Bedford fanciers have had a good season as regards Norwich Canaries. Messrs. Gentle, Keech, Wiggins, Osborne, Markham, Mortimer, Millard, Corrie, and Smith, have each from 30 to 70 on the sticks, while several others have from 10 to 30 each, all doing well.—A LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.

GAERWEN, ANGLESEY.

This show was held on July 15th. Considering the time of the year there was a very nice display of cage birds. In the seven classes provided there was an entry of 41. The old-hand secretary, Mr. J. Thomas, is an excellent official, and, assisted by a good working committee, he had had the arrangements well carried out. Mr. E. D. Owen judged.

YORKS.: 1, spl, W. H. Williams, Yellow, neat head, capital length and carriage, stands well on legs; 2, Owens Brothers, ticked wing, Yellow, nice feather and quality; 3, Jones, another long Yellow, stands on a pair of good legs; res, vhc, H. H. Williams, Yellow; hc, Evans; c, Roberts. NOR.: 1, spl, 2, Mrs. Winnard, 1st nice-shaped Yellow, good colour and quality, short wings and tail; 2nd, Yellow, well up in shape and quality; 3, J. O. Williams, Crest-bred, good size; res, J. Williams; vhc, W. H. Williams; hc, Rev. R. T. Jones; c, O. Jones. MULES: 1, spl, E. J. Jones, dark Yellow Goldfinch-Canary, good size and colour, nice blaze; 2, R. Thomas, variegated, nice quality; 3, res, Humphreys, variegated, nice quality; 4, Winnard, down in condition; vhc, Brothers; hc, Aitken. GOLDFINCH: 1, spl, 2, Owens Brothers, 1st a gem for shape and colour, good head and blaze, lovely face, nice back, good bars and buttons; 2nd, another good Finch, nice shape and colour; 3, Hughes, well up in shape. BLACK LEGS: 1, Brothers good size, nice shape and colour; 2, Parry, grand size and shape; 3, Winnard, nice Finch; 4, R. Thomas. A.O.V. BIRD: 1, Owens Brothers, good all-round Greenfinch, well shaped, very rich body colour, good bars and tail; 2, Winnard, Bullfinch, nice shape and colour; 3, H. H. Williams, Lark, in splendid trim. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (Local): 1, Jones, good head and blaze, nice bars and buttons; 2, 3, Parry, two nice Goldies.

The Selborne Society's Sanctuary.

The Selborne Society has a bird sanctuary almost within the London area, with all the wild beauty one might expect to see a hundred miles from the Metropolis. Here wild birds are given perfect freedom and protection. And here, too, wild flowers are allowed to grow in profusion. This sanctuary has been in the possession of the Society for about five years now, and beyond cutting a few rough paths and the sowing of some seeds of wild flowers, there has been no interference with Nature.

A COLUMN FOR FANCIERS.

Appended are brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers and lovers of birds, with post free prices.

"THE HYGIENE OF BIRD-KEEPING." - 1d.
By W. GEO. CRESWELL, M.D.
A most useful manual, thoroughly treating of modern hygiene in bird-keeping, by the most eminent living authority on the subject.

"SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE." - 7d.
By K. H. CLARKE, M.D.,
A very useful booklet concerning this dread disease. It is the only one published, and should be found in every bird-lover's library. Dr. Clarke has given the subject very exhaustive attention.

"THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY." 1½d
By J. H. PAYNE.
A Lecture reprinted from CAGE BIRDS, delivered by this leading judge and expert before the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, and pronounced by all experts to be a most valuable pamphlet concerning the breeding of the variety.

BREEDING CAGE LABELS, 1d. doz., 7 doz. 6d
A boon to all breeders. Neatly printed in sets of twelve, on perforated gummed paper. They can be torn off, and affixed to the breeding cage in a moment, and prevent all confusion. Useful alike to both small and large breeders of birds.

CARD BREEDING REGISTERS, 1d. each, 4 for 3d., 9 for 6d.
For hanging up in the birdroom. Printed on suitable stiff card, they are ruled to hold a complete record of the breeding results of six pairs of birds; invaluable for future reference, to ensure that knowledge of one's stock essential to accurate breeding.

LIVE BIRD LABELS, 24, 3d.; 50, 6d.; 100, 1/-
For use when despatching live birds on journeys by rail, or to the shows, etc. Printed in red ink and gummed on back. The simplest, neatest, and best on the market.

NOTE PAPER & POSTCARDS, 250 for 2/-; 500 for 2/6.
Until further notice we have decided to supply below cost price artistic Memorandum Forms and stout postcards, with name, address, twelve words of particulars, and blocks of any special variety of bird at half cost for cash. Carriage paid to any address in the U.K. Our latest style of note-head and postcard has been universally admired, and we will gladly send specimens to anyone enclosing stamped addressed envelope.

BLOCKS OF BIRDS, 1/6 each, 5 for 6/-, or 9 for 10/-
For inserting in advertisements and for printing memorandums blocks of all kinds of birds at above low prices can be supplied. Larger blocks to order at cheapest possible rates. These dainty little blocks immensely enhance the appearance of note paper, postcards, and advertisements.

PICTURE POSTCARDS, 1d. each; set of six, 6d.
The most delightful and appropriate postcards of Canaries, British Birds, and Hybrids on the market, executed in colours by Mr. H. Norman. Ideal for Fanciers' correspondence. All represent exact and correct show types and have accompanying descriptions. State which bird or birds are required, or whether a mixed selection is preferred.
The latest set is entitled, "Pairs Matched for Breeding"; very educational art postcards. Price 3d. set of 8.

ORNAMENTAL PLATES, 1/- & 1/6 each.
The following coloured plates of cage Birds can be obtained mounted on stiff card and gelatined. This process makes them washable and gives them the handsome appearance and all the durability of framed plates under glass:—Bullfinch, Blackbird and Robin, Border Fancy Canary, Bullfinch Hybrids, Cinnamon Canary, Cinnamon Marked Yorkshires, Foreign Finches, Goldfinch and Bullfinch, Hybrids (popular), Lancashire and Lizards, Mules (popular), Norwich (Yellow), Parrakeets, Yorkshires. The Great Auk.

Everyone knows how valuable a genuine specimen of the egg of the Great Auk is, and one does not wonder that these birds become extinct when one reads the following, which was taken from an old book on Newfoundland, published in 1620:—"Among the waterfowl are Penguins, which are as biggo as geese, and flye not, for they have but a little, short wing, and they multiply so infinitely upon certain flat islands that men drive them from thence upon a board into their boates by hundreds at a time, as if God had made the innocency of so poore a creature to become such an admirable instrument for the sustentation of man. Such slaughter soon cleared them off, and in about 1620, they became extinct."

TWITTERINGS.

My address is now 20, College Road, Harrogate, writes Mr. G. H. Barnwell, hon. sec. of the Harrogate C.B.S.

Mr. Wm. Moss (Halsall Lane), has been appointed hon. treasurer of the Ormskirk and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. T. H. Tiffen, the hon. sec.

We made two new members at our First Feather Show, held on July 18th, writes Mr. H. H. Turner, hon. sec. of the Morley and Dis. C.B.S.

Will Miss G. Pennell (of Balham, S.W.), who sent us a letter respecting an advertisement, kindly forward her address, which seems to have been omitted?

The show of the Sudbury and Dis. C.B., etc., Society, "The Premier Show of Suffolk," has been fixed for November 10th next, writes Mr. Charles H. Row, the hon. sec.

Kindly state that in future the monthly meetings of the Dulwich O.S. will be held on the fourth Thursday in the month, write Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, hon. secs.

Please thank all who answered my advertisement in last week's CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. N. W. Duggins (Matlock), as they were too numerous for me to answer individually.

The 17th annual cage bird show in connection with the Bournemouth and Dis. C.B.A., writes Mr. J. W. Jones, the hon. sec., will be held on December 1st and 2nd, in the Winter Gardens.

Will "J.P." who wrote us last week on the subject of peacocks' feathers kindly communicate his address, which seems to have been mislaid, as we have received a letter requiring to be forwarded to him.

The Battersea and Dis. C.B.S. would like to hear of any fancier wishing to join this go-ahead society. Annual open show, October 14th to 15th. Information from F. Easterling, 5, St. Mark's Road, Fulham Road.—(ADVT.)

Mr. J. W. Levitt, the aviculturist in charge of the splendid collection of birds owned by the Rev. B. Hemsworth, M.A., J.P. (Monk Fryston Hall, Yorks), writes that the King Parrakeets there are rearing three young ones, which were hatched on June 22nd last.

We hear that Mr. J. Dobson, of London, has accepted the following judging engagements for the coming show season:—Bermondsey, Sept. 19th; Bromley, Oct. 28th; Manchester, Oct. 30th; Portsmouth, Nov. 4th; Brighton, Nov. 24th; Norwich, Nov. 28th; Palace, Feb. 5th, 1909.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Owing to the August Bank Holiday, the office of "Cage Birds" will be closed from Saturday to Monday next, inclusive.

Will Advertisers and Correspondents generally kindly note that all matter intended for next week's issue should be posted early, to reach us on Tuesday, August 4th.

We are holding a special meeting on August 1st, at our club house, Fawcett Street, write Messrs. Reid and Maddison, hon. secs of the Sunderland C.B.A., to consider the proposal of one of the leading specialist clubs to hold their club show in conjunction with ours on November 20th and 21st. It is hoped all members will attend.

We have received copies of the latest leaflets issued by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. These deal with the utilization of peat-lands, the management of cider orchards, and treatments for the various diseases, and blights, etc. Readers interested in these subjects should write to the secretary of the Board, 4, Whitehall Place, London, S.W., from whom copies may be had free on application.

The July issue of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—is full of interesting matter. Mr. H. Wormald's article is both informative and readable, and is accompanied by two excellent plates reproduced from the author's own drawings. Mr. Douglas Dewar, I.C.S., writes on "Indian Paroquets," Mr. W. E. Teschemaker contributes some Nesting Notes, and Mr. W. T. Page continues his observations on "Some Recent Acquisitions." The Ribbon Finch," by "Aviculturist," and other notes complete the number.

The usual monthly meeting of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. will not take place in August, owing to the date fixed coming on the Thursday after Bank-holiday, and to so many of our members being away on holiday, writes Mr. W. Hodson, the hon. sec. The series of lectures arranged will be continued at our September meeting. A committee meeting will shortly be held to make preliminary arrangements and classification for our annual show. Suggestions from members will be welcomed, and will receive every consideration.

It was a great pleasure to me, on returning from a fortnight's holiday, to find you had honoured me by reproducing the picture of my Crystal Palace winning clear Yellow Norwich Plainhead on the front of our ever popular journal, CAGE BIRDS. I may say he has been exhibited at a great many of our principal shows, over 20 in all, and only three times was he out of the money, never being lower than v.h.c.—really a good reputation. I may say I have had a fairly good season with my Norwich, having between 40 and 50 doing for themselves. I have also five Goldfinch-Canary Mules all variegated, which is rather exceptional. I may say the hen was bred from the mother of my well-known 6-pointed Goldfinch-Canary Mule. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it deserves. I always look forward to receiving it on Fridays.—A. E. WALLEY (Gloucester).

The Brighton F. and F.S. First Feather show is to be held on August 6th, writes Mr. C. Pearson, when Mr. W. Swaysland will judge.

We are informed that Messrs. Bailey and Swanger have removed to larger premises at 8, South View Terrace, Sandy Lane, Allerton, Bradford.

Kindly thank for me, through the medium of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. F. Clark (Portsmouth), all those who replied to my advertisement, as I have had so many applications that I cannot write to all.

On behalf of the members of the Ormskirk and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. T. H. Tiffin, the hon. sec., allow me to thank you for the excellent descriptive report which you gave of their young bird show. Needless to say it was much appreciated.

I received CAGE BIRDS in due course from home, writes Lance-Corpl. T. Smith (The Buffs, Orange River Colony), and I appreciated the last instalment of Mr. J. Jeffrey's article, "Experiences with the Nightingale," very much. I thought that particular number of CAGE BIRDS was very interesting, especially for wild-bird lovers.

A remarkable story concerning a bird's nest comes from Redditch way. Mr. Hemming, of Proctor Farm, situate about a mile and a half from Redditch, is accustomed to drive daily to the town with a consignment of milk. The vehicle, a milk float of the usual type, is provided with a box-seat, and the owner has not had occasion to use the receptacle for some months past. Recently, however, he lifted up the seat, and to his amazement discovered a "Tom Collics's" (Blue Tit's) nest with six eggs. The bird was calmly sitting, and although Mr. Hemming has since used the float morning and evening, neither the jolting of the vehicle nor the roar of town traffic appears to disturb it in the least.

Paying the Penalty.

From the report of the Cage Bird Union District Committee No. 1, we learn that a well-known northern fancier (Mr. T. C. Crawball), has been suspended for one month during the height of the next show season, for exhibiting at a non-affiliated and non-licensed fixture.

The Artful Rook Again.

It is said that in a certain part of North Wales there is a rookery where in the breeding season the ground beneath the nests is strewn with small potatoes of about equal sizes. The explanation given is that the Rooks use these potatoes for measuring the nests with in order to ensure correct dimensions for the accommodation of the eggs.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

The following societies have applied for the patronage and support of the Y.C.C., and will come before the committee for allotment on August 1st, viz.:—Skelmanthorpe, Oct. 3rd; Great Harwood, Oct. 9th; Darlington, Oct. 17th, Cambridge, Rochdale, Accrington, Newcastle, and Derby, Oct. 22nd, 23rd, and 24th; Dulwich O.S. and Gloucester, Oct. 28th; North Shields, York, Manchester, and Bradford City, Oct. 30th and 31st,; Southend-on-Sea, Nov. 3rd; Morecambe, Dulwich and Peckham, Blackburn, Liverpool, Rochdale G.I., and Shipley, Nov. 4th to 7th; Bristol, Nov. 11th; Wallsend, Laisterdyke, and Preston, Nov. 13th and 14th; Wimbledon, Nov. 17th; Worcester, Nov. 19th; Sunderland and Crook, Nov. 20th and 21st; Jarrow, Littleborough, Huddersfield, and Long Eaton, Nov. 27th to 31st; Harrogate and Cockermouth, Dec. 4th and 5th; St. Helen's, Gateshead, and Pendleton and Salford, Dec. 10th to 12th; Scottish National and Great Horton, Jan. 1st and 2nd, 1909; Keighley, Jan. 9th; Windhill, Jan. 16th; Halifax, Jan. 22nd; Bradford East, Jan. 30th; and Crystal Palace, Feb. 5th, 6th, 8th, and 9th.—JOHN GREAVES, hon. sec.

London Federation of Cage Bird Societies.

We have received from Mr. P. Adamthwaite, the sec. pro tem of the proposed Federation of London societies, a copy of the rules of same, as revised and passed at the last meeting of delegates, held on June 16th. The object of the Federation is a three-fold one—the maintenance of the standard points of Canaries and other cage birds, the suppression of fraud and dishonourable conduct in connection therewith, and the advancement and protection of the interests of breeders and exhibitors. Rule 10 provides for the payment of an entry fee of 2s. 6d. by each society wishing to join the Federation, in addition to the annual levy per member. In relation to shows held under the rules of the Federation, judges are to be instructed to disqualify and mark any specimen whose plumage is found to have been drawn, trimmed, painted, or artificially coloured, or in whose case fraudulent practices have been resorted to. In the event of anyone wishing to lodge a protest against an exhibitor, from whatsoever cause, he may do so on payment of a deposit of 5s. to the show secretary, which deposit will be returned if the protest is sustained, and forfeited if it is not sustained. It is further provided that either party to a dispute shall have the right to appeal to the Council of the Federation. Rule 21 states that entries for winter shows held under the Federation rules must close at least three days before the date of such shows; otherwise they will be returned to the sender. There are in all 35 rules, 7 of which are to be included in the schedules of all shows held under the Federation rules. Definitions of the terms "Novice," "Amateur," and "Champion," as adopted by the delegates, are given with the rules.

Torturing a Parrot.

Sentence of six weeks' hard labour was recently passed on a tile layer, for torturing a Parrot. It appears that the defendant visited a Vauxhall beer-house, took the Parrot from its cage, and plucked several feathers from the tail and wings, causing blood to flow.

Rising to Hear the Nightingale.

A Nightingale, it is said, strayed into the Wigan mining district, and was heard singing in the night time at Haigh. The bird's song delighted the people in the neighbourhood, who have gone so far as to set the alarmm for 2 o'clock in the morning, so that they might rise before the sun to listen to it.

Public Aviaries.

Public aviaries seem to be very popular at present, and deservedly so. In the Lancashire and Cheshire districts this applies with special force, and we notice that Macclesfield and Heywood are the latest to move in the matter. It is pleasing to see cage-bird fanciers taking the initiative; in the case of Macclesfield, that well-known fancier, Mr. S. R. Compston, offered to guarantee a stock of Canaries and British birds if only the public authorities would provide the aviary.

Where Larks Fall Dead!

There is an Irish legend relating to the banning of the Lark in the Valley of Glendalough. When the Seven Churches of that famous valley were being built, the holy St. Kevin commanded the workmen to take an oath that they would "rise with the Lark and lie down with the lamb," but the song-bird rose so early that the workmen, aroused from their slumbers before they were sufficiently rested, died from exhaustion. St. Kevin released the men from their oath by praying that henceforth no Lark should sing in the valley. So completely was the saint's prayer answered that, according to the legend, the song of the Lark has never since enlivened the weird and gloomy Vale of Glendalough. Certain guides improve the story by telling visitors that people yearly come to Glendalough bringing Larks in cages, and that when the birds are released they fall dead into the waters of the lake at the head of the valley before they have been able to utter a note.

Australia at the Zoo.

We have already referred to Mr. Seth-Smith's recent successful visit to Australia, on behalf of the London Zoo, in search of birds, beasts, etc., for the Regents Park collection. Although the duck-billed Platypus—that strange beast which, on account of its inexplicable conjunction of a beast's fur and duck-like bill, some early Nineteenth Century naturalists refused to believe in—and the Lyre-Bird, which it is hoped to save from extinction by Lord Avebury's Plumage Bill, are not included, the collection seems to be generally acknowledged as the largest and best assemblage of representatives of the Australian fauna ever brought together. Many examples of Parrots will be a delight to the aviculturist. The Keas, which attack and kill sheep for the sake of the kidney fat, the great Black Cockatoos, and some of the brush-tongued Parrots will be sure to attract considerable attention. Mr. Seth-Smith has also two of the fine Australian Bustards, which are strictly protected; a number of Brush Turkeys, which get rid of the duties of incubation by depositing their eggs in a mound of earth and decaying vegetation; Black Swans, Geese, Ducks, Herons, Ibises, Birds of Prey, and Owls, Cassowaries, Emus, Pelicans, Kiwis, and Weka Rails, which have lost the power of flight; Laughing Kingfishers, including the rare fawn-breasted species; Piping-Crows, Pigeons, Whip-Bird (the first imported), so called because its note sounds like the crack of a whip-thong; Frog-Mouths, an exaggerated form of Nightjar, and cages full of insectivorous birds and exquisitely-coloured Finches.

A Tale of a Cuckoo.

A pair of Robins once built in the ivy in my garden wall. One morning, when they were away on a worm-hunting tour next door, a Cuckoo called and left a great, fat egg in their snug little bed. They returned soon after the fell deed had been accomplished, and I never in my life saw two such surprised birds. It was really laughable to watch their antics. First, the hen went in by the front door. She returned immediately, and joined her mate with her feathers all a'swell like an angry tom cat's tail. "Did you ever!!!" she shrilled in her tiny, high treble. "What do you think has happened? Just go in and have a look at them eggs, Cockie!" Cockie obeyed, and presently he emerged and said, as plain as bird ever said, "Well, I'm d— d!" Then they both disappeared in the ivy, to gaze at the interloping egg, and to chatter over this most remarkable happening. In the end they decided to make the best of a bad job, and sat hard in turn, until one fine morning the giant oval like the roc's egg in the Eastern tale) fell to pieces, and a great, ugly, ravenous thing was hatched—a monstrosity all mouth and tummy, and everlastingly screaming for food. It would take anything: I don't believe tin tacks would have come amiss to the terror. As soon as the pin-feathers began to arrive, I took pity on Mr. and Mrs. Robin, and put Master Cuckoo in a cage with a wide-meshed wire covering, and fed it myself with anything that came handy—oatmeal, potatoes, cheese-rind, hard-boiled eggs, chops, steaks, cutlets, and so on.—H. ASHTON, in the "Morning Leader."

Nesting of the Wryneck.

One may occasionally catch a glimpse of the mottled plumage of the Wryneck among the thick branches of the old trees. This bird selects a hole in one of the limbs or trunk, and deposits the eggs on the powdered wood at the bottom, building no nest whatever. In localities where Starlings and Jackdaws are numerous, the Wryneck must have some difficulty in finding a suitable site, and it is just possible that in time the bird will be crowded out and be obliged to move to less inhabited districts. Although to our eyes one hole is quite as suitable as another for nesting purposes, birds evidently do not think so.

Gulls in Norfolk.

The extensive tract of marsh land around Wells, in Norfolk, where many rare birds are strictly preserved, has added one more to its list, in the Black-headed Gull. These have not nested here for years. A writer in a contemporary says: "For seventy years the place knew them not, except as passing visitors throwing a hasty and dubious glance over their shoulders as they flew inland for a meal and out again to sea. But such fleeting visits seem to have shown them one thing—that this wide tract of saltings is singularly quiet and remote, that it is sheltered behind the great sand barrier, and that there is plenty to be found in the way of food both in pools left by the receding tide and in the neighbouring fields."

Colouration in Birds.

The colouration and marking of birds arises from such a complication of causes that it can only as yet be explained partially. One of the reasons assigned is that the greater magnificence in the male serves to attract the notice and compliance of the female. This has been contested by some writers, but it still remains a valid theory. The most important explanation, however, yet advanced for the colour or markings of the majority of birds is that their appearance is thereby adapted to their surroundings, and enables them either as pursuer or pursued to escape observation. It would seem that in the main few persons who have studied wild bird life can refuse to believe in the existence and practical value of protective or assimilative colouration. Who, for example, that has seen a Bittern amongst reeds and tree stumps can refuse to believe that for some purpose best known to itself the creature is posing in such a way that its marking, colouring, and attitude deceive the eye of everything that is not a Bittern? Even the magnificent crimson and blue-green Bee-eaters of tropical Africa have a way of perching on bare bushes so that they exactly resemble large crimson flowers. The precise purpose in this deception is no doubt to attract insects on which they pounce.

A Splendid Collection.

We gather from a Blackburn contemporary that Mr. J. Walsh, the Blackburn bird specialist, recently paid a visit to the open-air aviaries at Stonyhurst College, on the invitation of the Rev. Francis Irwin, who has charge of the birds. The large aviary is about 100 feet long, 12 feet wide, and 12 feet high. It is made of open wire, but there is a shelter at one end to which the occupants can resort in stormy weather. In this place Mr. Walsh found a nest of a Californian Quail containing ten eggs, three Bullfinch nests (also with eggs), Canary and Linnet, with three young birds; Redpoll, with young; two Chaffinch nests, with eggs; Greenfinch nest, with young; two Blackbird nests, with eggs; one Thrush nest, with young; yellow and green Budgerigars, nesting; and a pair of Cockatoels, with eggs. He also noticed the following birds in the large aviary:—Silky Cowbird, Pekin Robins, Virginian Nightingale, Brambie-finches, Reed Bantings, Nuthatches, Knots, Brown Linnets, Twites, Longtail Grassfinches, Goldfinches, Hedge Sparrow, Skylark, Woodlarks, Redwings, Hawfinch, White Blackbird, Red-crested Cardinals, Weavers, Java Doves, Picqui Dove, Cape Dove, and Zebra Dove. An interesting point in regard to the nesting place was that though there were plenty of ordinary nest pans and boxes, a Canary preferred to build its nest among the grass on the floor. Father Irwin has a special pet in the aviary in the shape of a young Cockatoel, which was born on St. Patrick's day. This bird he has named "Patsy." It will instantly come to him when called, and will perch on his head or shoulders whilst he is walking about. Another smaller aviary contains Barn, Tawny, and Long-eared Owls, Rough-legged Buzzard, and a perfect specimen of the rare Eagle Owl, which is in splendid feather and exceedingly tame. There were also a pair of young Herons, four weeks old, in another part of the grounds, and a nest of young Sparrow Hawks, which were being hand-reared. Two Tawny Owls, which had been incubated a fortnight before, and a nest of five young Magpies, were also to be seen. Everything about the aviaries is kept perfectly clean and in good condition, and the birds themselves are perfection. In return for the hospitality extended to him by his host, Mr. Walsh presented Father Irwin with an English cock Nightingale and a cock Crimson Bishop.

USE OUR PICTURE POSTCARDS

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Recurrence of Colds.

"Colds, etc."—I have not the least doubt that the open window is the indirect cause of your trouble, and I think the solution of the difficulty lies in altering the position of the cages, which are probably so arranged that when the wind blows in a certain direction the draught from the window finds its way into the cage. As you are away from home so long at a time you must use discretion in opening the windows before you leave in the morning. During quite settled weather at this time of the year you might put up the bottom sash about one foot, and pull down the top one about the same distance, and as the weather gets colder decrease this distance; but always open top and bottom, as this alone will help to prevent draughts going about the room. Then you should see if you cannot discover a suitable place for the cages where they will get no direct draught even with a wide open window. If you cannot do this then you should arrange a curtain of light muslin between the cages and the window in such a position that it will turn or break up any direct current of air. Certainly this trouble is not what every fancier has to contend with, but it is what everyone must seek to avoid. Obliterate all draughts without cutting off efficient ventilation and the trouble will soon disappear. The mixture you have given is as good as anything you could give, but it is useless giving medicine unless the cause of the trouble is removed.

A Moss Gatherer.

S.M.W.D.—Your bird is evidently not a Roller in the sense one could wish it to be. I fancy its condition is due to its being in an overfed condition, and its age is a little against its throwing it off. For the next fortnight feed him on plain Canary seed only, with a free supply of green-food—chickweed, lettuce, or groundsel—every day, and every second day for the first week give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water. Twice during the second week give a similar dose. After this you may add to the diet half a teaspoonful of rape and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake twice a week, giving each on a separate day for variety; and in the water give one day four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid, and on the next twelve drops of chemical food. Continue giving these alternately for another fortnight, if necessary. Of course, you must see it is not exposed to draught, and also that it is free from red mites.

Not "Catching."

F. Sparrow.—I hardly think the complaint is "catching" unless other birds come into actual contact with it or any of its evacuations. It would, however, be wise to move it to a room by itself and thus avoid all risk. Am afraid it is already beyond the reach of any remedy, but you may try following treatment: First, if its bowels are constipated give twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for one day only; if the bowels already move freely you may omit this and give twelve drops of glycerine, three of oil of eucalyptus, and as much chlorate of potash in the water daily for a week as will cover a sixpence, and every second day for another week after that. Shake bottle vigorously when using in order to well break up the oil. For a few days paint the mouth and throat inside with a saturated solution of boric acid. Get a flight or tail feather of a bird, wash it clean, dip it in the solution and just brush with it round the inside of the bird's mouth and into its throat. Feed on plain Canary seed, with a small piece of bread and milk with two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it daily until an improvement has taken place. Shall be glad to hear result in a fortnight's time.

Is it Shepherd's Purse?

T.G.—No, the specimens you sent are in no respect even similar to shepherd's-purse. The seeds are those of the Yellow Rattle. I have never tried it for bird's food, but as it contains a fairly large seed doubtless some varieties would appreciate it. The seeds of the shepherd's purse are, in the shape of the seed pods, much more similar to "quaking grass" than to those you sent, and the seed pods grow up a stalk after the manner of the plantain, but much more sparsely and are wider apart.

The Correct Colour Food.

A. P.—You are using far more Natal pepper than you need, and I do not approve of any unnecessary use of the hot pepper. As you seem to be vacillating between so many different opinions as to the proper food to use, you cannot do better than throw them all overboard, and adopt the following mixture, which is generally approved by experienced breeders, and which I know to be excellent. Get a pound of tasteless red pepper, two ounces of Natal, and four ounces of soft sugar. Place all in a basin or dish large enough to give ample space for stirring about, and thoroughly mix and blend all together with the back of a spoon. If you prefer adding oil to it, you may now add one ounce of the best salad oil, pouring in a few drops at a time, and continuing the blending between each addition until all is used, and then go on stirring a little longer, until none of the oil can be detected by sight, being all thoroughly and evenly distributed throughout the bulk. Now store the mixture in glass or earthenware air-tight jars, with wide mouths. For use add two teaspoonfuls of the colour mixture to each small teacupful of egg food when ready to give the birds, and well mix all together. This is for the beginning of the moult. When it gets in full swing, increase the quantity of colour mixture to four teaspoonfuls to each cupful of food, and when it is nearly over again, decrease the quantity to the original amount to finish off with. You will find this method much more constant and reliable than mixing the food up piecemeal, as it were, by adding the different ingredients to the egg food each day as required for use.

Youngsters Sleepy and Ruffled.

T.A.H., York.—It seems there is nothing more serious the matter with your birds than that the moult is coming on them. Your feeding is not much amiss, but you should give a small spray of green-food daily, either chickweed or the tender flower heads of groundsel, and twice a week give a pinch of hemp and a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg-food, or a small piece of bread and milk—not altogether, but one at a time on different days, so as to form a variety. If this does not at once make the bowels more free, give in an ounce of drinking water for one day only a saline aperient in the shape of as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence.

Preparing for Next Season.

Eroom, B.—Certainly, it would be a good plan to fix up the room as you suggest, and allow the birds to fly about at liberty until next spring. The exercise thus obtained would go far towards making them strong and robust for a good successful season next year. Next spring, just before it is time to commence breeding, you will have to cage the birds up separately if you wish to keep the different varieties pure, or to exercise any control over their breeding. If you do not desire to do this you might leave them flying loose and allow six hens to run with two vigorous active young cocks. In this case you would put up at least a dozen nests in different places, and arrange perches and bushes about the room, as described in our "Novices' Notebook" during last February, which numbers you would do well to look up. CAGE BIRDS' special handbook on "Bird-rooms, Aviaries, etc.," would also doubtless be of much service to you. As to whether you should dispense with artificial heat would depend solely upon the way in which your birds have been reared, and, to a less degree, upon the position and construction of the room. If they had been accustomed to a heated room I would scarcely advise you to dispense with it entirely the first winter. Much better get a hardy class of bird to begin with.

Sore Under Beak.

W. J. H.—The sore will not be likely to heal much as long as the bird continues rubbing it. Give it rather thin perches for the present, and keep it very clean by scraping or washing it daily to keep the sore as free as possible from contact with dirt. Catch the bird each morning and night, and paint over the sore place with a camel hair pencil dipped in extract of wych hazel, which you will be able to get from almost any chemist. This should soon put matters all right, but if it does not appear to heal quickly enough, omit the painting with the extract three nights a week, and anoint it slightly with boric ointment instead.

Young Birds Moping.

H. L. H., Leicester.—The bird is evidently a weakly specimen, and may have been hatched a day or so after the others, and thus got a poor start in life, which it has not yet outgrown. Feed it on a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape seed, and give a pinch of hemp, and ditto of maw, twice a week, not both together, but each on a different day. For the first week give also half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg food daily, and mix with it every second day three drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and on the alternate days five drops of Chemical Food. In each ounce of drinking water add two drops of tincture of steel every second day for a week. Give no green food until better, unless it is a half-ripened plantain seed stalk, about every second day. If the bird is not considerably better after a week of this treatment, move it indoors to a room without a fire, but see that it is free from draughts, and continue the same treatment for another week or so. If not well by that time write again.

A Clean Moult.

"Moult."—Your bird is simply going through an early moult quite naturally, and will not recommence singing until it has quite finished casting all its small feathers, and they are practically full-grown again. This will probably not be for another month yet, but you need not worry if the bird does not begin to sing for several weeks longer, as some birds are much longer in recommencing their song than others. It is a mistake to call it a clean moult when only the long wing and tail feathers are shed. These feathers are cast first in adult birds, but afterwards all the small feathers on the body have to be shed and reproduced before a bird can be called clean-moulted. In young birds of the year the wing and tail feathers are not shed at all. Keep the bird free from chills and draughts; allow it to bathe when it likes, and give a pinch of maw seed every second day, and a teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, in addition to the usual plain seed diet and green food daily. And, when nearly all the small feathers are cast, give five drops of tincture of steel in the water twice a week, for a week or two, and nothing else will be required.

A Botanical Specimen.

A. A. (East Ham).—The specimen you send is a seed stalk of the broad-leaved plantain. Canaries, and most of the Finch tribe are exceptionally fond of them, and the green seed stalks may be given quite freely. Both the size of the plant and the length of the seed stalks vary considerably, according to the conditions under which they grow. Yes, they are what are popularly termed Something in the Throat.

Mrs. R. E. Smith.—The bird is rapidly going wheezy, as the trouble is aptly termed. See that it is kept quite free from all draught, and from any great variations in temperature, but at the same time do not keep it where it will get overheated. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple diet. In addition to this give a pinch of hemp twice a week, and a small teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, to which add three drops of cod liver oil emulsion each time until the bird is well, but not afterwards; and every day give a spray of chickweed, or a bit of groundsel. This diet will be quite sufficient for it. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus every day for a week. After that give it every second day for another week, or until the bird is well, and on the intervening days give twelve drops of Chemical Food in the water. Shake the vessel vigorously when giving the first mixture in order to break up the oil into minute globules. See that the bird is not troubled with insects at night, and give gritty sand regularly. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird is in a fortnight, and to advise further if necessary.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Thrushes and Thrush Food.

Turdus Musicus.—1. You should begin to give the colour-food right away to your Thrushes. Many of my own Softbills are now well on in the moult, some quite half way through, and one needs to start well in time to give pepper to those it is intended shall be colour-fed. 2. Three feet by two feet is a nice size for a Thrush's stock cage, but 14 inches from back to front is, to my mind, not sufficient. I like the house-cage to be 14 inches wide at least, and 16 or 18 is better still. I do not advise you to turn the two Thrushes into the empty outdoor aviary to moult. It would almost certainly result in their getting very wild, and before you afterwards got them steadied down sufficiently for show purposes, they would be quite likely to break or fray tail and flight feathers. 3. The food looks to be very fair value for the price named. But it contains too much biscuit in proportion to other ingredients to meet my own liking. If you added ground silkworm pupæ (or even meat meal) in the proportion of one to four, it would be brought nearer the mark. You could (and should) now and again mix in a finely-minced hard-boiled egg.

Blackbirds and Siskins.

Stock.—1. It is not exactly easy for anybody unacquainted with the species to sex Blackbirds when in nestling plumage. An old fancier can do it, however, with almost certainty. The young males have the wing (flight) and tail feathers a shade darker in colour than the young hens. Thus, if you select out of the nest the youngster with the blackest-looking wings, you are pretty certain to hit on a cock bird. 2. The bills of the males turn golden the spring after they are born, though often not becoming quite clear until the second spring. A male seldom exhibits the perfection of "crocus" bill and cere colour until three years old. Still, colour feeding does much to put a younger male on a par with his elder kith and kin in this respect. 3. It is nonsense for anyone to say that the Blackbird will sing for but three months of the year. It is true they do not sing for quite the same length of time as the Song Thrush, but, under favourable conditions, you might venture to multiply the three by three and arrive at a more correct answer. 4. The hen Siskin may be described as looking like a cock bird which has had all the yellows and greens washed out of his plumage, leaving only the markings and an ashy-greyness (with faint indications of yellow and green) behind. She is, too, more heavily streaked with black on sides and flanks, as a rule, and all the black markings are dingier than in the male. A cock Siskin, unless a very bad-coloured specimen indeed, has always an appreciable amount of yellow and green in his colour-scheme. 5. I believe this has been discontinued.

Song of Thrushes & Blackbird.

Boss Bee.—I don't think it is at all difficult to account for the "loss of voice" of your two Thrushes and the Blackbird. To put it bluntly, I consider it is due to the wretched food you supply them with. "Crushed hemp and soaked bread"—poor things. As a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, I should have thought you would have seen references in this column to the utter inadequacy and unsuitability of such a diet, for such references have been frequently made by me. It often happens that a newly obtained bird will sing for a season on such food as you say you have been giving yours. But this diet gradually affects its constitution, then comes along the moult, and the bird has not sufficient vitality to throw off its effects (possibly not even to reproduce its plumage properly), the consequence of this—or one consequence—being absence of song. Is the Blackbird, by the bye, troubled at all with red-mite? I have often outlined the way in which Thrushes and the like ought to be fed, and repeat the information here in brief. You really cannot expect success unless you treat the birds properly. This stock mixture any good seller of bird foods will mix for you (store it in tins): Game (or Pheasant or Partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good mule eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the game (or other) meat without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes make an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with a little water, or grated raw carrot, or cold boiled potato, or finely chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard boiled egg, finely minced up, twice or so a week. Give three or four mealworms daily, and any other insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. Black beetles and snails (especially snails dropped into boiling water for a few minutes, then chopped up), are much relished.

A Muling Failure.

Avis.—It is really difficult to see what advice I can give you. From your letter it seems clear that you yourself see that the failure was due to the attachment formed by the hen Canary for a cock Canary which was in the same room as herself and her Goldie partner. Obviously, then, the thing to do next season is to avoid the possibility of her wayward ladyship falling in love with anyone other than the duly appointed and accredited husband. If you take a nest of Canaries from her first, immediately she begins to sit her then partner must be removed right out of earshot. If you can't manage this, you will be compelled (that is, if you want any Mules) to give up the first round of Canaries. It is a wonder she did not turn on the Goldie and "savage" him—in other words, mark her disapproval of him by lugging out his feathers. If she cannot remove him wholly, such a hen generally does her best to remove him in bits. It certainly might have been worth while, however, trying the dodge recommended a correspondent in our issue of July 11th, viz., to take out the cock Canary and put him in a nursery, or other suitable cage, and then hang him in front of the breeding cage containing the Goldfinch and the refractory hen. The hen will most likely at once "call" to him (especially if he "sings at" her), when the Goldfinch will probably immediately seize the opportunity to oblige her. In this way you may get her next clutch of eggs duly fertilised. It is best to try this plan when the hen is showing signs of building, and it is only necessary to repeat it (assuming it proves effective on each occasion) three or four times, though I have heard of once being quite sufficient. Judging from your letter, the Siberian Goldfinch was not exactly the "kind," steady bird so desirable for Mule breeding purposes. He may come out of the moult all right in this respect, however, and prove a greater success next season. If he had been a little more masterful and insistent on his rights as a husband (instead of being so shy) you might have had a few fertile eggs.

Brevities.

What Weeds? (W.J.H.).—Yes; the weed you send is shepherd's-purse. This sample is not in a ripe condition (the seed pods are then a rich golden-brown), and you should be able to get plenty thoroughly ripe now.

Mating a Chaffinch (Ernest Hartley).—You say you are "only a boy," still I have no doubt you would like to have some young birds to show as a return for your trouble and labour, and, this being so, I certainly cannot recommend you to start breeding operations with a cock Chaffinch, especially in a cage. It has not been satisfactorily proved that the Chaffinch has bred with any bird other than a Bramblefinch, and then in large aviaries only, I believe. Take my advice; buy a young cock Linnet (1908 bird) and mate him next year with a good yellow hen Canary. You will get more satisfaction this way.

Mule with Light Feathers (A Bird lover).—It is regrettable the bird should have light feathers at the neck and in the tail, as these, as you surmise, completely disqualify it from competing in "dark" classes. At the same time the variegation is not sufficient to make the bird a good exhibit in the "light" or "variegated" classes; to stand much chance therein it would need to be exceptionally large, well marked, and rich in colour. Colour-feeding is absolutely necessary for present-day competition.

Saffron (C. Earwicker).—I have never made a practice of giving my birds saffron during the moult, so I am unable to answer your query. I will see if it can be inserted in the correspondence column, when no doubt some kind reader will oblige with the information you desire.

Knapweed (J. Campion).—I think you will find the information you seek, in the reply given this week to a similar query sent by "Seed-eater," to which kindly refer.

"Casting Shin Bones" (J. H. Phillips).—I was away on a holiday when the corpse of your Thrush arrived at the office, so was denied the pleasure of inspecting it. A friend of mine who is expert in birdy matters saw the body, however, and tells me that in his opinion the bird died through sheer old age. The age of the bird (eleven years) confirms me, by the way, in the opinion that there is no such thing as "casting the shin-bones." It is always these very old birds which develop such unsightly and extraordinary-looking scales on the legs, which is what the "shin-bones" really are.

Song of the Nightingale (Regular Subscriber).—Most certainly Nightingales will sing when in cages indoors. It may interest you to know that I have one tootling away to me as I write this answer. The naughty boy ought to be moulting, however. When do captive birds sing best? Well, no doubt during the early Spring, but they sing well even at Christmas, and a "kind" bird will warble off and on all the year round, barring only when moulting, of course. I say "off and on" because even the most free singing Wales have strangely sudden lapses into silence, then come into song again with equal suddenness.

British with Foreign (Canuk).—I do not pretend to any great knowledge as to the behaviour of British birds when mixed with Foreign birds in an aviary. Many long years have passed since the time I kept a few Foreign seed-eaters with my own Britishers. In your place, however, I feel sure you could safely put a pair each of Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Linnets, Siskins, Redpolls, and Twites. As regards Doves, I would advise a pair of Diamond or Zebra Doves, which, of course, are Foreign, and not British Doves—the latter are too large.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Paradise Whydah.

J.L.B.—Whydahs and Weavers are a bit erratic as to plumage changes during their first year in this country, quite a moderate change of weather being sufficient to throw them out of colour at times. They usually moult quite late in the year. I am doubtful if this bird will be of any use to you for exhibition this season. If the changing colour on the back is due to its going out of colour as it is popularly termed, then I do not expect it will resume nuptial plumage (and it is no use for exhibition purposes except in full dress) till next spring. Your details are so meagre that I am compelled to reply largely on supposition. Is it losing the long tail plumes, and what is their length and condition? Does the brown plumage of which you speak extend right down the back, or is it confined to the back of the neck? If you repeat query with this information I can give you a definite reply. Give it a liberal diet, two or three mealworms daily, ripe fruit, and fresh lettuce, in addition to the usual seed diet.

A Grey out of Condition.

F. J. H.—After so long a period, however unwholesome the diet, it must not be suddenly withdrawn, but I should most certainly wean the bird as early as possible from the milk diet. For a time—say a couple of months—make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food; only let it have two or three sips a day at the milk and gradually discontinue it; leave the mixture of chemical food and water continually in the cage. If the bird readily drinks this, I should advise not giving any milk at all, and if the bird eats heartily of its other food there should not be any ill effects even from a sudden stoppage of the milk diet. Its present condition is the result of this. The condition of the bowels will improve with the cessation of the milk diet. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts (shelled walnuts are best). Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage and keep the bird as quiet as possible for a time. If it will eat biscuit or a piece of Madeira cake, give it on, say, three occasions, a piece of either into which you have soaked one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, letting it all but dry in before giving to the bird. Try the above treatment for a clear week or ten days and then report progress.

Grey Parrot with Cold.

Mrs. A. M.—It is impossible for me to say what will be the outcome of your bird's illness. It is most unsafe to purchase a bird so. The present stage may be but the beginning of some infectious septic malady, to which newly-imported Grey Parrots are very subject; but we must hope for the best. Still continue to give the ipecacuanha mixture, and if the bird will permit you to handle it, get a zinc eye lotion from the chemist and bathe its eyes with this. Also get a bottle of Dinneford's Magnesia, and for one day put a teaspoonful into its drinking water. Repeat several times at intervals of two or three days, so long as its bowels do not become watery loose; of course, you must omit the ipecacuanha mixture on such occasions. Diet: Seed mixture, plain biscuit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and ripe fruit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage and sprinkle some eucalyptus over the sand tray. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. You had better report progress a fortnight hence.

A Confirmed Feather-Eater.

S. T. P.—A bird that has become a confirmed feather eater is seldom entirely cured of the habit, but there is no doubt, judging from the details you supply, that it is the unwholesome diet alone that has brought about such a condition of affairs. The correct diet is: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and a little green-food, such as fresh lettuce, green peas, etc., as in season. Every third day, so long as its bowels do not become watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and in between, that is when not giving the magnesia, make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Also while the summer lasts spray the bare parts every other day with quassia solution. It will only be necessary to keep the bird out of draught till dry. You will have to persevere with above treatment, as recovery, after such a period of nakedness, cannot be rapid. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish regularly in cage.

A Sick Budgerigar.

H. E. F.—Pneumonia has been very rife among birds recently; and if this is the trouble with your bird I fear you can do nothing for it, save keep it quiet and warm, yet in some sheltered, airy position. I should most certainly isolate it till it is in fair condition again, so as to guard against possible contagion for your healthy stock. However, I am of the opinion that it has picked up something unsound and thus caused the trouble. As it is tame, you should have no difficulty in administering six drops of Dinneford's Magnesia from a quill; give several doses, with a three days' interval between each. For the next month or longer well colour its drinking water with Parish's Chemical Food. Your diet is very satisfactory, but as just now seeding grass (grass in flower) is very plentiful, and as this is its natural food, let it have as much of this as it will eat; it will certainly help it into condition. A little exercise out of the cage will also help matters. If you have occasion to write again, please give me an idea of its age, if possible, and also as to whether it is an imported or aviary-bred bird.

What Bird is it?

"Hainault."—If your bird has a long tail it is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. The hen Ringnecks have no ring round the neck. If it is short-tailed bird it is some species of Amazon. This curing of shrieking is rather a difficult matter, and I fear the best of Ringnecks and Alexandrines do shriek more or less. The methods to be adopted depend largely upon the individual bird. Parrots are knowing creatures, and soon learn to recognise slight chastisement. There are the two methods, viz., covering up for a time and slightly chastising with a light stick. As already stated, whichever you persevere with must depend for its effect upon the individual bird. Try both, and be guided by circumstances. At the same time I am afraid that whenever the bird gets unduly excited; it will shriek; but with patience this trying defect in an otherwise intelligent bird should be much mitigated. A Parrot should never be teased.

Treatment for Rock Mynah.

"Ignoramus."—The Nothern Hill Mynah is usually the more talented bird, and is a handsome bird also, being a rich glossy purplish-black. The sheeny hues of its plumage, however, vary from steely-blue to purplish according to the way the light strikes it. Diet: Any good soft food mixture (several are advertised in our columns), ripe fruit ad. lib., a few scraps of raw meat occasionally, any insects you can capture, spiders, beetles, cockroaches, grasshoppers, etc., supplementing these with a few mealworms. Its plumage is purplish-black, with a white patch on each wing; the bill is orange, the wattles below each eye, and the legs and feet deep yellow. It is a good mimic, and a well-trained bird makes a very sociable and interesting pet. It will do well enough out of doors during the summer months, but I should not care to subject it to our cold, wet, raw east winds, at any rate, during its first winter in this country. The early spring would, I expect, try it more than winter's cold. It is a Crow-like bird, and about that size; so if you keep it with others they must be of similar size and strength. I cannot recommend any particular dealer, but if you study our advert. columns, or write the principal dealers in Foreign birds advertising in CAGE BIRDS, you will soon get what you want. Value varies anything from 25s. to 40s.

Budgerigars in Cages.

"Sirac." (1) Hardly; a Budgerigar is a larger bird than a Canary, and a cocoanut husk occupies more space than a Canary's nest-box. Budgerigars will breed in cages, but such should be not less than 2½ by 1½ by 1½ ft., and I prefer the semi-box type to any other. One pair of birds should be in each cage, and a husk should be hung at either end. As regards treatment, this is less troublesome than in the case of Canaries, viz., canary and white millet seed, greenfood, a few oats, grit, water and cuttlefish will suffice to keep them fit, and also be all they require for the rearing of their young. They are free breeders from early spring till checked by the moult, but often take a few months to settle down before commencing. (2) Green Budgerigars 6/6 to 8/6 a pair. Yellows, 8/6 to 10/6. (3) The present is as good a time as any, providing you have cages ready to hand. I certainly advise you to get the Booklet on Budgerigars and Cockatiels, published at CAGE BIRDS Office, price 6d. The outdoor aviary is the place for Budgerigars, and being gregarious, any number, according to size of aviary, may be kept together.

Budgerigars Not Incubating.

J. and S. D.—There is some disturbing influence, such as mice or insects; these birds are far better in a roomy aviary out of doors. I can quite understand a certain amount of restlessness during the present hot weather, and I feel sure that the husks are infested with small lice of some description. Immerse the husks in boiling water and leave them there till they are thoroughly soaked; leave in open air to dry. They should then be in useable condition again. Your dietary and treatment are very satisfactory. Are your birds unrelated pairs? Very frequently brothers and sisters, though possessing the breeding instinct, pair, nest, and lay fertile eggs, yet do not properly incubate, but act in precisely the same manner as your birds are doing. Have you any odd unmated birds in your aviary? If so, this would quite account for your present trouble. If you suspect you have related pairs, and there is no improvement in the course of a few weeks, dispose of either the males or females, and get others from totally different source to your present stock. Get "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," price 6d., from this office; you will find it very helpful.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Dead Bird (G. A. Perrin).—Owing to inadequate packing the body of your Canary reached this office in a hopelessly squashed condition, this rendering examination impossible. In future kindly send dead bodies to the proper quarter, vide rule under "Post Mortems," given on the query pages, and not to this office. The "colour-food" you send is quite unlike anything we have previously seen, and we should think it quite useless to give to birds (it is not "red" at all). It may not be harmful, though appearances are not in its favour. Get a sample of red food (tasteless pepper) from one of the recognised vendors advertising in our columns, and the difference 'twixt this and your own will at once be borne in upon you. Give all the ailing birds a dose of saline medicine for one day, and follow this with two or three days on milk sop.

A Norwich Show (——).—We could not possibly print the report and critique prepared for and published by another journal, even though it be a lay contemporary. For one thing, to do so would be contrary to the etiquette of the Press.

Payment of Affiliation Fee (W. Hurdman).—We are not in any way whatever connected with the Cage Bird Union, the secretary of which is Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe, 25, Stamford Street, Old Trafford, Manchester, with whom you must communicate. Therefore it follows that we cannot accept your affiliation fee, though it is always painful to refuse money. By-the-way, we suspect it is the license fee you really need to pay.

A Point about Exchanging (Sufferer).—We regret to hear of your experience. The danger of sending on any bird at the request of an unknown person, an absolute stranger, is obvious.

Two Photos (S. C. Rhodes).—We have to thank you for sending two very interesting photographs, which, however, we are afraid are hardly sharp (clear) enough to reproduce satisfactorily.

Sunlight Clothes Pegs (A. E. Wilkins).—We could not possibly use the above in our illustrated ideas column (if so intended).

Photo (A. Rowles).—Thanks for the photograph, safely received, and for which we will try to find a corner in the near future.

Keeping Tortoises.

F. S. Passey.—I am rather astonished you find any difficulty in keeping tortoises, which are usually easy subjects. They only need water to drink; the pan containing this should be sunk level with the ground. The food to be given depends on whether you get a land or water tortoise. The land tortoise is a vegetable feeder, and needs green food; if you offer it a nice clovery turf, and some salad and dandelion leaves, it ought soon to begin to feed. Or you might turn it out into your garden, if you have one, being careful to provide a pan of drinking water; then it will probably soon begin to forage for itself. The water tortoise is carnivorous, and will only take its food in water; so you must provide a pan for it, deep enough to hold water which will cover the animal's back when immersed. Of course, the more water space you can give the better, but the creature will live well on land if it has enough water to bathe and feed in. For food give earth worms, small fish and frogs, and raw meat or fish; best begin with the live food. Tortoises like a moderate amount of sun, but should always have access to shade; they are torpid in winter. The land tortoise has a high humped shell, very short tail, and club feet, with blunt claws. The water tortoise's shell is low and flattish, its tail long and narrow, and its feet webbed with the claws sharp.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Pope Cardinal (Maurice Amsler).—Chronic enlargement and softening of liver, recent acute inflammation involving lungs and bowels. It is a state that may popularly be described as "bilious chill." More salad or fruit is suggested.

Linnet (A Simkins).—Moulting feverishness, leading to inflammation of the lungs. The bird should have had soft food, scalded seed and salad.

Canary (Mrs. Gott).—Chronic liver disease, inflammation involving the lungs.

CUCKOO FED BY ROBINS.

SIR,—I see in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that Mr. Riches would like to know if it is a common practice of the Cuckoo to deposit its eggs in the nest of a Robin? I might say that on June 21 I had a young Cuckoo brought to me that had been taken from a Robin's nest.

WHAT IS A TICK?

SIR,—In your report of the Clapham Society's young bird show, in last week's issue, I note the remark with reference to my bird (which the judge wrong classed) that "we failed to find any legitimate tick." Will you kindly allow me to ask the judge, Mr. G. E. Weston, what he terms a legitimate tick? If he had blown the bird in question he would have found it black with underflue. Most judges would have wrong classed it in the Clear Class. Perhaps he will also be good enough to inform me the consequences if I had entered him as a Clear, just for my future guidance. It is time for exhibitors generally to learn the definition of a tick, which could be drawn up by the powers that be.

ARE BIRD-CATCHERS A "ROUGH" SET?

SIR,—I have never yet come in contact with a bird-catcher that was a "rough," but among them you will find some of the most intelligent men in nature study one could ever wish to meet. I would far rather spend my time among rough, intelligent fellows than among refined ignorant ones. Those that are writing against bird-catchers put me in mind of the old lady who met a little boy who had taken a bird's nest with eggs in. The old lady said, "You cruel boy! Just fancy how the mother bird will be grieving over the loss of its nest and eggs." The little boy replied, "Oh no it won't, mum, 'cos it's in your hat." I am not a bird-catcher but a bird fancier, and I take my birds when they are in the nest and hand-rear them. I have hand-reared a nest of five young Bullfinches this summer, and am at present rearing two young Yellowhammers. If anyone says anything to me about its being cruel, it is like pouring water on a duck's back, and I hope the article that appeared in a certain daily newspaper will have the same effect on bird-catchers who are readers of CAGE BIRDS.

WILLIAM P. BELL.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE LINNET AS A SONGSTER.

SIR,—I am penning the following remarks in the hope of stimulating the younger fanciers to greater interest in the Brown Linnet. Among all our British hardbills, there is, in my opinion, none that will better repay a little care and attention. It has this to recommend it, besides being inexpensive, that it is easily catered for, and can be made as tame as any bird. The song is far superior to that of any other British hardbill. The bird will sing for the greater part of the year, and, if properly provided for, will live many years in captivity. No wonder he is such a great favourite with the working man! The Brown Linnet is not a gay plumaged fellow, but his admirers are innumerable. Who has not noticed the working man's favourite hanging in rows down his front room windows? And many happy hours are spent by the owner, who listens with pleasure to his birds' sweet notes. Of course, there are good and bad songsters. I have spent and enjoyed many an hour among the furze bushes, where the Linnets make their nest, and have listened to their enchanting melody. He is, as most Linnet fanciers know, a mocking bird. It is very difficult to explain the song of the bird on paper; but before doing so, I wish it to be understood that I am perfectly well aware that in different parts of England the Linnets have different notes and also different ways of singing. Therefore, I don't expect everyone to agree with my version of the song. It consists of the following notes:—Chattering, chowing, reeing, peeing, whinnying, and scraping. All Linnets sing one or two of these notes and also turn them. Some Linnets are longer, some are deeper, and some will get more turns together than others. The lightest note is tittering, taken from the Titlark, viz., tit, tit, tit (run and turned heavier or deeper), whinny titter and jingle titter (which is done with a jingling sound). Next I will endeavour to give the various ways of chattering. They are: Running chatter, rolling chatter, cater chatter, stammering chatter, chattering ree, and locking chatter. Reeing cannot be written, but it is a kind of tremulous note, and consists of the following:—Fine reeing, rolling ree, trumpet reeing (very seldom heard), hollow reeing, curling ree, and blubbering ree. Next comes peeing, taken from the Bullfinch, pee pee, pi pi, fees fees, po po. But to be correct I must give the names of the various ways of peeing; they are: Plain peeing, whistling pee, feeing pee, pieing pee, bell peeing (which is a very nice note), and pooing pee. Whinnying is a nice note and very hard to sing. The Linnet takes this note from the Cuckoo, the Nightingale, Waterhen, Snipe, and Blackbirds. The various forms of it are: Filly whinnying, blackbird whinnying, huffing whinny, and laughing whinny, he he, ha ha, ho ho, all right from the stomach. Scraping is taken from Cornerakes, Skylarks, Rooks and ducks—wiff, wiff, wyke, wyke, car, car, eow, cow, quack, quack. It is impossible to make anyone understand from a written description the correct sounds, but here are the names of the different ways of scraping: Sharp, broad, kind, cowing, barking, draker and quaking scrape. Next I come to chowing, the worst of the classical notes. This note is taken from several kinds of birds, and has various forms of expression—viz., chict, chict, chey, chey, chi, chi, chow, the last being the best. The Linnet has yet some more classical notes, but not so often sung as some of the above-mentioned notes. First comes bell pether, taken from the Canary indoors; then the Cuckoo pether, the Woodlark woodle, and last, but not least, the Nightingale jugging. I don't say the Linnet sings all these notes when singing his song. If he did he would be the marvel of all marvels. Some Linnets are very good in singing the notes, chattering, reeing, and scraping; while others are good at peeing, whinnyiug, etc. Thus we get to hear all the notes. Now the Linnet has bad notes as well as good ones. So, to make these notes more complete, I must mention the bad notes as well as the good ones. Like the classical notes, the Linnet takes the bad notes from other birds—viz., spinking from the Yellowhammer, and pink, pink, pink, from the Chaffinch, and tweeting from the Titlark. Joeing most Linnets can do; it is taken from several kinds of birds. Then comes clicks, jars, shouts, whin topping, or old cock bits. There are several ways of spinking—viz., Bull spinking, youlding spinking, gigging spink, clinking spink, ox isle spinking, and last, bell spinking, which tingles like a bell. Spinking is more of a struck note, and sounds very bad with the exception of that known as bell spinking. This is a note that most fanciers like to hear, and is put down by many qualified judges as a classical note. Some fanciers may ask, after reading the above, how is it the Linnet is said to be such a great songster, when he gets his notes from other birds? The answer is, he gets one note here and one note there, puts them together and improves on them in such a fashion that he easily claims the title, "King of all hardbill songsters." To lovers of birdy music it possesses a charm all its own—a charm for which there is no substitute. I hope the above observations may help to interest many in this charming little feathered musical box, and should they meet the eye of an amateur who has hitherto been disappointed he may be encouraged to persevere.

DRIVING THE ANTS FROM THEIR EGGS.

SIR,—In reply to your correspondent who asks how ants can be driven from their eggs, I have read somewhere that if a sheet or large newspaper is spread on the ground (the corners having been doubled over) and kept in position with stones, the ants will, when disturbed, take their eggs off to the nearest cover—under the corners of the sheet. They will continue doing this until all the cocoons are concealed. These can be collected quite clean. I have never tried this plan, and so cannot say if it will work. I give it, however, for what it is worth.

IS IT A RECORD?

SIR,—Having taken a deep interest in the various accounts of egg laying records in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, we should not be doing our duty to the Fancy by withholding the following, which we think constitutes a record up to date:—Pedigree of bird: Clear Buff Yorkshire hen paired to clear yellow cock on March 24th. First egg hatched March 31st, the hen laying seven eggs for the first nest. In the second round, the first egg was laid on May 4th. This nest contained nine eggs. The third round (first egg June 11th) resulted in one better, the hen this time laying ten eggs. In the fourth round, the first egg was laid on July 9th. This time the nest caused great disappointment, only six eggs being laid. The birds can be seen at any time by anyone so interested. WALKER & WINKS.

SHOULD THERE BE SEPARATE CLASSES FOR MULES & HYBRIDS?

SIR,—It has occurred to me that it would be a good thing if there were an exchange of views in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, on the subject of the classes in which Mules and Hybrids should be shown, and I should be glad if you would be good enough to publish my views on the question. Some few years ago whenever a class was provided for Mules, it was understood that the Canary should be one of the parents of each cross exhibited, but of late years, all crosses between British birds have been shown in "Mule" classes, whether there was a special class provided for them or not. No doubt some will say that crosses between two British birds are in their right class when entered with Mules, seeing there are (sometimes) no other classes for them. That may be so, or it may not; but is it right that all the prize money should be taken by them while the Canary-Mules are left simply with cards to their credit? According to the reports, Canary-Mules are far better birds than some of the so-called Hybrids. For my own part, I think all schedules should provide for at least three classes—one for light Canary Mules, one for dark Canary Mules, and one for crosses between two British birds. If something is not done, the only thing is for exhibitors of Canary Mules to keep their birds at home and let Hybrid exhibitors have the given class to themselves. H. R. LOVER.

A RAMBLE ALONG THE BANKS OF THE WILGE RIVER, ORANGE RIVER COLONY, SOUTH AFRICA.

SIR,—It being a general holiday I made up my mind to go down to the river for a stroll. Arriving there I was surprised to find the river lower than I had ever seen it before. In consequence of this a few islets were to be seen here and there. The first sign of bird life to be seen was a flock of birds flying over my head towards the mealie fields. I could not distinguish them, as they flew so high. On turning my head the next I saw was a group of Sparrows sitting on a barbed wire fence chirping merrily and pluming themselves. I expect they had been busy in the field close by. They looked very bright and gay, especially the cocks, the black patch around the head and throat showing very conspicuously against the grey feathers. The clouds began to cover up the sun, and the breeze was blowing quite cold, so I pulled up my collar and strolled farther down the river. Not looking where I was going, I stumbled over a tuft of grass and disturbed two very pretty birds that were feeding close to the water's edge. They closely resembled the Blackcap Warbler in colour, and were of about the same size. Being more careful, I got close to a small group of Cape Canaries, that were enjoying themselves washing. As they flew off, their greyish green coats of feathers showed up plainly against the dark bank on the other side. These birds are very like Greenfinches, and are grand songsters. A lot of them are kept in the camp, and almost every bungalow can be seen having two or more cages of these birds hanging outside. They are quite favourites with the men here. On my making another move a host of very small birds were startled. They were about the size of a Wren. I have been trying to find out what they are called, but nobody seems to know. There is a millet field about a mile from here, and there are flocks of these birds always there. Hawks are plentiful in this district; they are the ordinary brown species. There were two of them circling overhead in a field on my left. On a windy day I have seen as many as eight or nine circling round at one time. Starlings were not showing themselves much then, but a couple had just flown across the river. They differ from the English Starling in having a big, white patch low down under the body and tail. Half the river seemed to be deserted by the birds, I expected through the sun not being out. I climbed on to the top of the bank to see what there was to be seen. A mealie field I passed had already been harvested, but no birds were to be seen in the stubbles. It looked as if it were going to rain, and to be caught in an African shower is not very nice. Anyhow, I kept going on. I pulled out my pencil again when I noticed a bird that we call a Kaffir King. In the summer it has a remarkably long tail, and it looks very handsome; but in the winter it loses it all with the exception of about a couple of inches of it. The bird is jet black at times, but seems to change colour with the seasons. In summer, if it is not following, it is followed by two or three of those small birds I spoke of before. Whilst walking along I disturbed a bird; it was all black with the exception of the body under the wings, which was red. The red feathers do not show unless the bird is flying. A couple of minutes later it was followed by two or three more birds of the same species. At this point I passed some low bushes that were bare, at the same time putting to flight scores of birds—Linnets, Sparrows, Starlings, and others that I could not identify. This was the most interesting part of the ramble. I have only been out here a year and nine months, so that I am not familiar with all the birds' names. As I got up to walk away a Wagtail flew from the reeds almost at my feet; it was like the ordinary Water Wagtail one sees at home by the rivers and streams. It began to get late so I turned my back to the river and made for the camp—a distance of about three miles. As I walked along the edge of a deep "donga" a few Starlings were put to flight, and for the first time I saw a Robin. These birds differ from the Robin at home in having the red low down under the body. Seeing nothing more of any interest to note in the way of birds, I took out a copy of CAGE BIRDS to read while walking along. T. SMITH.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—At the monthly general meeting of the Western Counties O.S. (Plymouth), held on July 20 some surprise was expressed by the members (particularly the Yorkshire fanciers) that the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club had left our society out in allotting its patronage. We give 22s. prize-money and a special in every class for a 1s. 6d. entry fee, and I think we can claim to be the most important society in the West of England. But the West seems to be entirely ignored, whilst the London District gets their patronage at five shows. This hardly seems to be a fair distribution of favours. I have always understood that specialist clubs endeavour to get as many different judges to officiate as possible, but I see Mr. Robson's name occurs twice. But I am of opinion that this is the cause of our society being left out—viz., that we have Mr. C. A. House judging. In making an application for patronage some two months ago I added a query as to how the fact of Mr House's judging at our show would affect our chance of obtaining same, in the light of his having passed two birds as over length at our last year's show and the controversy that followed? Mr. Rennie, the secretary, replied, that he thought that as Mr. House was down to judge we should be debarred, and such is the case. The committee of the S.Y.C.C. are showing a mean and unfancier-like spirit in thus boycotting a judge who has the courage of his opinion, which does no good to the Fancy at large. In coming to this conclusion I have the bulk of our members with me, and it is at their request I am writing this letter. If it could be said that we had an incompetent judge, the matter might appear in a different light, but Mr. House's engagements in Yorkshire in this and past years are sufficient proof that he is fully competent to judge a Yorkshire with the best.

A POINT ABOUT EXCHANGING.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, in reply to H.D.S. in your issue of July 18. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for about 12 months. I am fond of a bit of exchanging myself, and have answered a good few advertisements, but I, along with H.D.S., have always sent stuff on first. I think the same as he does—the advertiser has a perfect right to expect the other to send on first as well as the purchaser, and should also pay his share of the carriage. Not long ago, I answered an advertisement for a bit of exchanging, but of course, had to send mine first; and I paid carriage on it. But when I received the article back in exchange, I was trapped by having to pay carriage on his. I think if advertisers would study this and pay their share of carriage, more trade would be done and more satisfaction given. I like exchanging in an honest way, and tell the advertiser straight what I have got to give in exchange, and the quality of it.

A. CONSTANT READER.

WHAT IS "QUALITY" LINNET SONG?

SIR,—Kindly allow me space to congratulate one of our Lancashire veterans on his definition of "quality" Linnet singing. He puts a good song down on paper, only I don't like that starting note tolie, tolie, tolie. This is a double note, and we Blackburn fanciers don't like such in the song at all. We call that a run to the mark. The quality song of this wonderful bird is divided into two sections, namely, dinns and notes. The former means rolling of every description—pattering, tittering, winnying, urring, chattering, ricking, heavy blubbering, etc. Now the notes are struck slow, and anyone can count them, that is the only difference between the two sections. I will give you a few notes, put together in what I call a classical song:—T ttttttttttP P P P P P P P P P Po Po Po Po Po Po Po Po Po Po Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Quo Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh. This last note which is the deepest is gradually turned into the heavy blubber. A song like this is very seldom heard. I could put a song like this in scraping. Wake Wake Wake Quee Quee Quee Quy Quy Quy; and the bird would keep turning its voice until it had turned about five voices. I do not like a bird always to sing the same song. If he breaks off four times I like a fresh song, or the same work will do, only placed differently. I have never known any fancier to tire of listening to a good bird. That is the reason the birds are so difficult to buy. GEORGE ROSTRON.

THRUSHES BREEDING IN A CAGE.

SIR,—The breeding of Thrushes in a breeding cage has, I am sorry to say, ended in disappointment. The hen sat splendidly all through, and the eggs were fertile, sure enough. I was so anxious for them to hatch out that I allowed her to sit on the eggs for three weeks; but all was in vain. I took the eggs down to show some of our members and also Mr. S. Hadwin, of Liverpool. Mr. Hadwin lifted up the broken parts of one of the eggs (I had accidentally broken one), and showed us the embryo of the bird inside, evidently only a day or two from being perfect. This set me thinking as to what had caused the stoppage. First I thought it might have been caused by the barking of our two fox terriers, whose kennel is immediately under the double breeding cage, where the Thrushes were housed, the bottom of the cage being only 3 ft. 8 ins. from the floors. The cage is perfectly open in front excepting for the ordinary Canary cage front, and is directly opposite the kitchen door, which is used very much. The Thrushes have been in this position and under these conditions winter and summer since 1905, and have kept in perfect health (the dogs look after the cats) in ordinary-sized Thrush cages. When I returned home, I broke an egg from a clutch of Canary and Greenfinch eggs that ought to have hatched at about the same time as the Thrushes, and I found that the embryo had stopped growing at the same time as the Thrushes, and this again prompted my inquiries. We had also in the back yard and on the same level as the other two pairs of birds, a very fine first-year Cinnamon-marked buff cock that I was running over for the season, to give him a chance to develop ready for the show season. I saw him safe and fed him early in the evening, and again inspected the cages before going to bed; but I am sorry to say that when I went into the yard first thing in the morning the cage door was open and the bird gone. At the time we thought he might possibly have opened the cage door and flown away, but when I thought of the time when the eggs were spoiled, I found it tallied with the midnight flight of my beauty, that I am afraid went not by wing but by hand. And I am afraid that the same hand also lifted up the hens on the nest to see what they were sitting on, and so caused them to leave the nest. In that case they would have become cold and useless. What about the dogs? Well, I think it would be a very easy matter to unfasten the back garden gate, and the yard door being always left unfastened, the dogs would go to investigate, and finding the door open would go for a run. The job would then be done. Of course, this is theory, but I don't think I am far out in my reckoning. The Thrush again laid two eggs, but refused to sit, and this last day or two has been busy again carrying old hay about the cage. Recently, I found her at roosting time on the nest, so she looks like doing business again. The Greenfinch hen has also laid another clutch of eggs; but I have removed these to the bird-room and have given the hen some clear Canary eggs to sit on, not forgetting to make secure the yard door. W. DOWNING.

A WAGTAIL'S NEST IN A WAGGON OF COALS.

SIR,—It seems characteristic of the Wagtails to build in unique places. Repeatedly it displays a propensity to hatch its young near a habitation, and the popular belief among naturalists that it does so because it reposes confidence in man's protection, is confirmed to a singular degree by the following authentic occurrence. The other day a contractor was busy emptying a waggon of coals at East Wemyss Station, when he observed a Wagtail sitting in a nest neatly deposited between two pieces of "black diamonds." While he diligently pursued his work it kept sitting quite unconcerned, and only after he practically frightened it off did it fly away a few yards, fluttering to and fro as if in disagreement. Three pale eggs interspersed with black spots were in the nest. The waggon having to be dispatched the same evening, there was no alternative but to shift the nest; so the station porter instinctively placed it on the top of the coals in the next waggon. Five minutes afterwards the Wagtail was discerned embracing the eggs. The waggon was emptied the next day, and this time the porter transported the nest to a crevice in an adjoining brick wall. There, in close proximity and in full observation of passing pedestrians, amidst the hundred and one noises inseparable from a railway station, the brave bird persistently sits, evidently quite oblivious of all environing elements.

Some Practical Observations on Insectivorous Birds.

By S. A. SANDY.

A Paper read before the City and Suburban A.C.B., on June 15th.

Some Small Warblers.

Among the small Warblers I think the most confiding are the little Sedge Warblers. If caught when they have left the nest and can feed themselves, they are easily "meated off," and if you have a supply of gentles to use for the first three or four days, they give very little trouble and soon get on to ants' eggs, egg, etc. But I have found that hard-boiled egg is disastrous in their case, for they develop fits in a very few days, and if the supply of hard-boiled egg is not discontinued, very soon die.

The same remarks apply equally to the Reed Warbler, which I think is best described as a miniature Nightingale, so far as plumage goes, but with a longer head and bill—for its size, of course. The Reed Warbler is passionately fond of mealworms, which I recommend being broken in halves. It is astonishing what a long way this small bird can reach without leaving the perch, and if an unwary fly alights on the cage wire, it is snapped up by the bird in an instant.

The Willow Warbler and Chiff Chaff are also very common throughout this country during the summer, and the Chiff Chaff stays quite late, some even being stated to winter with us in the milder parts. But no doubt they almost all migrate from these dreary shores in winter and return again as early as February or the beginning of March. The latter is a very hardy bird, but I have found the Willow Warbler, or Willow Wren, as it is usually called, decidedly delicate and susceptible to cold. If kept it should be placed in an outdoor aviary during the summer, where it can get plenty of exercise; but even with that advantage it gets very fat, and also usually manages to break its tail.

The Reed and Sedge Warblers are also very adverse to having tails in captivity, and a few weeks either in cage or captivity usually suffices to knock the tail to pieces. The Reeds are very pugnacious, but the others I have found to agree fairly well, although in the open they can often be seen "going for" each other in a very spirited way.

They are easily caught with a pair of clap-nets if the nets are placed over a little pool where the birds go for water. I remember on one occasion catching upwards of twenty on a September morning. The only other way of catching them that I know of is to walk where they are in the habit of frequenting and lime the small twigs or set a few limed bristles along the bough on the off chance of getting them. I used to get a large number of the Willow Wrens from the neighbourhood of Derby, and they were invariably limed, although, personally, I think that is the worst possible way of taking any bird. I have brought one of the net traps that I use to show you how they work, in case anyone may feel inclined to try his hand. [Mr. Sandy produced and explained the working of a small net trap]. I have found them very effective and convenient, as three or four can be made up into a small parcel, and the wire pegs can be carried in one's pocket.

How to make and use Traps.

The trap I use is a very simple contrivance, and any one who is so disposed and can use a soldering iron a little can easily make it. It consists of two semi-circular pieces of ordinary cage wire, about the thickness used for the front of a Thrush's cage, a couple of small steel wire springs, three straight pieces of wire, and a piece of wood. The last-mentioned is an ordinary twig of about the thickness of a penholder and forms what I call the "Trigger." The whole is covered with ½-in. tanned netting. A few minutes' study of Fig. 1 will show how these parts are put together. When not in use the trap forms a semi-circle.

To set the trap, take each of the circles and double them half way back, so that the trap looks like a circle of wire covered with net, as shown by Fig. 1. The trap is pegged down with a piece of stout wire (see Fig. 2). When pegged firmly to the ground take circle A, shown in Fig. 1, and double it back flat with circle B. Then take the piece of wire C which is attached to circle B by a ring at one end, and place it over circle A, fixing it into the notch made for the purpose in the "Trigger."

The trap is then set, and should be carefully covered over with short grass or leaves to make it look as near as possible like the surrounding ground.

The bait should be two or three mealworms tied with silk or fine cotton, the cotton being tied into a joint of the mealworm just sufficiently tight to prevent the worm from escaping. If this way of baiting is adopted, the worms can be tied on overnight, or, at any rate, before the trap is required for setting, and the worms will in fact live for two or three weeks if properly secured.

Fig. 3 shows the trap set, and it should be so arranged that the bird will be more likely to take the bait when standing on the ground that is clear of the net.

Fig. 4 shows the trap with a bird in it. Some people use a cork instead of a piece of twig for the "Trigger," but I have found that the twig—about 2 inches long—is much better, as it stands well above the grass, and with the mealworms continually on the move is more likely to catch the eye of the bird, which is perched on an adjacent bush. A trap on the principle described can be made sufficiently strong to hold anything from a Robin to a Jay or Rook, if it got caught.

I was asked for something about "Insectivorous" birds, and I propose to bring this short paper to a close with a few remarks upon some of the commoner foreign insectivorous birds. Mr. Sandy here gave a few notes (acknowledging his indebtedness to several expert friends for some of the hints), on Tanagers, Sugar Birds, Bulbuls, Shamas, etc., and then brought his paper to a conclusion.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

We are doing very well with our Canaries. We have more than forty young ones, and have yet about a dozen to hatch. We have not, however, got one Mule as yet.—W. Downing, (Manchester).

South Shields and District C.B.S.

The fanciers around here seem to have had a very fair amount of luck. I find our sec., Mr. Duke, has 82 young birds on the sticks, notwithstanding his having lost nearly 20 stock pairs. He has Norwich, Yorkshires, Cinnamons, and Crests. Our old member, Mr. Winter, I hear, has about 50 Crests and Norwich, all doing well, and Mr. Carrick has a room full, of which some have shown their good quality already. Mr. Wm. Thompson, of Yorkshire fame, has about 40 of the straight 'uns doing for themselves. Mr. Richardson (Simonside), has done well with his Norwich; he has over 40 and some beauties among them. Mr. Gordon has 13 Norwich from 2 hens. Mr. Baker has 30 young, and some Mules among them, and light ones, too, while Mr. Bullock has 7 young, but owing to a late start has many eggs due to hatch. Mr. R. Thompson has 12 young Borders and Lizards, Mr. Tight 8 young, having lost 2 hens during the sitting, and Mr. Hutler, I hear, has over 20 young ones. Mr. Murrell has 20, all Norwich, but Mr. M. Woodhouse has had very bad luck with his Crests, having only a few at present. Mr. C. W. Alty, unfortunately, has lost the whole of his stock of 25 pairs through some disease. He is, however, going to make another start next year.—James Barrass, assistant sec. of the South Shields and Dis. C.B.S.

Wallsend and Mid-Tyne C.B.A.

Being on holiday I thought I could not do better than have a trot round and see how dame fortune had been treating our members this breeding season. My first call was on the "father" of the club, Mr. J. M. McDonald. "Mac" was slow at getting a start, but is making up fast now, having close on fifty young birds. He has had quite a busy time lately hand-feeding, having no less than four nests under his care at one time. He is colour-feeding a nest of Norwich as well. He has been fortunate to get some nice Crest and Crest-bred young, and has been dreaming a lot lately about "howl" winning. He also has some nice young Norwich and Border Fancies on the sticks. He is hand-rearing some young Yellowhammers, and will stick at nothing. Mr. McQuillen has five pairs of Borders, two of Norwich, two Muling pairs (Goldfinch-Canary and Linnet-Canary), and one Hybrid pair (Goldfinch-Redpoll). He has between 30 and 40 young ones doing well; they comprise Borders, Norwich, Goldfinch-Mules, and one Linnet-Mule. He has had four fertile eggs from his Hybrid pair, but unfortunately they did not hatch out. Mr. Greenwell, who is another novice, has four pairs of Borders and two for Muling (Linnet-Canary and Greenfinch-Canary). Unfortunately he had to remove at the beginning of the breeding season, which threw some of his birds into the soft moult. But he is, nevertheless, doing fairly well, having close on twenty young Borders and Linnet-Mules. Mr. Thomas Haikney has only had eight young from four pairs. He is also trying for the Greenfinch-Bullfinch cross, but up to the present there is nothing to report from this pair. Mr. W. Richardson is doing fairly well, having about twenty young from two pairs of Norwich and one pair of Border Fancies. He is also a British bird fancier, winning two firsts in this section at the Nest Feather show. Mr. J. Cox is another victim of fate. Jack only got three young birds out of the first round of eleven nests, and had to hand-feed them at that. He is not doing very much better yet, only having 16 young, but he has got three nice youngsters that are likely to cheer him up a bit when the shows come on. Mr. W. Ronald we found having some practice with an air-gun in his back yard. He has 14 pairs up, including one Hybrid pair (Goldfinch-Greenfinch). He has only 30 young—25 Canaries and 5 Goldfinch-Mules, with 6 hens sitting on good eggs. He had the misfortune to lose 25 young in one week. A Border hen has only reared 3 young out of 18 eggs, all of which were fertile. Mr. W. McGinn is having a bit better luck, and has 41 young (30 Norwich and 11 Borders) from 11 pairs. He also is having a try for Hybrids and has two pairs up (Goldfinch-Bullfinch and Linnet-Bullfinch). Mr. T. Hopkinson has only 17 young ones (9 Borders and 8 Norwich) from 7 pairs, and his third round at that. But he has the making of two or three good ones amongst his lot. Mr. J. Davidson made a poor start, but I am pleased to say he is beginning to pull up a bit now; he has 7 pairs up, and seven nice young ones, and the most of his hens are sitting on good eggs. Mr. W. Affleck, a new starter (this being his first year), is doing famously, having 18 young (10 Borders and eight Goldfinch Mules) from 4 pairs. Some of them are very promising birds. Mr. J. Roy is having the worst luck of all, and only has 5 young from 15 pairs. He has six pairs of Cinnamons, 6 pairs Norwich and 3 pairs for Crest breeding. One often reads in Cage Birds of records being put up, but the fancier who can smash this one has my deepest sympathy. Mr. Hermiston (of Heaton), has 13 pairs up, and up to date he has close on one hundred young. And this from only two rounds; he is overstocked, and does not intend letting his hens go for a third round. In fact, he has a lot of them in a dark flight for moulting. He was the winner of our members' cup at the last annual show, and, judging by what we have seen, he will be likely to do the trick again. Mr. W. Cockburn is doing fairly well with his Yorkshires, having close on 40 young from 7 pairs, and there are some beauties amongst them. He is strong in Yellows, and also has a few nice Linnet-Mules. I have personally had all kinds of luck; some are doing well, and some only "half well." Others are doing absolutely nothing. Up to date from four pairs of Norwich, four pairs of Borders, and three Muling pairs, I have forty youngsters, four of them being Mules. Two of these are from a Siberian-Goldfinch and two from a Greenfinch. I have been trying for the Siskin cross, but, unfortunately, just when my hopes were brightest, the Siskin was taken very suddenly ill, and died within a few hours.—Jas. Johnston, hon. sec. of the Wallsend and Mid Tyne C.B.A.

Broughty Ferry C.B.S.

The fanciers round here will finish up the breeding season with a fair amount of success. Calling on President Carmyllie, I was pleased to learn that he was better off than for some years; he has got some promising Scotch Fancies on the sticks, but one buff green hen stands far away from the rest having great size. It will be hard to beat after a good moult. I had a look of Mr. W. Keill's stock, and found that his usual luck has deserted him this season. He has only 11 youngsters. The one that caught my eye was a tiny Piebald hen, which would be a beauty if a little bigger. Mr. Keill has been unfortunate to lose three of his best hens. Mr. Merrilees has over 20 Fancies, some of them looking well. Mr. Chas. Muir has six, and Mr. A. Curtis has had fair success, having thirteen on the sticks and a few to hatch. Messrs. Campbell and Wilson have a dozen Fancies and also a good dark Mule. Mr. D. Ross has some nice Border Fancies, while Mr. C. Low has seven Crests and Crestbreds all looking well. Mr. R. Whitton has had fair success, with 24 Crests and Crosthreds, some of them looking well. He has also a few Border Fancies in a large flight. Mr. S. Duncan has some nice dark Mules. He had the misfortune to lose a nest of Linnet Mules, some of them being very lightly marked.—R. Whitton, sec.

Some Pleasures of Foreign Bird Keeping.

By FRANK E. BYGRAVE.

When I first started in the interesting hobby of the keeping of foreign birds (now five or six years ago), like a number of others, I was under the impression that such birds could only be kept satisfactorily in a room having an even temperature; so my first trial was with a pair of Budgerigars in a small "Crystal Palace" aviary, which I kept in the warmest room in the house. Although I found them charming pets and was able to keep them in good health by giving them an occasional opportunity of flying about in the room, I nevertheless was delighted to read an article in an early number of CAGE BIRDS, which described how these birds could be successfully kept and bred out of doors.

Building an Outdoor Aviary.

I immediately set to work, and providing myself with a quantity of wood, and also some 1½-in. quartering for the uprights, I soon had the framework of an aviary securely fixed up against a wall facing south-west. I made it six ft. high and nine ft. long; but owing unfortunately to the smallness of the yard, I could only get the aviary to a width of three ft., tapering to two ft. This was not a big place, but it was the best I could do with the space at my disposal.

One end of the aviary I boarded up, and at the other end I put a door (covered with ½-in. wire netting), making it large enough to allow anyone to get inside, if necessary. The roof I boarded over and covered with tarred felt. For perches, I fixed a number of pea sticks to the wall. Over the front of the aviary I stretched some ½-in. wire netting, leaving a small square door at the boarded end of the aviary, through which I might place the food, etc. On a shelf inside, I hung up a number of cokernut husks, and procuring some more Budgerigars from a well-known breeder, I put them into the aviary together with the pair I already had; and within a fortnight I had two nests of eggs, which in due course were hatched, the young being successfully reared.

Since then I have had many young Budgerigars reared, but I shall never forget the pleasure those two first nests gave my friends and myself. For young Budgerigars are as full of fun and frolic as kittens are, and it is one of the prettiest sights to watch them rolling and gambolling in the growing Canary grass that I keep at one end of the aviary.

Breeding and Rearing Zebra Finches.

Having been so successful with Budgerigars, I next turned my attention to Finches. I enlarged the aviary, which I boarded up at both ends, the roof being felted as before, and fitted it up with plenty of pea sticks. I also provided boxes and small German Canary cages, as well as husks for nesting places. Then I put in two pairs of Zebra Finches. Within a few days these had both selected a nesting place, and commenced building, and in a wonderfully short space of time both pairs were sitting. I was astonished at this, but even more so when, within three weeks of the time I purchased them, I heard the young in the nests. This, I should think, was nearly, if not quite, record time. At any rate, I considered it showed appreciation of my arrangements for their comfort.

I tried to get the parent birds to take soft food of various kinds to help them in feeding the young, but they refused to even look at it, and the only thing I could get them to eat in addition to their ordinary food (Canary and white and spray millet) was just an occasional peck at a cracknel biscuit. I gave them flowering grass, but they seemed to think that was best for nest making, and only occasionally did I see them eating it.

But although reared principally on seed, the young were perfectly strong and healthy, and were very delightful little creatures. To see them dart after the parent birds, put their heads down sideways and their beaks up, and literally yell for food (a noise out of all proportion to their size)—is a sight worth seeing. It is worth seeing if only for the opportunity of noticing the absolute impartiality of the old birds, for each of the young ones is fed in turn.

Experiences with Cutthroats, etc.

My next venture was to purchase a pair of Cutthroats, and although I did not buy them until late in August, in a few weeks they had lined a cokernut husk with hay and feathers, and were sitting on four eggs. Only three of this clutch hatched out. One of the birds was thrown out of the nest when but a few days old, the other two (a cock and hen) being successfully reared. I found the Cutthroats took readily to soft food, which I made of powdered Osborne biscuit and ants' eggs mixed, and made crumbly moist. They also ate dried ants' eggs when these were scattered on the ground.

The next nest this pair reared came out of the nest in the middle of January, and although the weather was bitterly cold at the time, neither the old birds nor the young seemed in the least affected on that account.

Quite recently, having a fine young cock Cutthroat without a mate, I procured a hen red-headed Finch, thinking perhaps they would pair and produce some interesting Hybrids; but although the hen evidently wanted to nest, she would have nothing to do with him. So after a week or two I procured a proper mate for her, and before the day was over they had paired and had taken possession of a husk nest. The next day they began nest-making. One egg was laid, but this was broken, and the nest was then abandoned.

A few days later they commenced another nest. This was on the 26th August last, and by the 31st they had settled down again, and I heard young in the nest on the 14th September. I tried several kinds of soft food for them, but they did not appear to touch it, although I found that the hen would eat some dried ants' eggs. I continued to supply it in the hope that the young would take to it as they grew older.

I also had a most interesting "pair" consisting of a cock Nutmeg and a hen Masked Finch. These soon became on perfectly friendly terms always perching together and preening each other's plumage, but I had them too late to expect any result last season. I found my birds to be so well placed that they seemed regardless of the weather, and I have quite ceased to be surprised at any arrangements they may make for adding to their number.

Two very pretty inmates, a pair of White-headed Nuns, have made no attempts at breeding. They are quiet, inoffensive birds, and appear to be perfectly hardy. The cock bird is continually singing, but although, looking at the open beak and throbbing throat, one would expect great things, the result is almost ludicrous, reminding one of the noise of a child's toy bladder with a tiny little trill at the end.

Mates for the Budgerigars.

Seeing it stated somewhere that Thrushes might be kept with Budgerigars, and having a very tame young Blackbird which I had reared from the nest, I thought I would turn him in with my Budgies. Things went splendidly for some little time, but one day I found "Jack," as he was called, very busy trying to extract nutriment out of one of the large green caterpillars, the larvæ of the privet hawk-moth; he was evidently enjoying his meal. But he was no longer a safe companion for the Parrakeets, for shortly after, on hearing a tremendous racket in the aviary, I found him making cruel little dabs at them with his powerful beak. Possibly he regarded them as "larger editions" of the same insect off of which he had just dined. Of course, I quickly caught him and caged him separately. Bullfinches, I find, get on well with Budgerigars, and a pair that I kept with them successfully reared a couple of nests of young. I never once found the Budgerigars interfered with them.

There is one thing the aviary keeper must avoid if he wants good results in the way of breeding, and that is overcrowding. The second season I had my Budgerigars I had six pairs, which were quite two pairs too many. I also unfortunately put the nests too close together, but the birds seemed to agree so well that I thought it would be alright. And so it was until the young were about a week old, when the old birds seemed to get jealous of one another, and there was incessant quarrelling. So much so, that the young got neglected and the whole number died. Many of them crawled out of the nest and fell to the ground.

In conclusion, I must say that I have found foreign bird keeping to be a most fascinating hobby, and one which is well worth the little trouble and care required in its management. It also affords a deal of pleasure to one's friends, for there are few people who are not interested in seeing birds kept under what are, as nearly as possible, natural conditions. I have also found that foreign birds more than pay their way, and one has an occasional surplus which is very useful in procuring fresh specimens.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

CITY of Bradford O.S. held another of their series of members' shows on Saturday afternoon last, when about 60 or 70 birds were staged. These were judged by Mr. James Hartley, who had a nice afternoon's work sorting out the winners.

BRADFORD (East) O.S. also held a members' show, at which Mr. H. J. Chittenden officiated as judge. In all 66 birds were put down, some of them being real gems, and many of these the property of the novice members, and will probably give a good account of themselves when they get into the open shows—in fact, I look forward to seeing a good few new exhibitors from this society.

THE Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. held their meeting to allot patronage on July 25, a good round number of members putting in an appearance for this important part of the society's business. The discussions were very lively and interesting. Details of the allotment will no doubt be found in the secretary's report in another column.

MR. G. Boucher, of Lincoln, had a day's outing amongst the Bradford birdy men on Saturday last, and he considers them jolly fellows, who do not take their disappointments sadly. He came expecting to see some grand Yorkshires, and I think he was not disappointed.

A RED-MITE EXTERMINATOR.

Sent by Hy. Pettit.

I have for many years used benzoline, and I find it "dead" on the mites. And it is quite harmless to the Canaries. I enclose a sketch of the bottle to show how I use it. Make a hole through the cork of the bottle and put a quill through it. After using some of the benzoline put a sound cork into the bottle or the spirit will evaporate. I run the bird into another cage and then turn the cage upside down and well soak it with the benzoline. I find it a good plan to use it before I begin breeding, so that when the birds have eggs or young I can use it, and they will not forsake their nests, as they are then used to the smell.—HY. PETTIT.

Will Mr. Pettit please communicate his address, which seems to have been mislaid.—Editor.

AN ATTACHMENT FOR BATH CAGES.

Sent by J. W. Dolzell, 40, Campbell Street, Oldham.

I find the wire attachment as illustrated a great improvement when using bath cages on the ordinary slide-up wire doors, as it prevents the doors from falling down (closing), and so may be imprisoning the birds in the bath. I get a piece of cage wire and bend it to the shape shown in the sketch, then solder it, or fix it by some suitable way, about one inch below the hooks which are on the bath cage for hanging same to the stock cage or breeding cage. This prevents the cage door dropping and the chance of one's birds getting drowned.—J. W. DOLZELL.

Protesting Against Confinement

My father keeps a lot of Canaries, and I always like to hear them sing. But he has bought me a Cockatoo—a Lemon-crested Cockatoo which is now my great pet. I just call out "Polly," and she follows me about just like a dog. At mealtimes she perches herself on my shoulder, as much as to say that she wants something to eat as well as I. And when I shut her in her cage, she shouts, "Do you hear? let me out."—Sent by Mabel Pinchin (age 9), Arthur Terrace, New Marske-by-the-Sea.

A Jackdaw in Bad Company.

Down in Essex there lived a farmer who had a Jackdaw which was allowed to fly about the house. One day it noticed that some Rooks were eating the corn which had been sown, and it went and joined in the feast. When the farmer saw them he fired at them with a gun, and afterwards found that he had shot his pet Jackdaw. It has been lame ever since. And now, when it sees any Rooks feeding, it calls out, "Bad company, bad company."—Sent by Arthur Rider (age 13), 30, Terminus Road, Brighton.

A Playful Chaffinch.

When my father goes away at all, I feed his birds for him. My favourite is a pretty Chaffinch. The Canaries require egg food for their young. One day I thought my favourite would like a little egg, and on my opening his cage-door to give him some, he dashed out and flew about the room for nearly an hour. I tried in vain to catch him. Judge of my pleasant surprise, however, when he flew straight into his cage with a merry "Pink, pink." He seemed as pleased as I was. And my father, instead of scolding me, only laughed when I told him.—Sent by Tommy Boxson (age 9), Old Cross Keys, Mary Gate, Nottingham.

A Last Round.

It may appear a belated reference to go back to any question of nesting now. There is, however, still a last chance of mating up for a nest of Mules this season. It is generally well known that the Goldfinch, more so, perhaps, than any other Finch, is a late breeder, and that there are specimens which it is utterly useless to mate up for breeding purposes before the end of June or sometimes even in July.

Such specimens are to be met with every year, and if it so happens that such a bird has been running occasionally with a hen Canary which has in consequence been—kept from breeding save for a nest of "Sibs" in the spring, and is now in good, hard condition with no sign of approaching moult upon her, she may safely be mated to the Finch at once upon his becoming suddenly fresh and ready for breeding in July.

But one must not procrastinate. As soon as the Finch is keen and fresh let the birds be mated, so that they may get to work without loss of time. Then you will secure a fair chance of the young being out of nest before the hen drops into moult. In these cases the seasons are likely to overlap a little and the hen to begin to cast off stray feathers before the young are quite able to do with but little help from her in feeding. But as a rule she finishes them off alright, and then the moult progresses very rapidly, which is a distinct advantage rather than the reverse.

The Goldfinch also will usually drop into moult as soon as the hen has gone to nest. Indeed, the freshness of his condition is as one might say just a flicker before the onset of the moult; hence the necessity for availing oneself of the opportunity that has failed to present itself earlier in the year.

Preparing for the Future.

Writing of Muling recalls a useful hint which is most opportune just now for the Mule-breeder whose aim is to produce the long-sought-after light-Mule. Now that the bulk of the season's breeding may be passed under review, one should make a careful note of all the young birds bred by each hen.

If a few light feathers are to be found consistently running through the young bred from any particular hen, with an occasional splash of light colour, that hen should certainly be reserved for next year, and a nest of young taken from her with a closely-related cock bird. These should form the nucleus of a strain of light-Muling hens, to be bred from and tested in the same practical manner each season until one has a strain that can with some measure of reliability be depended upon to come as near the desired object as can reasonably be expected.

Discarding and Keeping.

When the offspring of any particular hen are found to be dark all through, with perhaps only an occasionally light feather or two on a single bird, that hen may be discarded for any future use without any qualms. True, if she breed good, large birds, of nice shape, and rich blaze and wings, she may be a very useful specimen for a breeder of dark-Mules, but to a would-be light-Mule breeder she is worse than useless. Worse, because there is practically no chance whatever of his ever reaching his goal with her, nor yet, probably, with any of her daughters. The time, too, that is wasted in trying to get a light-Mule from her might be far more profitably employed upon more promising material.

Each year at the end of the breeding season this same crucial test should be applied to each hen that has been used for Mule-breeding, even after one has been working at making a strain of light-Muling hens for some time. It is the only really scientific way of ultimately attaining the object one has in view, as it is absolutely impossible to look at a hen and make a tolerable guess at what she is likely to do in this line of breeding.

In Readiness for Moulting.

One hears so much just now of the inconvenience caused to some stocks from the ravages of insects that it will be well to point out to the young fancier whose stock may be suffering from these pests that the interval between the breeding and moulting seasons should be filled in with drastic efforts to eradicate the pest as thoroughly as circumstances permit.

It may not be convenient or desirable to turn out the room as one would do for a spring clean, but much may be done of lasting benefit to the birds without going so far as this, and there is a real necessity for some effort to be made. If the matter is allowed to slide now it will be discovered when too late to remedy it that it will have a decidedly detrimental effect upon the birds whilst moulting, and in some cases the double strain will be too much for them.

Thus, as soon as all the pairs are broken up, one should supply a bath with a little essence of quassia in it three or four times in a week, and at the end of that time remove the birds to clean cages; and having removed the dirty cages from the room; and having well cleaned and disinfected the staging or the place where the cages have stood, and the adjoining wall, fix up the clean cages for the birds to moult in. Of course all fanciers do not own a double stock of cages, but where this is the case or where one has a special set of moulting cages, the work is greatly simplified, as the moulting cages can then be cleaned and got ready for use at convenient intervals; and when all are ready the exchange can be carried out at once, as it will only be necessary to remove the dirty cages so as to avoid bringing them in contact with the clean ones. Transfer the birds to the clean cages, and scrub down the staging with hot soap suds, into each gallon of which a couple of tablespoonfuls of turpentine should be stirred. Finally, clean down the walls, etc., and as soon as the staging is dry fix up the clean cages.

Other Methods.

Where a sufficient number of cages is not available for this method to be carried out, a little scheming will still allow the exchange to be made at intervals, even though not a single spare cage is at hand. In the latter case it will be necessary to transfer the birds from two or three cages into a single large flight. Clean the empty cages, staging, etc., and then replace them in position and draft the birds from the same number of cages into them whilst another batch are being cleaned.

Needless to say the whole stock should be gone through as quickly as possible in order to avoid an extensive migration of inhabitants from the dirty cages into the clean ones whilst the work is in progress. To avoid this as far as possible, it is a good plan to leave a small space between the clean cages and the dirty ones, and lay along it a piece of twisted rag well moistened with paraffin or turpentine, which will go far to prevent any mites crossing the boundary.

Still, it must not be supposed that this plan will be entirely effectual in preventing invaders getting into the clean cages, as it will not, but it will be sufficiently effectual in making a very great improvement in the stock and in enabling the birds to come through the moult better and stronger for the extra comfort enjoyed during the process.

One of the Rarer Ducks.

The Scaup duck derives its name from its habit of feeding among broken shells, which are called scaup. It also frequents the oyster and mussel beds. It is a winter visitor to these shores, and some years the number of them is greater than in others. It is a late arrival, seldom making its appearance until the end of October or the beginning of November. In rough weather in the spring, small flocks of these Ducks arrive on the coast, and may frequently be seen at mouths of rivers. It is common in Iceland, where it breeds among the aquatic herbage and stones near the edge of the water.

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Destroyers of Insects.

Where the smaller Warblers such as Chiff Chaffs, Willow Wrens, and Whitethroats, can get at the rose trees, they keep them quite clear from insects. These birds have a habit of peering underneath the leaves, and, no doubt, it is the tiny caterpillars that they mostly find. When the old birds are feeding young ones, we see them time after time hunt through the trees and underwood, returning to the nest with food, without once touching the ground. They keep at this all day long, and must, during the time of rearing a brood, destroy some thousands of insects. When passing along a hedgerow or by the margin of a wood, one can often hear the noise made by the young ones whilst they are being fed. If these sounds are followed and a sharp lookout is kept on the old birds, the brood can frequently be located. When the young have so far advanced that in a few days they will be ready to leave the nest, the old birds in many cases are not so careful as they might be. It is just possible they are beginning to get tired of their tasks, and, having reared the young so far, imagine them to be perfectly safe. I have seen a Warbler bring food to the young when I and others have been standing within a few feet of the nest; and, what is more, she must have known we were watching her every action. Unfortunately such trustfulness is not always repaid as it should be.

A Graceful Shorebird.

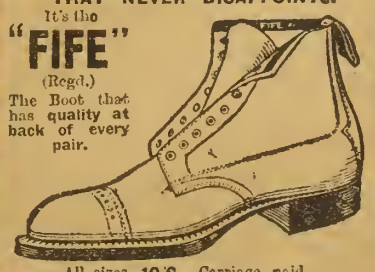
The most graceful of our wild birds which frequent the coast and inland waters, are the Terns. Their evolutions on the wing and forked tails have earned for them the name of Sea-Swallows. The most common is the Arctic Tern, distinguishable by its Dove-grey underparts, and quite red bill.

Golden Orioles' Nesting.

The Golden Oriole has again been seen in the south, and a pair or two have nested with us. Although shy and very wary birds, their brilliant dresses of bright yellow and black are much against their ever becoming common. Such birds fraternizing with our Thrushes and Blackbirds in the gardens and woods, would give a glow of colour to wild life, and add another object of beauty to the country side.

In the Hayfield.

The Warblers and Finches are busy among the rows of new-mown hay. Insects love heat, and the hot sun shining upon the somewhat moist hay causes an atmosphere in which small insects of all kinds revel. The wild birds are quite aware of this, and almost every row and haycock has its feathered searcher after trifles. The nesting birds may be seen making frequent journeys to the hedgerow, and back again to the field. No doubt the Finches find seeds in plenty. In this beautiful summer weather it is good to sit in the shade and watch the doings of the birds.



The Crimson-Breasted Linnet.

One hardly recognises the Linnet in his brilliant summer plumage, which is only acquired in the breeding season. In some specimens this is exceedingly noticeable. Such birds are evidently old ones, and of possibly four or five years of age, for they are generally wild and not easily approached. So different are their summer and winter garbs, that old writers considered there were more than one species, but their winter dress is only a mantle covering the more brilliant plumage. It is said that in the humid atmosphere of the Atlantic Islands, many Linnets retain their brilliant "breeding dress" all the year round, winter costumes being the exception rather than the rule.

Coloured Plate.

An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.

Calendar.

A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.

"Work of the Year."

A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.

"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."

Fully illustrated with sketches from specially-taken photographs, this is the finest article on the art of washing birds ever published. By following the clear instructions, and studying the diagrams, the veriest beginner can successfully compass the washing of his own birds.

"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."

A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.

"Pairs Matched for Breeding."

A contribution from the pen of a well-known judge, which will make the fancier think.

"The Breeding of Hybrids."

An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.

"The Keeping of British Birds."

A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.

"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."

"Review of the Exhibition Year."

Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.

"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."

A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.

"Glossary of Terms."

The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

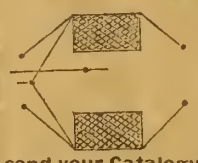
Hodgson Bros., Liverpool-rd., St. Helens.



SPRING NET TRAPS.

Self-acting spring net traps; the strongest, cheapest and best ever yet put before the fancy. Frames are made of No. 8 gauge bronzed steel wire, so that they will not buckle about after being used a few times. Springs are made of best tempered spring steel wire, and will last a lifetime. Price, 1/6 each, three for 4/-; to trade, 10/- per dozen. Quite simple to work, ready baited; all post paid. —W. Cornwall, 707, Lincoln-rd., Peterborough.

ARE YOU READY

for the ensuing catching season by having all your appliances ready? If not I can supply you with everything you require at lowest prices consistent with quality; clap nets, made from finest thread, ¾-in mesh, 3 yds. long, 4/- pair; 4 yds. 5/-, 5 yds. 6/-, 6 yds. 7/-, 7 yds. 8/-, 8 yds. 9/-, 9 yds. 10/-, 10 yds. 11/- per pair, all 5½ ft. deep and 4 ft. fly; all clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted with poles, pegs, lines and everything ready for immediate use; bat folding sparrow nets fitted on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair, ditto fitted on 19 ft. poles, 6/6 pair; loose netting, pure thread, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd., post free; scores of different sizes of nets always in stock; single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to immediately reset itself soon as bird is caught, 1/6 each; self-acting spring net traps, 24 in. long, 1/- each; 18 in. long, 9d. each; carriage 4d. extra; these net traps are totally unlike any other on the market, being much larger, more simple to use, require no pegging down, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook; real Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, will not run in sun, and guaranteed to hold a hawk; ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample box 3d.; all post free; pure hemp pull lines, 65 yds. long, specially spun without "snarl," or "back twist," 1/4 each, carriage paid; bird brace swivels 6d. doz., post free; stave poles, flirt pegs, store cages, and everything required by catchers always in stock; for full printed list send stamp; all the leading professional catchers use my appliances, and will have no others. Everything sent on approval at my risk, either cash or deposit system, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given; last season I publicly asked every disappointed purchaser to smash up the goods I sent him if they did not prove in every way exactly as advertised, and described, and I would return every penny of his money, but not one article was broken up, nor was I ever asked to return a copper; this offer is still open to one and all. (Imitators please copy.) The reason I am so confident as to value of my goods is because no expense is spared to make them as durable as possible, and my workmen are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced bird-catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required. Thousands of testimonials received and published during past few seasons; don't forget the old name and address; no connection with any other house in the trade.
W. GORE, 131, Gooch Street, BIRMINGHAM.

BIRD CATCHERS.

Of Course, you cannot afford to be always buying. You require appliances that not only work well, but last and give satisfaction, then buy from the Actual Maker. Read following unsolicited Testimonial:—460, Underwood Lane, Crewe, Cheshire. Sir, please send your Catalogue of Nets, I had a pair from Birmingham and they are completely done, advertised as Hemp lines they were only parcel string, of no use whatever. MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS.

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Cape-hill, Birmingham.

BEGINNERS: READ "CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL.

HEYWOOD AND DIS. C.B.S.

Half yearly meeting held at Central Dining Rooms on July 28th, Mr. James Perry (President) in the chair. The balance-sheet for the First Feather Show was read and accepted, and the prize money was paid. The election of four committeemen for the next twelve months took place, and resulted in Messrs. W. Ridings, James Booth, J. Waddington, and C. Pregnall being elected. It was afterwards decided to hold a question night at the next meeting, questions to be asked and answered by the members.—A. H. MEADOWCROFT, Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY AND DIS. O.S.

At the last meeting a vote of condolence was passed to the wife and family of the late Mr. Dan Hope, of Hull, who was so well known to local fanciers, and who has rendered valuable services to our society. The schedule for our open show was duly passed, and consists of 30 open classes and ten members', the latter being made up of four Canary classes, four British bird classes, one mule, and one for foreign birds. Special prizes are coming in well, and these should be the means of securing a very large entry. The society are already making preparations for a big turn out, and have many willing workers. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Pepper for his services as judge in connection with the table show held prior to this meeting.—MOORE AND CROWSTON, Hon. Secs.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held on August 1st at Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. There was a good attendance. The special business of the meeting was the consideration of a letter from one of the leading specialist clubs, asking whether or not we would care to take on their club show this year, in conjunction with our annual open show, November 20th and 21st. The matter having been thoroughly discussed, it was unanimously decided that we intimate our willingness to accept the club show and the secretaries were instructed to write to them to that effect. The scale of prize money for the open show was then gone into, and it was decided that we again give four money prizes in each class, as follows:—1st, 10s.; 2nd, 5s.; 3rd, 3s.; 4th, 2s.; with a special prize of 2s. 6d. for most points in each class. A discussion on the various disinfectants used when washing cages was then opened, and was taken part in by Messrs. Farrar, Swan, J. M. Walker, Copeland, and A. Walker, who imparted much useful information to the other members present.—REID and MADDISON, Secretaries.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

At the meeting held on August 1st a fairly large number of members attended, the president, Mr. J. Naden, being in the chair. We decided to give our patronage to the following shows: Rochdale O.C., Manchester, Rochdale Good Intent, Littleborough, and Crystal Palace. These were the shows at which our members will compete for points medals. Only four birds are to be nominated for the L.C.A. specials, as this will give all an equal chance. Novices must put "L.C.A.N." behind their nominations. We think this next show season we shall see a revival of Lancashire's on the show bench. With such a well-known authority on Lancashires as Mr. Barrass as judge at Rochdale Town Hall Show, and with good judges at the other shows, there should be some bumping entries. It must rest solely with the exhibitors whether the Lancashires get good entries. Other societies will give us classes in future years. We also decided to have a die made for medal, as the impression on it is a very good one, and will make up well. We decided to hold our next meeting at the Boar's Head, Stockport, on September 12th as we have a few members about here.—WM. ADAMS, Sec.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held in Station Hotel on July 30th. Mr. Wm. Ronald in the chair. The secretary read a lot of correspondence from specialist clubs, etc. One of them was from Mr. T. C. Crawhall resigning his membership of our association as a protest against the severe penalty inflicted on him by district No. 1 Committee of the Cage Bird Union for showing two birds at a non-licensed show. This caused a bit of discussion. After hearing the report of our C.B.U. delegate, Mr. J. M. MacDonald, who was present at the district meeting, the members unanimously refused to accept Mr. Crawhall's resignation, and are of the opinion that the district committee might have taken a more lenient view of the case, seeing that it was a first offence. It was intimated that we had been successful in securing the patronage of the following specialist clubs:—The Northern Norwich F.C., the Northern Crest Club, the Northern Y.C.C., and the Northern B.B.M. and F.B.C. We have added a Yorkshire class for novices (open) to meet the requirements of the N.Y.C.C. novices. This makes seven classes in all. We are still progressing, and made four new members at this meeting; Messrs. John Dobbie (Byker), C. B. Wilson (Tynemouth), and John Swan and Thos. Sowerby (Wallsend). Fanciers will receive a hearty welcome to any of our meetings. If by chance the gentleman who wrote me wishing to join our club should see this announcement, would he kindly send me his name and address which he omitted in his letter. His letter bore the North Shields post-mark, July 1st. There is a treat in store for us at our next meeting when Mr. Jas. Shepherd (Newcastle) will lecture on something seasonable, the subject to be announced in CAGE BIRDS later on. The secretary moved a vote of thanks to our district delegate, Mr. MacDonald, for his lucid report on the No. 1 District Committee meeting.—JAS. JOHNSTON, Hon. Sec.

The Stock Book (Our Invaluable "Breeding Room Register.") post free 7d.

A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." This book is one no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred—keep account of their strong and weak points. It contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

THE SHOWS.

DEWSBURY AND DIS. C.B.S.

Second young bird show of the season was held on August 1st at headquarters, Royal Hotel. Five classes were provided, all of them Yorkshires. Though the entry was not large the quality on the whole was excellent, several birds of superlative merit being benched. Mr. A. Bottomley (Leasterdyke) judged, and gave every satisfaction. RAYNER, Hon. Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

The members held a very successful table show on August 1. Three classes were provided and 31 birds were entered. There was a grand turn out of visitors. Mr. Swan was first and third in Mule or Hybrid class with his two Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids of his own breeding. They are both very nice birds, and look like turning out toppers. Mr. W. Hamilton judged, and gave every satisfaction. BORD.: 1, spl, 2, McKinley; 3, Murray. BRIT.: 1, Clarkson; 2, Pollock Bros.; 3, Sinclair; 4, spl, Thomson. MULE OR HYB.: 1, spl, 3, Swan; 2, Clarkson.—J. POLLOCK, Sec.

BINGLEY AND DIS. O.S.

Members' show held in the Assembly Rooms on August 1st, when 45 birds were staged in four classes. Mr. R. Halliday placed the cards, and gave general satisfaction. For the members' cup (with three highest birds to count) Messrs. Smith and Son were easily top scorers, scoring 56 points out of a possible 63; 2nd, A. Livesey, 40; 3rd, W. Walton, 34.

Special for best Canary given by Mr. Moore, sen., was won by Mr. Metcalf. Mr. Moore's birds did not compete. Special for most points in Brit. last two shows, a copper kettle, was won by Mr. Saddler; he also won special for best Brit. Special for the most points at last three shows was won by Mr. Moore, sen. This was given by Mr. Harness. It is worthy of special mention that he has taken all the eight first prizes at recent shows, under three different judges, and must be congratulated on his success.—MOORE AND CROWSTON, Hon. Secs.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

This show was held in the Assembly Room, Oldham-street, Renshaw-street, Liverpool, on July 25th. The usual classification was given, and there were about 70 odd entries. The quality in the Yorkshire Greens was very good, and there were some birds of extra fine colour and type. There were also a few eye-openers in the Norwich Greens, which will with luck make a name for themselves and their owners later on. A few real tip-top clear and ticked Yorkshires were benched. A small sprinkling of typical Borders were shown, and here and there one could be seen with a slight tendency towards either diminutive Yorkshires or Norwich. These Borders possessed fine quality of feather. Owing to the earlier youngsters having gone into moult, and the second round not being so prolific as usual, or the third round birds old enough, the members were handicapped from turning out in force as they could have wished. Several classes were amalgamated, and some were cancelled with one entry. They have the birds, but these circumstances prevented their being on view at the show. Close on 20 valuable specials were offered, part for the champions and part for the novices. There was a general good fellowship among the members, and the Altrinchm members of the G.C.A. were made heartily welcome. The secretary is Mr. Hadwin, who, with his official staff, are deserving of much credit for their able management of affairs. It speaks well for the life and energy being put into the G.C.A. to know that this association has "buried the hatchet" with all parties, so that the Greens will again be seen all over the country in turn. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and we heard no serious grumbling after the results came out.

INVERNESS O.A.

Annual Young Bird Show held in the Crown Mission Hall, July 29. All the classes were well filled, and the quality of the exhibits was excellent. The tit-bit of the show was an extremely handsome medal for best bird, which caused some friendly strife, and was ultimately carried off by Mr. A. Smith (Lochiel Arms) with a promising dark Crest, possessing good size and density of feather. The hall is an ideal one for a small show, being well lighted from top and very lofty. The staging was admirably arranged, and through the untiring efforts of the Secretary, Mr. A. Urquhart, and his assistant, Mr. J. Batchen, everything was in spick and span order in good time. Mr. J. Young judged, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

CREST (6): 1, 4, A. Smith, former yellow, dark crest, good size and type, fair skull, nice texture feather, shou'd improve; latter dark C.B. of good quality and size, good head and length of feather; 2, Tibb, buff, C.B. of good size, but shade narrow in front; 3, Stanford, yell. variog., C.B., fair size and head. PLAINHEAD (10): 1, 2, Stanford, 1st model for type, nice colour, in rare bloom; 2nd, yellow, close up; 3, Mackenzie, yellow varieg., best bird in class for size and colour, but minus a claw, or would have been further up. BORDERS (2): 1, 2, W. and R. Duncan, former yellow, very fair type and colour, should improve; 2, beaten in wing carriage only. YORKS (6): 1, Todd, correct type, slim and straight as a pencil, good colour and stands well up; 2, 4, Smith, 2nd, another well-shaped one, about right size, should greatly improve with a little handling; 4th, fair, looks like a very young one; 3, Mackenzie, colour fed, good size and type. HYBRID (3): 1, Tibb, dark Goldie-Canary, well up in size, and fair colour, pity has a few light feathers; 2, Duncan Greenie-Canary, good-sized yellow, very promising bird, colour food would work wonders here; 3, Dorward, Lintie-Canary, small, but neat.

CAMBRIDGE.

On Bank Holiday, August 3rd, a really fine show of cage birds was held in connection with the Mammoth Exhibition, usually held on Midsummer Common on that date. The day was an exceedingly brilliant one, and the result was that a vast assemblage of holiday makers visited the grounds and passed through the tent set apart for cage birds. This section is usually very attractive, and at Cambridge it proved no exception to the general rule. The show was held under the rules of the C.B.U., and, considering the time of year, the birds shown were generally in commendable trim. Mr. W. Driver is the hon. secretary, and to him is due a large measure of the credit for the able management of affairs. The heat of the tent at one time was very oppressive, but the steward of the department, Mr. A. E. Brooks, was both thoughtful and energetic, and as soon as judging was over did his level best to alleviate matters by judiciously opening the tent sides and admitting air. Considering the enormous throng of sightseers who passed through the tent, its capacity was not large enough by half. What would many London societies not give to obtain such a "gate" as must have passed the turnstiles to obtain admission to the grounds on which this show was held. Mr. J. Robson judged under circumstances which bespoke for him deep and general sympathy.

NOR. YELL. (8): 1, Howe, very smart bird, rare shape, good colour, full of quality; 2, Handley, bonny bird of pleasing tone of colour, close-fitting jacket for time of year; 3, Cooper, a bird of quality; vhc, hc, c, Brooks. SOUTH SHIELDS AND DIS. C.B.S.

Members' First Feather Show (including British and Foreign birds) was held at the Eureka Hotel, Frederick-street on July 29th. Fifteen classes received 80 entries, which was not quite as many as expected, owing to the most prominent members' birds having gone into moult. Still, if entries were not so good the quality was quite the best seen at this fixture. Mr. Jos. Richardson put down a strong team of Norwich, and won special for most points in classes 1, 2, 3, 4. The second special was won by Mr. Wm. Duke for most entries, and third special went to Mr. Walter Smith with a fine Parrot for best bird in last five classes. Some fine exhibits were staged by Mr. M. Woodhouse, including a Great Grey Shrike, Waxwing, and Indian Shama. Many local fanciers paid a visit to the show, and everything went well. The arrangements were well carried out by Messrs. Thompson, Howden, Baker, Telford, Alty, Bennett, Bullock, Carrick, and others. Messrs. Duke and Barass, the secretaries, were there doing all they could to bring the show to a successful issue. Mr. John Gilhespy judged, and his awards seemed to give every satisfaction.

ROYSTON.

This show was held on August 3, in connection with the Horticultural Society, in a field, on the Newmarket Road. It proved a great success. Entries came up well, competition being keen, and the quality of the exhibits good. The winning Norwich is a good bird, having fine type and colour. Also the winning Goldie, though showing a little guttering in blaze, was of good size and colour. Mr. Billett judged.

NOR. (13): 1, spl, 2, vhc, Moss, winner clear yellow, nice type and quality; 2nd variegated yellow, rare type and full of colour; 3, Pedder, Buff, nice size and colour; extra 3rd, Ison, buff, good head, nice blocky type; vhc, Atlee; 2, hc, Coote, Hoig; vhc, Pedder; a real good o'ass. NORTH SUBURBAN SOCIETY (Australia.)

The thirteenth annual show of the North Suburban Canary Improvement Society was held in the Town Hall, Brunswick, on the 18th June, and remained open till the 20th. The hall was prettily decorated with plants, festoons of green leaves, and flags. The Mayoress of Brunswick (Mrs. A. Dick) opened the show in the presence of a large number of ladies, as well as many fanciers of the sterner sex. The Mayor and Mayoress were introduced by the president (Mr. C. Meaker). The president of the Crest Club presented the Mayor and Mayoress on behalf of the N. Suburban Society, with a Canary and cage, nicely decorated with tartan ribbon, and made an eloquent speech on the strides the society had taken of late, also saying it gave him pleasure to speak to such a large assemblage of ladies and fanciers. Afternoon tea was provided by Mrs. G. Whaley and Mr. G. Ward. The secretary, Mr. C. F. C. Rose, and his energetic committee were worthy of praise for the way the show was carried out. The show embraces close on 600 exhibits of Canaries, and cage birds, and among the latter are many talkers, including a Rosella Parrot, over 21 years of age, belonging to Mr. W. Stevens. The North Suburban Society is a progressive association, embracing most of the leading "feather" fanciers of the State, and its annual fixture is an important event. In the Crests the Roberts Cup (an English donation) was won by Mr. J. White, while the challenge cup was won by Mr. W. H. Stevens. The chief honours in the open classes fell to Messrs. G. Whaley, W. H. Stevens, J. Wales, S. Chambers, H. Hagg, A. B. Mason, and P. Very. The Crestbred Challenge Cup was won by Mr. G. Whaley. In the Plainhead division, Mr. T. H. Co'e won the challenge cup, while Messrs. J. White, Warner and Rose, G. Whaley, C. Schifferdecker, O. Ward, and T. Cole, were on top in the classes. In the Cinnamons there was a good display, and the challenge cup was won by W. Thompson, the other principal prize takers being Messrs. S. Davis, A. Windsor, H. Kilner. The Yorkshire Cup was won by Mr. W. J. Myring, while in the open classes chief honours fell to Messrs. Windsor, C. Boston, W. T. Linton. In the Lizard classes, P. Very and W. T. Linton were conspicuous. There was a beautiful show of foreign and Australian Finches.

CATERHAM.

Thanks to the energy and enthusiasm of the hon. secretary of the Caterham F.S., Mr. A. J. Kilby, the members have commenced to hold young stock shows as a means of increasing the interest of the members and the public. The first was held on July 27th in the large room at the Railway Hotel. The response in entries was by no means disheartening for a first attempt, some excellent quality Norwich being staged. This might have been expected, as Mr. A. J. Kilby holds a strong hand in this variety. He put down a fine team, and secured all four premier honours and the special. The leader was a slashing yellow with rare body, fine head, and rich quality; 2nd, sweet bird, that should, with luck in the moult, stand well at the autumn shows, said to be the Reigate winner. Messrs. Botell and F. Topp also sent some very nice Norwich, and staged them well into the bargain. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and at the close made a few comments on the specimens to the large and interested audience.

MACCLESFIELD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The fourth annual First Feather Show was held on July 11th in the Assembly Rooms, Chestergate, when it was opened by the Mayoress, Mrs. Oldfield. There was an excellent entry, the quality of the birds being all that could be desired. The judge was Mr. A. G. Davis, who placed the cards to the satisfaction of all.

WEST STANLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Young Bird Show was held in the King's Head Hotel, Stanley, on July 25th, when Mr. W. J. Taylor (Newcastle-on-Tyne) judged, giving every satisfaction. There was a splendid entry, there being close on one hundred. Although it was rather late in the season for showing birds in their first feather, the quality of the exhibits was exceptionally good, especially in the Norwich, Borders, and Yorkshires. The show throughout was a great success, the exhibits being of a good quality. The judge, although his task was a hard one, gave great satisfaction to all concerned, and a good feeling reigned amongst members. During the afternoon the show was crowded by fanciers. The worthy secretary is Mr. Matt. Mason, who, together with the committee, worked with zeal and energy from beginning to end.

NOR. YELL., CL., ETC.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Atkinson Bros., four nice birds, well staged, and of rare quality. BUFF: 1, 2, Mason, two nice birds in good in feather; 3, Crosby, another good one; vhc, Murray, splendid bird. YORKS. YELL., CL., ETC.: 1, 2, Fletcher, two clinkers of rare size and nicely shown; 3, vhc, Potts. BUFF: 1, 3, Bentick, winner real nice bird of exceptional feather; 2, W. Bird Mimicry.

A curious case of mimicry in birds is recorded from a place near Rio Janeiro. It is that of a species of Sparrow Hawk, which upon migration into another district assumes the plumage of another species of insectivorous habits. It is suggested that this is done with the object of deluding small birds into the belief that it is harmless in character.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post free, 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

By THOMAS SMITH.

It is not advisable to encourage the old birds to nest after the month of July. When backward, some pairs are tardy in commencing, and in that case naturally continue beyond the ordinary stopping stage.

Late breeding is a severe strain on the old birds, if they commence nesting in March, but cases arise in every bird-room where a start is not made till the beginning of June. In such cases it would not be wise to separate the pair at the usual time, say at the end of July, as the hen would go on laying even though alone.

Rearing and Moulting.

Rearing should be comparatively easy in July. Chickweed in certain districts is then very plentiful, and both the old and young thrive well on it. As to the breaking up of the pairs, no hard and fast rule can be laid down. Each breeder knows his own stock, and should be guided by his good sense.

Moulting generally commences in the middle of July, and it is then that the weaknesses in both the young and old birds are discovered. The birds hitherto regarded as being strong and healthy, often break down with some ailment. Hence the absolute necessity for keeping a watch on the condition of every bird. Wherever there is the slightest appearance of a decline in health, apply one of the various remedies recorded each week in the columns of CAGE BIRDS. It is at this stage that the importance of keeping both old and young birds healthy is most felt.

A bird in full health will shower off feathers, and in a very short time will appear in new garments. Most young birds start moulting at the age of eight weeks, and the quicker they pass through it the better. Every care should be exercised during the moult. They should not be kept in a draughty place, but in a cosy (not too warm) quarter. A promising bird which is likely to distinguish itself on the show bench should be kept alone in a fair-sized cage.

A moderate use of the bath assists the moult, and bathing utensils should be placed at the disposal of the birds in the early part of the day. A bright day should be selected for this, so as to enable the birds to dry themselves and avoid sitting down with wet feathers.

A little egg and biscuit mixture should be given daily, but the staple food at this stage should be Canary seed, and a little German rape of the very best quality. On Tuesdays and Fridays a little saffron should be given in the water; it helps to give lustre to the feathers, and is very beneficial. A moderate supply of ripe chickweed can be given. This is very acceptable, but care should be taken not to bring on diarrhœa.

On Covering Cages.

In July, August, and September the cages should be covered with fine, white muslin to keep the birds clean and tidy. A capital idea is to have a double set; one set can, while the other is in use, be taken off and plunged into hot water for the purpose of destroying the red mite that have taken refuge in the cloth. Birds that are protected by muslin moult cleaner and come out with a better finish, which is a great consideration in a show Scotch Fancy or Belgian Canary. A bird intended for exhibition should occupy a clean cage, and special attention should be bestowed upon it, always having tidy perches and seed boxes. Train a Scotch Fancy Canary to be cleanly, and it will keep in a good condition.

A slovenly bird, no matter how excellent its quality, has not the same chance of success in competition as the tidy, smart bird, with every feather clean, and in its proper place.

A piece of sulphate of iron, the size of a split pea, should be put into the drinking water three times a week for the purpose of toning the birds up. It will otherwise be found to be beneficial. When using this sulphate the glasses should be kept scrupulously clean, or they will become tarnished, and never have the same clean appearance which they had at first.

When the birds are breaking into the moult, condition is of far greater importance than is generally supposed. If birds are to pass through that trying ordeal successfully they must be in a vigorous state of health, otherwise the moult will be tardy, and every fancier knows what that means. The birds must be well kept and well fed. Should any appear to be disposed to be light, I think nothing picks them up better than egg and biscuit mixture one day, with say five drops of best olive oil, and the next day bread soaked in milk which has been boiled. Continue this alternately for say two or three weeks. There is a life-giving power in sterilized milk.

Young birds can, as a rule, forage for themselves at four weeks old, and so soon as they can they should be left to their own resources. The egg should be gradually reduced and the biscuit correspondingly increased. Crushed hemp should also form a part of ordinary diet, as it helps to get the birds on to Canary seed.

The bath is, in my opinion, given too soon as a rule, resulting in chest and other troubles. I have entered bird-rooms late in the afternoon and have seen young birds literally soaked, and seemingly overpowered by the drenching they have had. It has been quite impossible for them to get sufficiently dry in feather to admit of their roosting comfortably. Needless to say, such a condition of things incurs the risk of the contraction of dangerous troubles. Young birds as well as old ones should only have the use of the bath in the morning or early forenoon, when the weather is bright.

Should a bird's feathers be slow in drying and clinging together, it should be caught and the feathers gently rubbed with a piece of silk, finishing up by grooming the feathers in the direction in which they grow. On being released it will shake itself, and in a very few minutes will be alright. The bath is beneficial, but caution has to be exercised in its use.

An Important Point.

A debatable point is, should the owner or his friends spend much time in the breeding-room? I think it is wise to let the birds have a little company, but care should be taken not to let your company interfere with the breeding operations. Some birds are very shy and will not feed when a person is in the room.

In some rooms fanciers congregate on a given occasion and smoke and talk, forgetting the mischief they are doing in depriving the young of their life-giving food. Whenever a bird is seen to stop feeding when a person enters the room, it should not be disturbed, but ought to be left alone, to attend to its duties. Some hens will, however, feed when a person is standing looking at them; they are not all shy.

Drinking glasses should be kept scrupulously clean, and fresh water supplied every morning. It is most important that they should have the best of water that can be procured for drinking purposes.

OBITUARY.

J. JUDSEN (St. Helen's).

I regret to have to inform you of the death of our highly esteemed chairman, Mr. J. Judsen, which took place on Saturday last, August 1st, after a short but painful illness, writes Mr. J. Shufflebotham, hon. secretary of the St. Helen's Recreation F.A. The funeral took place on August 4th in Eccleston Churchyard, amid much sorrow and regret. There was a large attendance of workpeople and gentlemen of the town and district. Representing our Association were Dr. Siddall (vice-chairman), Messrs. J. Grice, J. Leather (treasurer), R. Little (assistant secretary), and myself.

It is interesting to look at the very good illustrations of exhibition birds, with their faults, etc., which have recently appeared in CAGE BIRDS, and to see the way they are judged in England, writes Mr. A. G. Broadman (North Fitzroy, Australia.) The Goldfinch plate was very useful out here for the judge of our show, as I know the article was very judiciously read, and he went by all the points, which has never been done before.

The success of the recent Marathon race in connection with the Olympic Games was largely due to the assistance rendered by the helpers, who were mounted on Rudge-Whitworth bicycles, 17 of which were kindly lent by Messrs. Rudge-Whitworth, Ltd. Many of the riders in the cycling events rode Rudge-Whitworth mounts, and the same makers' machines came in first in the 1,000 metre and the 2,000 metre tandem races.

The pair of Thrushes that for two seasons built a nest in an old hat which had been put up to scare away the birds in the garden of Archdeacon Edmondes's residence at Bridgend, returned to build in the same spot this year, but found that for the ecclesiastical head covering of the Archdeacon had been substituted a soft felt hat belonging to the gardener. Being no respector of persons—or hats—the pair built their nest in it quite contentedly.

Do it now! Do what? Why, order Ramsden's pure peppers. The stock is getting low, and when finished cannot be replaced. So order at once to prevent disappointment. Ramsden's specials next season will be restricted for competition amongst those exhibitors who have colour-fed only and solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Prices, 2s. lb., 5lbs. 7s. 6d., 22lbs. 30s. Hot Natal 3s. lb., all post or carriage paid—Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London.—(Advt.).

On Saturday morning last an exciting bird chase was witnessed in Old Burlington Street, London, W., writes a correspondent. A fine Nightingale had escaped from its cage, and was very cleverly recaptured by its owner, Mr. R. J. Pretty. For would-be Nightingale catchers the mode of procedure is appended. First locate your bird; then take a tin box of mealworms and tap the lid, and as soon as the attention of the bird is attracted, advance gently towards it, holding between the thumb and forefinger a struggling mealworm. When quite near pass the left hand behind the bird (still keeping the struggling mealworm in front), and grab quickly—it is quite effectual, and easily scores a first.

Mr. J. Robson, who judged at the Cambridge Mammoth Show held on August Bank Holiday, did so under circumstances which bespoke for him deep and general sympathy. On his arrival at the show a telegram was handed to him, telling him that within half-an-hour of his leaving home his son, a bright, promising lad of 15 years, had passed away. Death came only after a long and painful illness.

The South European large-billed Reed Bunting (Emberiza pyrrhuloides palustris) was shot on Romney Marsh, in Kent, between Rye and Lydd, on May 26, and is a new addition to the British Bird list. This bird resembles our common Reed Bunting, but may readily be distinguished therefrom by its vastly greater beak. There can be no doubt about the authenticity of this specimen, since it was exhibited at the last meeting of the British Ornithologists' Club by Mr. J. S. Nicoll, who saw the bird soon after it had been killed. This is the first occurrence of the Buntingin the British Islands, and it must have wandered from Southern Spain or Italy, where it is a common species.

Pity Dick.

Teacher: "Johnnie, give me the name of a bird that is now extinct?"

Johnnie: "Dick."

Teacher: "Dick?" What sort of a bird is that?"

Johnnie: "Our Canary. The cat extincted him."

New Secretary at Llanelly.

Our esteemed secretary Mr. J. Simon, with the regret of all the members, has resigned the position of secretary, writes Mr. Daniel John. At the same time he willingly agreed to take office as assistant secretary to me, I having undertaken, at the unanimous wish of the society, to act as secretary for the next show.

Cinnamon Canary Club.

The following shows have received our patronage:—Great Harwood, October 9 and 10; Accrington, October 23 and 24; Manchester, October 30 and 31; Blackburn, November 6 and 7; Nottingham, November 14 and 16; Sunderland, Novembed 20 and 21; National (Crystal Palace), February 5-9. Messrs. G. Beck, Blackburn, and J. E. Davies, Stockport, have been elected members. All cages are to be painted inside with Aspinall's Hedge Sparrow Egg Tint.—R. J. PRETTY, Hon. Sec., Cinnamon C.C.

The Hooter Hooted.

A ludicrous incident recently occurred in the Cranes' paddock, near the old bridge in the North Garden of the Zoological Gardens, it is said. A string of barges was being towed down the Regent's Canal, and the men in the towboat found that the signals from their hooter were answered by the loud trumpet-like notes of a Common Crane. This amused them greatly and they continued the performance till they passed out of sight and hearing. The bird became excited, and throwing its head back emitted its loud, shrill cry as if in response to the challenge of a rival. Its behaviour attracted the attention of the visitors, many of whom watched the singular performance.

Swallows Defeat a Squirrel.

The wife of Mr. J. Bamford, of Oldfields Hall, Uttoxeter, reports having seen a fight between two Swallows and a squirrel. Inside the summer-house in the hall grounds a pair of Swallows have built a nest. Mrs. Bamford has encouraged the squirrels to frequent the summer-house by scattering nuts on the ground. A day of two ago she saw a squirrel trying to oust a Swallow from the nest, which now contains young. The bird fought pluckily, and her mate assisted. The squirrel, however, was winning when both birds suddenly flew away, and, returning immediately with large reinforcements, attacked the squirrel again, eventually driving it off.

Crested Canary Club.

As the support to be accorded to Societies will be decided this month, I beg to invite, through the medium of your valued journal, all applications to be made forthwith. As the two ten-guinea bowls have during the past four years been competed for in the West, South, Midlands, and East, it becomes the opportunity of the North, and although a quantity of applications are already to hand, I am anxious to submit an increased list from which the committee may select. To obtain the Club's support, no less than two classes must be provided for Crests and two for Crestbreds, and the club recommend an addition of current year classes. Novice classes, one for Crests and one for Crestbreds, have also proved remunerative in the past.—JOHN TYSON, Hon. Sec., 169, Sloane-street, London.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

At a special meeting held at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on August 1, the club's patronage and support was granted to the following shows, viz.: Challenge Cup Competition to Great Harwood, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Gateshead, Scottish National, Bradford City, Shipley, Laisterdyke, Bradford (West), Huddersfield and Crystal Palace. No. 2 Competition, Ramsden Cup and Money Specials, Dulwich and Peckham, Rochdale, Eccleshill, Harrogate, Keighley, Great Horton, Windhill, Halifax, Bradford (East), and Crystal Palace. No. 3 Competition, Sandiford Cup, for members outside Yorkshire, Accrington, Manchester, Liverpool, Bristol, Worcester, Plumstead and Woolwich, Long Eaton, Cockermouth, Darlington, and Crystal Palace. Will members please notify any change of address, also fanciers desirous of becoming members please forward names and addresses for inclusion in the club's year book (in course of preparation.—JOHN GREAVES, Hon. Sec.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

I cannot say that I am doing well with my Norwich Canaries (two cocks and three hens), having only nine young ones to date. Two of the hens, however, are sitting again. I have six pairs up for Hybrids—Bullfinch-Greenfinch, Chaffinch-Bramblefinch, Redpoll-Greenfinch, two pairs Linnet-Bullies, and Yellowhammer-Canary. But I have had no young from them so far, the young from quite a number of eggs having died in the shell. I am, however, hoping for better luck from the next round. Mr. Samuel Dean, my partner in British birds, has also five or six pairs up, but so far has had no luck—plenty of eggs, but no young. Except, I should mention, from the Goldfinch-Canary pair, but these have also died.—P. JOWETT (St. Horton).

City of Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C.

Our members' breeding results are poor as regards numbers, but I hear a whisper that there are a few good Norwich on the east side of the city. I hope this is a correct report.—A. SOUTH, assistant secretary.

Bo'ness and District O.A.

I stated a few weeks ago that Messrs. Grant and Sneddon had bred a Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid. It is now on the sticks and doing well—a nice, large, bold bird. Since then they have been fortunate enough to breed another one from the same pair, which will be on the sticks in a few days, it also being a nice, large bird. With care in moulting, these two ought to do something on the show bench later on. Messrs. Grant and Sneddon have also some very good young Plainheads which are now well on the colour-feed. Messrs. McGregor and Boyd have been fortunate enough to breed two Hybrids from the Greenfinch-Bullfinch, although the first nest contained 5 eggs, 4 of them fertile; but these failed to hatch. This time she again laid 5 eggs, 3 being fertile, and 2 of them hatching. I think this is a record, 7 eggs being fertile out of 10 laid. The Bullfinch is nesting again; let us hope the whole clutch is fertile this time. The 2 Hybrids at the time of writing are over a week old, and are doing well, being exceptionally large for their age. If they only have the good fortune to rear them right, these breeders ought to do something startling later on. They have also some very fine Linnet and Goldfinch Mules on the sticks. Mr. T. Scotland has also done well in Mule breeding, having bred some fine Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin, and Redpoll Mules. Mr. J. Meikle has bred a few good Plainheads, which are now well on the colour-feed. The rest of the fanciers in this district have only done fairly well.—FINDLAY MCGILLIVRAY, hon. sec. of the Bo'ness and Dis. O.A.

Loanhead, Dalkeith and District.

I have now visited most of the members of the Loanhead and Dalkeith District Society, and find that their results vary a good deal. Some I find have done very well, and others quite the opposite. But I am pleased to see that Scotch Fancies are gaining ground in our district, as we have four new breeders of this variety this year, and they have all managed to rear two or three for our club shows. Taking this variety for the year as numbers go, there should be close on 70 youngsters ready to do battle for their owners. The Norwich compare very favourably with those of last year, having a total of 92 youngsters. Borders still have a very firm hold, and I have no doubt that many a great winner will be seen both at Dalkeith and Loanhead shows out of a total of 455. Mules are more plentiful this year, and at the time of writing I have 20 Mules reported to me, so I think we may look forward to a hard fight in all sections in October. The following is a list of members' results:—Wm. McAdam and Wm. Masterton (Lasswade), 4 Norwich and 18 Borders, and 13 Borders respectively; A. Sinclair (Rosewell), 10 Norwich, 10 Borders, and 2 Mules; G. Harper (Bonnyrigg), 30 Borders; R. Fisher (Bonnyrigg), 2 Scotch Fancies and 12 Borders; J. Noble and D. Noble (Bonnyrigg), 12 Scotch Fancies and 13 Borders, and 6 Scotch Fancies and 6 Borders respectively; A. and J. Thompson (Newton Grange), 104 Borders; H. Beveridge (Newton Grange), 3 Mules; A. M. Gardner (Newton Grange), 6 Norwich; J. Carson (Easthouses), 15 Scotch Fancies and 19 Borders; J. Sinclair, J. Steel, A. Rowe, and J. Ewing (Dalkeith), 16 Borders; 34 Borders and 3 Mules; 2 Scotch Fancies and 20 Borders; and 14 Borders respectively; J. Pearson, R. Johnston, Bros. Nisbet, J. Bolton, and J. Kerr (Musselburgh), 41 Borders, 31 Norwich and 2 Mules; 12 Scotch Fancies; 8 Borders and 3 Norwich; 2 Borders and 13 Norwich; and 6 Norwich respectively; J. King (Deantown), 3 Scotch Fancies; A. Jardine and J. Allan (Polton), 2 Scotch Fancies; and 1 Scotch Fancy and 2 Mules respectively; J. and D. Yule (Loanhead), 5 Scotch Fancies, 2 Norwich, and 24 Borders; D. Small (Loanhead), 2 Scotch Fancies and 12 Borders; Wm. Nelson (Loanhead), 43 Borders; and W. B. Smart (Loanhead), 2 Scotch Fancies, 12 Norwich 4 Borders, and 7 Mules.—P. SINCLAIR (Loanhead).

The Rare Tree Sparrow.

The pretty Tree Sparrow is somewhat rare in the British Islands. It mostly frequents old trees, a favourite haunt being the pollard-willows by the banks of streams and small rivers. In some eastern countries it takes the place of our House Sparrow, and may be seen in the streets, and about the house-tops

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 229.
A HANDY SEED BIN.

Sent by T. H. Davies, 12ta, Walton Brook Road, Liverpool.

I send you a sketch of a box that I keep my bird-seed in. Almost any box from the grocer (cost, a penny) can be converted into such with very little trouble. It can be hung on the wall, or put on a shelf, and keeps the seed free from dust, mice, etc. My own has three partitions, one for rape, one for hemp and one for mixed seed. The seed is taken out by lifting either of the slides in front. The inside of the box is sloped, as seen in the second sketch, to allow the seed to fall to mouth of slide.—T. H. Davies.

No. 230.
A USEFUL SOLDERING LAMP.

I noticed recently a request for information how to tin a soldering iron. This I have always thought rather a tedious process, as also soldering with the iron. I herewith enclose a rough sketch of a lamp I have for a long time used for soldering, and with it I have made several all-wire cages. "A" is a piece of an old bicycle pump; the end is soldered to a box lid, or any other flat piece of metal that will make a stand. "C" is a moveable band, fitting pretty tight to "A"; to this is soldered at "E" the feeder of an oil-can with a bend at "H." The hollow end of the tube "F" is filled with asbestos, or any other substance that will absorb methylated spirit. "G" is a piece of indiarubber tubing attached to "D," for putting in the mouth. When ready to work, pour a little methylated spirit on "F," light it, and then blow through "G." This causes the flame to shoot out in a pointed jet, with which you heat the parts to be soldered. "C" can be moved up or down, thus raising the jet "H," and adjusting the flame.

Blind Birds.

It is stated that the practice of destroying the sight of captive birds to get more song out of them is still prevalent in Belgium.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left hand corner of the query.

(6)—If no answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds." 151, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARY QUERIES.

One Ray of Hope.

White City.—1. What you now tell me about these young Crests not having the bald patches when first caged off, and neither of the parents having such faults, rather alters the complexion of the case. It is quite possible that one or more of the young birds have plucked out the feathers and made these bald places. Some young birds are much addicted to this mischievous habit. If this is the case with your birds the feathers will be reproduced all right at the moult, if not before, so there is, after all, just a ray of hope. But it will be necessary for you to discover which bird or birds pluck the others and cage them off separately for moulting. Otherwise you will probably find the places plucked bare again as soon as the moult is over. 2. For obvious reasons I cannot answer this question. It would be unfair to others; besides, I know nothing at all about the one you mention. You can always safeguard your own interests by insisting upon buying on the Editor's deposit system. 3. Yes, your birds should agree now in the flight. But it would have been as well to have kept the sexes separate.

Young and Colour Feeding.

"New Beginner."—1. The young birds that are puffy and ruffled in feathers are probably only starting to moult. Give them a pinch of maw seed every second day, and on the intervening days a small piece of bread and milk for a few days, and drop giving green food for a week. 2. Most decidedly it is not too early to begin giving young Canaries colour-food at eleven weeks old, and especially when they begin to look puffy as yours do. On the contrary you should lose no time in getting them on the feed, or you may find them casting feathers before you begin, and will get the birds patchy at the end of the moult in consequence. If you prepare your colour food as frequently advised in this column there should be no necessity whatever to take away the seed. I always find the birds quite ready to consume as much colour as I wish whilst having free access to an unlimited supply of Canary and rape seed.

Swelling under Eye.

A Rice.—Gently pluck the feathers off the swelling, one at a time to avoid risk of breaking the skin, to make the top of it bare, then prick the "head" of the swelling in the thinnest part with a clean needle, press out the contents, and bathe the part with the solution you have been using, touching it afterwards with a smear of boric ointment. Of course, all this must be done gently, and requires a steady hand and a light touch. A lady friend would probably be the best operator. If you do not care to do this, bare the place as above, and paint the swelling with a camel hair pencil dipped in tincture of iodine. Be careful not to go near the eye with this. Give the bird a saline aperient for a few days.

Removing Cock Bird, etc.

A. M. Johnson.—1. It was too late to remove the cock when the eggs were so near hatching, and some hens will not sit at all when he is removed, so that it is always advisable to keep a watch on a hen when the cock is taken away for a few hours, and if she comes off the nest and stays off the cock must be returned, when she will generally go back to the nest at once. Lukewarm water from a fancy point of view, these whimsical hens are scarcely worth troubling about, especially when they also prove non feeders. I certainly would not advise you to keep her for another year. 2. As a rule, two or three broods a year are sufficient for a hen to have. Only in quite exceptional cases should four broods be allowed. In your case I would not advise you to mate the hen again this year. It is too late to expect many fertile eggs, and when you have such a hen as this one to deal with the game is not worth the candle.

Young Birds Going Wrong.

Auld Reekie.—I expect the feeding is at the root of the trouble, but you say nothing about this. Feed them on a staple of plain Canary seed only, and give separately a pinch of hemp per bird, half a teaspoonful of rape seed, and ditto of egg-food, each twice a week on different days, and alternating them so that a different item is given each day. Give no green-food for a week or so after their leaving the parents, and then give the green half-ripe seed stalks of plantain. You may give the birds that are puffy a drop or two of cod liver oil emulsion in the egg-food for once or twice. You must also keep a watch on these birds to see if the change from one room to another is throwing the birds into moult. It would be safest, if you wish to colour-feed them, to begin to add a little to the egg-food when you give it.

Gathering Wild Seeds.

C. M. P.—The series of articles on this subject published in our columns a year or two back would be very helpful to you if you could refer to back volumes. Gather the seeds that are ripe during a spell of fine dry weather. Never gather any in damp wet weather for keeping. Thistles are best cut off close to the head and the heads hung up in a dry place in paper bags about three-fourths full. An occasional shaking up of the bag after the heads are quite dry will displace the major portion of the seed and precipitate it to the bottom, when it may be collected almost free from floss. Plantain, docks, and similar things should be gathered in stalks or sprays, tied together in moderate-sized bunches, a paper drawn over the heads and tied round the stalks, the bunch being hung up heads downwards. These two methods may be used for practically all kinds of wild seeds. If the seeds are gathered in dry weather when quite ripe, no further drying is necessary, providing they are hung in a dry airy place. If not quite dry when gathered, they should be spread out on a tray or on sheets of paper in the sun for a day or so before being packed away.

Taking Canaries Outdoors.

Novice.—Certainly, it would be perfectly safe to remove your ordinary Canaries from a cold loft into an outdoor aviary at this time of year, and in such a place as you describe, they should thrive excellently, and may be left out quite safely all the winter. You should make the change during a period of dry, settled weather. The conditions generally prevailing at the time of writing this reply are most excellent for such a purpose.

Owing to the Holidays many queries have necessarily had to wait an answer until the next issue, in which all will be fully dealt with.—EDITOR.

Swelling at Base of Beak.

Ernest T. Dutton.—When the swelling appears to have a ripe "head" prick it with a clean needle, and gently press out as much as possible of the contents, being careful not to press upon and injure the eye. Press more from the junction of the mandible in a direction towards the nostril, and it will greatly assist matters if you pluck a few feathers off the top of the swollen part, so as to bare it, before pricking. Having cleaned out as much of the contents as you can, bathe it for a few minutes in a warm solution of boric acid. It will not hurt if this gets about the eye. Dry the part, and afterwards anoint it daily with sulphur ointment; but use it sparingly to avoid soiling the feathers. Give the bird saline aperient for a day or two, and after that twelve drops of Chemical Food in the drinking water every second day for a fortnight.

Infantile Mortality.

Young Beginner.—I have not the least doubt but that your treatment is the cause of the young birds dying. Lots of replies have appeared during the last few months about feeding the young birds which would have been quite applicable to your case, and would have saved you many young birds. If you have any more young, put them on a staple diet of two parts Canary seed and one part summer rape, and three times a week about half a teaspoonful of egg food per bird. Give this every alternate day, and on the intervening days a small pinch of maw seed each. Make the egg food by mixing minced hard-boiled egg and bread crumbs in the proportion of part of egg to two parts of bread crumbs, or you may use equal parts of egg, bread, and crushed sponge cake, which makes a food slightly better appreciated by the birds; but do not add any other items to the egg food, except, of course, colour food if you are going to colour feed them. Crushed hemp is best omitted now. A very little, not cracked, may be given as a rare treat, but the moult being so near the maw seed named is intended to supplant hemp for the present. Do not give much green food; a few half ripe plantain stalks will be best for this. You should find the birds thrive all right on this treatment, but if they get dull, give a little bread and milk sop for a week or so instead of the egg food.

Yorkshire Not Fit.

C. K. A.—Your feeding is not sufficiently generous for keeping the bird up to concert pitch for showing. Add a fourth part of summer rape to its staple diet for the next month, and add an equal bulk of egg to the food you mention each time you give it, and instead of giving it a little twice a week, give half a teaspoonful every second day, and each time you give it, and until the bird is in good form, well mix five drops of sherry with it. Give a young leaf of dandelion daily, and in the drinking water twelve drops of Chemical Food every second day, and on the alternate days four drops of tincture of steel. Discontinue these medicines as soon as the bird gets in good form and tight in feather. I presume you are satisfied that there are no red mites in the cage.

Heat and Colour.

C. W. G.—1. It all depends upon the system under which your birds were reared and their susceptibility to cold whether your loft would require heating during the winter. Given a healthy robust type of bird, I should say they ought to get along very well without heat in such a place as you describe. But you must let the birds decide. If they get thick and puffy and apparently suffer from the cold when it arrives, you should keep up the temperature regularly between forty-five and fifty degrees; aim at keeping it at forty-seven and not allow it to exceed either of the above limits. 2. Yes, the pair of deep orange yellow Yorkshires are practically certain to be colour fed, and, as you surmise, unless they are colour fed during this moult they will lose a good deal of this colour, as the new plumage will come in its natural tint a mere or less washed out colour compared with what they now appear.

Fond Hopes—Yet Fears.

"While there's life, there's hope."—Your feeding is at fault, and is doubtless strikingly different to what the bird had been accustomed to before you had her, and it may be kept in a different temperature, which would accentuate the differences. And again, although you say the bird is not troubled with red mites, I would advise you to search the cage not the bird—well for them. The bareness at the thighs is rather suggestive of their presence, and if it is also accompanied by bareness about the wing butts, and picking at the feathers, this suspicion is very much strengthened. When she commences to moult or shows signs of beginning to do so, you would do well to place her in a comfortably warm room to moult. Discontinue the mixed seed you are giving, and treat the bird as follows for a few weeks. Let your staple diet of Canary and rape remain as at present. Twice a week give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp, and a pinch of maw on two other days, and every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or the same quantity of egg food, well mixing with it five drops of sherry and two of cod-liver oil emulsion until bird is well. For green food give a small young leaf of dandelion daily. Let this diet suffice for a few weeks. In the drinking water give as much Epsom Salts for three consecutive days as will cover a sixpence, and afterwards five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid for the remainder of the week. After the first week give twelve drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day, and four drops of tincture of steel on the alternate days for another week, when the steel should be dropped, but the Chemical Food may be continued longer if it seems necessary.

Marigolds for Canaries.

C. M. P.—Yes, it is perfectly safe to give the blooms of these flowers to Canaries, but you must not rely upon their colouring properties to colour feed your birds, unless, indeed, you have some variety in which colour plays an unimportant part, or is held to be detrimental, or rather, I should say, is not allowed. The bloom, providing the birds eat them freely, will certainly enhance the natural colour. You may either use the brilliant orange yellow common marigold—which I prefer—or the blooms of the deep red and yellow French marigold. The deep crimson blooms of the dwarf nasturtiums may also be given.

Green Food Whilst Moulting.

A New Hand.—It depends to a certain extent upon the condition of the birds whether green food should be given freely during the moult. For instance, if you are colour feeding the birds, and the soft food with colour appears to have a laxative effect upon the bowels, then green food should be withheld, or only given in strict moderation, and generally when maw seed or a dose of iron, either of which are constipating, as a rule, is being given. It will also be best in such circumstances to give only the half-ripened seed stalks of plantain for green food, as these are decidedly much less laxative than the usual greenstuffs which are used.

Moulting in Covered Cages.

Jay Bee.—If the birds are kept in a room by themselves it is not absolutely essential to cover the cages over. All you want to do is simply to tone down the glaring rays of white light, and, of course, shut out direct sun rays, as it is this which has a damaging effect upon the depth of colour. All this can be quite efficiently carried out by keeping the blinds at the windows drawn down from the time the new plumage begins to make its appearance. It is not necessary to make the room dismally dark, and the full light of day may be admitted until the new feathers begin to show, so that it is unnecessary to limit it as soon as the birds begin to drop feathers. In the case of birds kept in a room which is used for other purposes, and therefore requires the light, it is sufficient to suspend a light muslin curtain before the cages at a distance of three or four inches from the wires, so as to allow free ventilation.

Bare on Wings.

A New Reader.—The cage is practically certain to be infested with red mites, which are the indirect cause of the bareness. Examine the cage and if you find any white dusty deposit sticking about near any of the cracks and joints remove the bird temporarily to another clean cage, give it a bath daily, in which a few quassia chips have been soaked, and thoroughly clean and scrape out all the joints of the other cage. Then give it a liberal dose of the camphor solution frequently advised here, and repeat the dose on each of three successive days. Afterwards fill any open crack with the putty, and re-paint and varnish the cage all over. When thoroughly dry the bird may be returned to it.

Going Almost Naked.

G. H. K.—Under the circumstances keep the bird from getting a chill and there is nothing whatever to fear about its losing its plumage at one fell sweep, as it were. These unusually rapid moultings are invariably the best, and the birds come out in decidedly better form altogether than is the case after a slower moult. They are, of course, more likely to take a chill for a week or two until the new plumage is coming forward, but this is easily avoided when one is warned of it. Give 20 drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day.

Brevities.

Sample of Charlock Seed (Hartlepudlian).—The sample is what it professes to be, charlock or wild mustard, and is a very nice clean seed, if the bulk is up to the same standard as the sample. It would do well for birds in large aviaries, or for British birds, especially those of the finnet tribe; but I do not at all care about it for Canaries, particularly if they are kept in cages.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Goldfinch "Off His Feed."

Hardbill.—It is not an unusual happening for a Goldfinch (or any other Finch) to go "off his feed" as you put it, at some time or other—that is to appear to find a difficulty in getting anything worth eating out of the seed-hopper, wasting most of the contents of the latter. If the seed is not at fault—this is the first thing one should look to, especially if a fresh supply has just been obtained—then a dose of a gentle saline medicine usually suffices to set things right, providing the capricious appetite is not a premonitary symptom of some serious trouble. In any case, the saline cannot well do harm, and if the "indigestion" is not treated, the Finch, of course, is likely to turn really queer, and in the end die. To commence treatment at the very beginning is usually the only way to ensure a fair chance of curing any ailing bird, and for all internal upsets a little saline medicine is the finest possible thing, so my experience teaches me, and I have dosed the poor little patients with most kinds of things. I advise you to try the effervescing citrate of magnesia (best quality) to be bought cheaply from any chemist. My own wineglasses hold three tablespoonfuls, and to one of them I put a small teaspoonful of the citrate, hanging same on the cage after the effervescence has subsided. I find birds drink it readily, and in cases of over-fatness, etc., such as when a bird appears a bit dull and off colour, it is a very valuable remedy. Two or three daily doses can be given, watching its effects on the bowels. A change of diet is good, in conjunction.

Keeping Thistle Heads; Feeding Greypate.

Seedeater.—My own method of storing thistle-heads, hardheads (or knapweed), and the like is very simple. I take care to gather all I want to store for winter use during a spell of fine weather, gathered when wet, or damp, the heads are almost sure to turn musty. I choose those which are thoroughly ripe, i.e., are on the point of opening (or "blowing") to let the wind scatter the seeds. I lay the heads on the floor of a dry room, until they themselves become dry; then cut away the "fluff" close down to the seeds; then throw the heads into a coarse (not closely woven) sack. The latter I keep in a dry place (hang it up in a suitable spot, if you like), and take out the heads as wanted. Some seed is sure to fall to the bottom of the sack, and this loose seed should not be overlooked. The "fluff" I burn; it is not necessary to cut it off, but the heads make less litter when in use if this be done. Don't burn it in the fire-grate unless the chimney has been well swept, and the house is well insured. By the way, don't overlook "rotten" heads when out after thistles, etc., for these on being broken open will be found full of maggots, white and red—splendid things for moulting Finches. Greypates are often very hard to keep alive; they are caught far too early, often before their parents have finished feeding them, so late a breeder is the Goldfinch; the close time for them ought to be extended. All Greypates are the better for a little wild seed when being got on to the ordinary seeds. Most will eat the various thistle seeds, ripe grasses (such as knot-grass, rye grass, etc.), cornflower seed, seeding groundsel, sometimes chickweed, and shepherd's-purse. Offer in addition summer rape and charlock seeds, soaked until beginning to burst, and dabbed dry in a cloth; also hemp lightly cracked every morning. Then you must offer water, maw, teazle, and Canary seeds ad. libitum.

Sexing Young Birds.

E.F.B.—Apparently you are unaware of the fact that the young of hardly any species of birds exhibit sexual differences in the plumage before the first moult—or, at any rate, so slight that only very experienced fanciers can make more or less reliable guesses at the sex. Young Thrushes I frankly confess, as I have often done before, that I cannot sex, nor have I ever met anyone who could. Nor are old Thrushes to be sexed from their plumage, but only with certainty from their song. The latter is a fair guide with the young, and if you keep the youngster that "records" (that is, tries over its song) with the greatest persistency, and with the greatest "bubbling" or "working" of the throat, then you are pretty certain to keep a cock. As regards the Skylarks, you should keep the biggest, best developed, boldest youngster, as the likeliest to turn out a cock; the smallest invariably turn out hens.

Identity of Young Birds.

Novice.—It so happened that I was away holiday-making when the dead body of your young Mule reached the office. It followed me about the country, and as the weather was "powerful warm," you can imagine the corpse created a sensation when it did finally come under my notice. It took a half-quartern of the best to pull me together, and help face the suspicious look of my landlady. Whether the bird would have created such a commotion had it lived to see the show bench is more than a little doubtful. Examination was not easy, but the glance I had of the body helped me to the opinion that it was that of an ordinary dark Goldfinch-Canary Mule, and not that of the rare (ought I to say unique?) Chaffinch-Canary Mule. The blaze seemed just showing, and the buttons of the wings were quite distinct. That the Chaffinch should have fed the young is curious and interesting; but the fact of one bird feeding the young of another is far from unknown. You say you have still three youngsters left from the same nest. Take care of them, and when they are moulted their parentage should be easy to decide. The fact of the cock Goldfinch being in the aviary seems to uphold my opinion, though necessarily hastily formed.

Light Linnet Mules.

Brum.—You certainly are lucky—wonderfully lucky—if you have bred during your first season's mating two clear yellow Linnet Canary Mules, and several very lightly marked. It sounds almost too good to be true. I hope your swans do not turn out to be geese; in other words, that the Mules do not turn out to be pure-bred Canaries. It is easy to make mistakes, even in a well-regulated breeding-room. And "yellow" Linnet Mules, above all things, are most difficult to get. As regards colour-feeding, this process with mules is carried out on much the same lines as with Canaries. But the usual light buff Linnet made is hardly worth while colour feeding; it does not "take the colour" in other words, the pepper has no effect on the plumage, or very, very little. Still, I think the use of colour-food adds to the gloss on the surface of the plumage, even if it does not materially enhance the colour. Your light yellow mules, however, ought to "take" the colour finely, and come out a beautiful tone. I am not (I say it sadly) speaking from experience, for I have never yet been the happy possessor of a light yellow Linnet Mule. The simplest effective way to colour feed that I know of is to well mix a finely minced hard-boiled (10 minutes) fresh egg with 4 lbs. (according to quantity required) finely crushed or bruised biscuits, adding to half a breakfast-cupful of this one heaping teaspoonful of tasteless pepper, getting a brand with a first-class reputation (a bad pepper spoils everything). Blackbird should eat a good teaspoonful of this shade colour food, daily (prepare it fresh every day). There is no real need to use any red pepper, and there is enough sugar in the biscuit, while oil I only give in the form of linseed to eat. I have some birds coming through a lovely colour, fed on the above lines. Keep the birds which are being colour fed out of direct rays of sunlight; it is best to shade the window, during a portion of the day, at least. Dissolve a piece of citrate of iron, the size of a small pea, in the drinking water borne biscuits, adding to half a breakfast-cupful twice weekly. Any point I may have failed to explain I shall be pleased to do if you will write again.

Brevities.

Chaffinch's Sudden Death (Pink Pink).—The case is a complete mystery to me, and I am afraid only a post-mortem could possibly have enlightened you as to the cause of the bird's death. A cold would not have ended so very suddenly. Possibly there was a rupture of some organ, or an internal stoppage of some kind—something beyond the power of medicine.

"Squats on the Perch" (E.M.H.).—The "squatting on the perch" is quite usual with a bird that is moulting, and is by no means necessarily a symptom to feel uneasy over. When reproducing its plumage a bird's vitality is always lowered more or less seriously, and this feeling of weakness is responsible for birds undergoing that process resting during the day, often with closed eyes, quite close down on the perches. These intervals of rest (the older the bird the more he is likely to take) need cause no alarm, so long as the bird is bright at other times, and eats well. The Parrish's Chemical Food should do good.

An Ailing Linnet (J. Gawthorpe).—I don't understand what you mean when you say you "want the firm to send an answer through their advertisements." What firm? Perhaps your bird has gone off song because it is about to moult. Your feeding seems all right. But as you describe no symptoms—whether it is mopy, with feathers puffed out, has very watery excreta, etc.—I cannot even guess at what is troubling the bird. You say "it is always sitting in the cage all day when in the house." Really, I can't follow your meaning, though anxious to help, if possible. Couldn't you make matters more clear?

Wild Plants (Gallinule).—The wild plants you sent were quite unknown to me as food for birds in captivity, except No. 4, the Plantain, so they were submitted to Mr. R. Morse, who writes concerning them:—"The plants sent on to me by the Editor were in a withered condition, and I cannot therefore determine the exact species in one or two cases. No. 1. Yellow Melilot (Melilotus officinalis). No. 2. Much crushed and withered, but most likely Bladder Campion (Silene Cucubolus). No. 3. Probably Smooth Hawk's-head (Crepis virens). No. 4. The seed-head of a Plantain (Plantago). No. 5. One of the Willow-herbs. Probably the Great W.-H. (Epilobium hirsutum). No. 6. Weld (Reseda Luteola)."

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

A Sick Budgerigar.

Knowles.—Your treatment has certainly helped to keep the malady in check; at the same time, I much fear the bird will have died before the reply reaches you. Budgerigars drink so little that but little can be done that way. Give three drops of tasteless castor oil, and if this does not take effect, repeat the dose; also get from your chemist this mixture—ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts. Take a portion of the mixture, add three times the quantity of water and let the bird have only this to drink for the next few days. Drop six to eight drops of Parrish's Chemical Food on to a piece of sponge cake and let it have this daily. It must be kept quite free from draught, yet should get plenty of fresh air. Its bowels must be kept freely moving, but not watery loose. Do not give the castor oil more than twice. If an aperient is again necessary, soak a piece of sponge cake in Dinneford's Magnesia; let it become all but dry before offering it to the bird. Flowering or seeding grass is very plentiful at present; give it as much of this as it will eat. Put a little eucalyptus under the sand tray, or even drop a little over the sand.

Number of Budgerigars.

R. S.—While it is quite possible that two pairs would agree and breed in a cage 2 by 1½ by 1½ ft., yet such procedure would not be wise, for if they breed at all, it is very likely you would get a brood from each simultaneously, and when they left the nest they would be simply on the top of one another. Again, I do not quite see how you are going to get 4 husks in such a cage, and if, as frequently happens, when there is not a surplus of nesting places, both choose the same husk, there would be nothing but continual bickerings. While I will not say it is impossible, I must certainly advise you to keep only one pair of birds in your cage.

Moustache Parrakeets.

J. C.—I have invariably found the beak the safest guide as to sex with nearly all species of Parrakeets, where the plumages are practically alike; but in nearly every instance the hues of the female plumage are neither so rich nor so pure as those of the male; the hook of the upper mandible of the male is usually longer than that of the female. It must be noted that all comparisons given can only apply to adult birds. I presume he did not know engatrius from javanicus, and such folk would call it nesting, if the two birds sat in a box or log together. From what you say, they were evidently immature, and not likely to nest for 18 months or longer. Most species of Parrots and Parrakeets mature slowly, and do not breed till they are two or three years (or more) old.

Grey Parrots with Parasites.

Thomson.—Give your bird a dose of jalap, as much as will lie on a sixpence; you can mingle this with a small portion of its boiled maize, and do not give any more till this is eaten; follow this by giving two or three doses of powdered areca nut, same quality, and by the same method. If, after a few days the parasites are still in evidence, repeat the treatment. As regards getting your bird on to a seed diet, limit the quantity of the boiled maize and thus force it to supplement its diet by the dry seed mixture; by this means you will obviate any chance of the bird being on short commons. Also give the dry seed mixture (canary seed, oats, wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds), with a thin layer of boiled maize on top of same, and I think before a very lengthy period has passed you will find it preferring the seed mixture. Ripe fruit, plain biscuits, and nuts (shelled walnuts are best), should also be given. While the tremble lasts, its vending should be at once removed, and if possible burned. Parrish's Chemical Food is a splendid tonic, and I should advise its being given regularly in the drinking water, it will materially assist in keeping up the bird's strength.

An Aged Parrot.

F. J. H.—I fear I can render you but little assistance, as with a bird of such age and so fed, and for so long a period, it is largely immune from the evil effects of its unwholesome diet. You must continue to give it the milk under the circumstances, but I fear the fits will continue, and that it will go off in one of them. Apart from this, treat as in my previous reply. Give it a little Madeira cake two or three times a day, drop on same about 6 drops of the Chemical Food. Much of the present trouble is due to old age, for which alas, there is no cure; though undoubtedly the break-up has been hastened by its diet. Yes. I should certainly put straw, or something soft, such as peat moss litter, on cage bottom, to prevent the bird bursting itself when it falls from the perch. Ripe fruit, such as banana, orange, grapes, etc., will be very helpful; but I much fear any recovery of the bird will be but temporary.

GENERAL.

Report (E. T.).—Many thanks.

Spring Net Trap (No Name, Peterborough).—The specimen spring net trap you mention as being sent to us has not yet come to hand.

Silkworm Pupæ (Oriole, Australia).—Up to the time of going to press with this issue, no sample of silkworm pupæ has reached us.

Missel Thrush Breeding (J. Law).—Thanks for an interesting letter, which we hope to deal with next week.

Copy of Will (No Nom-de-plume).—A copy of a will can be personally inspected at the Will Office, Somerset House, Strand, London, W.C., the fee payable being one shilling. The year in which the testator died should be given wherever possible, with full name, and county, etc., wherein he resided. If a copy is desired to be made, the charge varies according to the length of the will, but under ordinary circumstances is only a very few shillings.

IN THE COURTS.

IS A BLACKBIRD A NUISANCE?

A man asked Sir Francis Cory-Wright, at Highgate Police Court the other day: "Am I liable to lose my singing Blackbird?" After a painful pause, Sir Francis said, "Of course you are, if you leave the cage-door open."

Explanations followed, and it was ascertained that the man had been served with a notice under the Hornsey by-laws to abate the nuisance caused by the singing of his Blackbird.

Sir Francis Cory-Wright said he never heard a more ridiculous thing than to call a singing Blackbird a nuisance. He had a good many himself, and he wished he had hundreds.

Inspector Thomas said the police had no option. The complaint was signed by two residents, who said the bird sang at five o'clock in the morning and they could not sleep for it.

Sir Francis told the applicant to go home. He need not take any notice until he was summoned. If what he said was true, he would dismiss the summons

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Encourage the Titmice.

At this time of the year we should encourage the Tits to visit our gardens and orchards as much as possible. Green fly and caterpillars are still numerous and are relished by these. The little Titmice are most interesting birds to watch. They will hunt for hours among the bushes and branches, peering under the leaves and into the crevices of the bark, without once setting on the ground. Their activity is marvellous, and in this there is little to choose between them. The whole of the family is constantly on the move, but perhaps the most interesting of them all is the Long-tailed species. A family party of these, working from bush to bush, keeping up a constant twittering note, affords a charming sight. Invariably one is able to get within a few feet of them, and watch their every movement.

The Solitary Heron.

By the seashore and wide stretches of marshland, one may occasionally see a large bird lazily flapping across the landscape or standing like a sentinel beside some reed-fringed pool. By his long, dagger-like beak and thin legs, and also by his grey mantle, we recognise him as the Heron. He is a "solitary" bird, being seldom seen in company, and solitude appears to suit his habits. He is wary and shy, and it is most difficult to approach him. Young birds of the year quickly acquire this habit, and are just as keen to get away from the intruder as is the old bird. Stalking them is rare sport, especially when one has no murderous designs, but wishes to get near them only to watch their habits; and one feels an indescribable joy and pleasure in being near to such large birds unobserved.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BLACKBIRD SUSPENDED BY A THREAD.

SIR,—Two years ago one of my children came running into the house saying there was a bird fast up in a tree. I at once went out to inspect, and saw that it was a Pied Blackbird. With anxious haste I fetched a ladder, and getting up, grabbed the bird. It was fast by one of its legs, to which was attached a long piece of white cotton thread, but, unlike Mr. Gould's, was very much alive, and is so to-day. Pied Blackbirds are quite common. My bird has a white head, and I have seen two others marked in a like manner. Dr. Butler says pied hens are rare. Well, I know my bird is of this sex, for she had two nests of eggs last year, and has nested again this year; but I have not seen any eggs. I tried to get a cock as a mate for her, and did get one, but it soon died, and I have been unable to obtain another. Of course, I mean a pied bird. We had a beautiful cock bird about here for two or three years, and I suspect he was the father of my bird. I have never seen a hen bird with such a bright yellow beak as mine has, and this made me think it was a cock until she laid. The black feathers are, however, true hen colour. It would be interesting to breed from a pair of pied birds to see if they threw like.

WHAT IS "QUALITY" LINNET SONG?

SIR,—In reference to this question, I should think "Constant Reader" has had by now a good lesson on the Linnet song. Now, I quite agree with Mr. Rostron's song of the Linnet, but I doubt if he could get one to do it in that form with blubbering. I am also afraid the bird would need no more seed or water, as the notes are very hard to do. In regard to Mr. Allen's letter, he says there are many ways of whinneying. If he were amongst the Lancashire fanciers they would tell him there are only two ways of whinneying—the light way and the heavy way. Hoofing is heavy noting, and not "hoofing whinney". The note is like this: Hoof hoof hoof hoof yoth yoth yoth haw. Now, Mr. Allen gave us some bad notes, but the notes he mentions are single struck notes, the note "spinking" is the quilting note, the "youlering" note is the Yellowhammer note, and is a good note, as I was taught when a lad. And I am sure there were no better bird men than the old Wigan bird men. I was secretary of the Wigan Linnet Club, having over forty members, but these, I am sorry to say, have all departed this life. Mr. Holt gives the Linnet song in the good old form. Now I will mention a few bad notes, and your readers will see how they differ from Mr. Allen's: Tojow tojow tochay tochay toflip toflip tutagit tutagit chet chet chet recpa recpa cree cra, with a lill lill ha haw ehev haw. There is other bad singing.

THE TWITE FOR MULING AND HYBRID-BREEDING.

SIR,—To follow up my remarks on this subject in a previous issue, the headway which British birds have made is really surprising, and having for the past 25 years been an ardent admirer of them, I am glad to notice the pains taken by the Editor of CAGE BIRDS, and its Artist-in-chief, Mr. Norman, in pointing out to beginners and others the merits and faults of our British birds in the CAGE BIRDS "Charts." By these charts any young fancier can soon have a good knowledge of his pets, without necessarily seeing the birds in their natural surroundings or at shows. The Twite does not breed in England (although I have heard that a nest was found some years ago), but it breeds a great deal on the Continent, and as a rule comes over here quite early. Some of the species I know have been taken during the last week in September while feeding with Linnets. They are, I believe, more closely related to the Bramblefinch than to the Linnet, but the Bramblefinch also feeds with the Linnets. Twites are not so shy as Linnets, and are therefore more easily caught. A good Twite is a very pretty bird. Its name is, I believe, derived from its call-note, which greatly resembles the word "twite." A description of the bird is as follows:—The length of a male is five inches from the tip of bill to end of tail. The bill is short and pointed shape and is of a greenish white colour. The top of the head is pale cinnamon-brown, spotted and striped with dark brown; the neck is greyer in colour and more densely speckled with brown than the head. The back is of a brighter brown with a tinge of red, and the stripes are larger and not so numerous. The wings are dark brown with narrow grey margins on the outer edges of the larger pen feathers and on the inner edges of the secondaries. The wing coverts are brown, the larger being bordered by greyish brown. The tail is dark brown, shaded with lighter brown on the margins of the feathers. The face and throat, and the upper part of the breast are a pretty warm cinnamon brown, the lower parts of the breast, abdomen, and vent being greyish white, tinged with pale brown. The sides of the breast and abdomen are light brown, striped with a darker brown. The legs and feet are very dark brown and the claws jet black. The bird's natural food consists of seeds and berries. They are fond of charlock, linseed, plantain, teazle, poppy, etc., and when in a cage a Twite can be fed the same as a Linnet. The male bird is much brighter in colour than the female, the latter never having the purple red rump which the male has. The sexes can easily be distinguished if one has the two together. I think that anyone who wishes to have the bird for use as a cross with other species should be able to obtain one in the autumn as easily as possible. Twites are then, under proper treatment, ready for use in the spring in whatever way one may desire them. If any are thinking of going in for this hobby of Muling, they should get their British birds as soon as possible in the early winter, or better, perhaps, in the autumn, when they stand a much better chance than by leaving it till late in the spring. I know of several catchers who take a lot of these birds, and Linnets and Redpolls, in the autumn and winter, turn them into a large barn or shed, which is wire-fronted, and feed them on the screenings from threshing machines, together with cole, mustard, and other seeds, and with no Canary or hemp. They of course lose some, but old hands don't lose many. The birds are kept until March and April, when they are sent off to the dealers. By that time they have become steadier, and consequently fetch more money.

W. H. ARMITAGE.

THE SONG AND PLUMAGE OF THE LINNET.

SIR,—Anent the recent letters from Linnet kings and queens describing the flute-like song of this modest brown-clad songster, which I suppose derives its name from its fondness for linseed, I was interested in that which aptly describes him as a mocking bird. There is, no doubt, much variety to an experienced observer both in the general pencilling and in the song of the Linnet, but nearly all have the power of imitation, and I have one in my possession which has copied and correctly repeats every note of my Goldfinch, and even seems to take a delight in singing the Goldfinch's song instead of his own. Much has been written in CAGE BIRDS respecting the brown songster which, like its prototypes in colour, the Nightingale, Thrush, and Robin, although of modest appearance, has much beauty of plumage as well as of song. To those who take the trouble to study the variations and gradations of a Linnet's markings, commencing with the throat, then round the eyes and over the crown, down the wings and the white marks on the sides of the wings, with the white edges of the tail feathers, and lastly the distinct spots more or less long or round on the sides of the chest, tinged with red in the older birds, and the whole a rich brown colour—to those who study these things the Linnet will be found to be very charming. It is these which make the Linnet's plumage so beautiful to a fancier. I am not a Linnet king, so cannot attempt to describe the song, beyond saying that it is most cheerful, musical, and rich in tone, reminding one of happy country walks; it is also a song which is soft and pleasant in a room. Being a somewhat successful exhibitor of the Linnet, I thought I would enter the ranks of those who are your correspondents on this variety. The Linnet is rapidly coming to the front, especially since the reproduction of its picture on paper in a manner so true to nature, by Mr. H. Norman. It is a picture fit to be hung in any room, and to occupy a prominent position in anyone's house.

Migrating Thrushes.

All over the country young Song Thrushes are plentiful, and their baby cries may be heard along every road and footpath. As the autumn draws near they commence to migrate, and later on many places will be denuded of these fine birds until the following spring. In the southern countries they stay the year round, although considerably reduced in numbers during the winter months.

THE USE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—Would some reader kindly inform me how to give saffron to Siskins and Yellow hammers for moulting out? In what proportion is it given in the water? I seem to remember having heard of it being mixed with, say, a quartern of brandy (or whisky was it?) In that case I suppose very little would be sufficient to add to their drinking water. Have just sent for threepennyworth from the chemist, and find it is in a powder, about a dessertspoonful; I thought it was in a lump.

"FREAKS" AT BOGNOR.

SIR, As some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS may be visitors at Bognor, I thought they would perhaps like to know about "The Aviary" there, where they can see, at the present time, several "freaks." There is a Hybrid between a Greenfinch and a Bullfinch. A lady, too, belonging to the neighbourhood, has two Bullfinches, cock and hen, which made a nest, and the female bird laid two eggs. As this lady was going away, and could not look after the birds, she gave the two eggs to Mrs. Homer, of The Aviary, Steyn Street. These eggs were put under a hen Canary, are now hatched, and the young are doing well. Other things of interest can be viewed amongst the birds at Mrs. Homer's, who has several hundred birds, and breeds them.

OBSERVER.

STARLING BREAKS A HOUSE-SPARROW'S NECK.

SIR,—As an eye-witness to rather an unusual incident, I thought you might like to hear of it. Hearing an unusual amount of "war cry" between Sparrows and a Starling, my attention was drawn to a favourite building spot of the Starling in the bows of the old wooden man-of war, the "Pembroke." It was very apparent trouble was brewing as to who should be the possessor, for the other birds were trying to drive the Starling away. He seemed to at once pick his mark, and the Sparrow dashed off, the Starling about a yard behind, flying as straight as a gun shot very swiftly towards me. When within a yard above my head the Starling caught him up and plunged the death blow. The Sparrow spun round and dropped to the ground motionless. On examining the bird I found him quite dead, with the neck broken and a small puncture in the skin just below the ear. There was no sign of blood, and the speed of the blow and the way it was done seemed almost incredible.

F. L. MANTHORP.

WHAT IS A TICK?

SIR,—I am glad Mr. G. F. Woolhouse does not ask me to define, What is a tick?—that's too ticklish a problem to tackle (I nearly wrote tickle) during the hot weather. He states: "If he (meaning myself) had blown the bird in question, he would have found it black with underflue." As it happens, I did "blow up" the bird, though it went much against the grain to do so, and the dark underflue did not escape me. But I was not looking for dark underflue; I was looking for a "tick" on the surface of the plumage, and as I failed to find one, I "wrong classed" the bird. It is news to me that most judges (as Mr. Woolhouse avers) would "wrong-class" a bird which had no mark whatever on the surface of its plumage, but had dark underflue, if this said bird was entered in the class for Clears. And I must differ from friend Woolhouse on that point, for I have never seen any of our judges examining the birds entered in the Clear class to find out if they chanced to have dark underflue—a lively job they would have! If the dark underflue peeped out at the thighs (the usual place) then the bird showing it no doubt would promptly be "wrong-classed," either with or without handling and blowing up. But Mr. Woolhouse's bird (as I saw it on the show day) exhibited no mark anywhere which could be seen from the outside of the show-cage, the plumage on the surface being quite clear; therefore, with all due respect to other judges and past ruling on the point, I hold its proper place was the Clear class, and not the A.O.V. class. In short, to my own way of thinking, a Clear bird is one with no visible mark on the surface of its plumage: a Ticked or Marked bird one with the surface broken by a mark. That seems to me a commonsense way of looking at the matter, though, of course, I am prepared to hear someone say that it is nonsensical—it is not the first controversy on What is a tick? which I have witnessed, though up to the present I have been fortunate enough to keep personally clear (no joke intended) of them. Mr. Woolhouse asks me what the consequence would have been if he had entered his bird as a Clear; well, so far as memory serves, the consequence would have been the addition of either 1st, 2nd, or 3rd prize to his little lot, for the bird thrown out was a good specimen. In the first part of my letter I mention that it "went against the grain" to blow this bird up. I think it is quite enough for any young bird to have to stand the day in a show-cage, without the additional discomfort of being mauled about and blown up in the effort to discover a problematical tick. I am minded of a scene I witnessed several years ago at a certain young bird show, where one of our best known judges spent five or six minutes blowing and poking about the feathers of a young bird in the endeavour to find some mark which justified its owner in entering it in the particular class he (the judge) was officiating upon. He then handed this bird over to his steward (a well-known fancier) with the remark: "I'm bothered if I can find any tick; just you have a look." The steward continued the blowing and mauling for another five minutes or so, then announced that he thought he saw a grey feather at one thigh. Then the judge had another good look, and finally admitted that there was a suspicion of a grizzle on one of the feathers thereabouts. So the bird got a prize. And if I had been its owner I should have thought it a very dearly-won prize indeed, for the youngster looked a perfect wreck after this ordeal. I registered a mental vow that, tick or no tick, if I couldn't see it after close scrutiny, I wouldn't risk ruining a bird trying to dig it out—for that is what it amounts to.

A THRUSH'S PECULIAR NESTING SITE.

SIR,—On a recent Saturday a friend and I left home for a walk before dinner, and on our way had to pass some allotment gardens just below the cemetery on the right hand side of one of Yorkshire's main roads. Seeing some friends in their gardens, we called to look round at the flowers. Here we were shown one of the most interesting sights we had ever seen. Thrown on top of a disused poultry run were some pea rods and an old yeast hamper. In the hamper was a nest of four young Thrushes, and the parent bird stood over them. We put our faces right up to the front of the hamper, and the old bird was not the least alarmed. She allowed us to lift her up out of the nest with a stick without any attempt on her part to leave the nest. In front of the nest in the hamper was a small, round jar, in which the children placed food for the old birds that were sitting. She does not refuse to be an object of curiosity, and will allow anyone to stroke and pet her. We were so struck by this novelty and the bird's great confidence, that we photographed her at once. We had to procure a barrow on which to stand the camera, and got it fixed up in the mouth of the basket. Just as we had got the focus she left the nest for food. So we stirred up the young to make them open their mouths, and then photographed them. The lense of the camera was not more than a yard from the nest when we snapped them. After taking a negative of the young, we waited for about ten minutes for the return of the parent bird. She returned with a beak-ful of worms to the nest. Without being the least alarmed at the tripod camera and black cloth in front of her basket home, she tripped into the basket and commenced to feed, when the second negative was taken. I enclose the two photos. This account will interest many bird lovers, and it may cause a kindly feeling to arise on behalf of wild birds, which are often mercilessly and ignorantly persecuted and destroyed by selfish agriculturists, who cannot bear to see them take their share of tithe for the insects and vermin they have rid them of, which insects and vermin would have done considerably more harm to their crops.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—Mr. Pope's letter under the above heading in your last issue shows plainly that he and the members of the W.C.O.S. are very much upset owing to the S.Y.C.C. patronage not being allotted to their next open show. Why are they surprised? What claim have they on the S.Y.C.C.? None of the Plymouth men are members of the club. Mr. Pope calls the S.Y.C.C. committee mean and unfancierlike because they respect and uphold the members' wish by giving preference to shows which employ specialist cage-bird judges (as defined at the last annual general meeting of the S.Y.C.C.). Plymouth have engaged one who is also a pigeon and fur judge, to judge Yorkshires at their next open show, and for this reason they are deprived of the S.Y.C.C. patronage. Our members do not desire pigeon men to judge their birds, so long as there are competent men who judge cage birds only. Mr. Pope will do well to look after his own society and not interfere with the management of the S.Y.C.C.

W. G. ELSMORE.

SIR,—I was greatly astonished to read the contents of Mr. Pope's letter in your columns of last week. As Mr. Pope is not a member of the S.Y.C.C. I cannot understand his making any comolaint, and I think he might look after his own club and leave other clubs alone. The committee of the S.Y.C.C. fully know how to deal with the patronage without Mr. Pope's assistance. Also I think the west is well catered for at Cardiff and Swansea.

J. W. RENNIE,
Hon. Sec. of the S.Y.C.C.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Pope, permit me to say on behalf of my committee that they do not complain of the members of the W.C.O.S. appointing Mr. House as judge for their forthcoming show. They realise that the members of the W.C.O.S. have a perfect right to conduct their own affairs, and they claim the same privilege for themselves, without feeling under any obligation to give reasons for their decisions to those outside the club. If in the present instance the reason is given Mr. Pope must accept it as an act of grace. It is much to be deprecated that he should have so far forgotten himself as to be led into the indiscretion of asking. I can only hope he will appreciate his error, and in future confine his zeal to its proper limits. His opprobrious adjectives are better suited to himself and those of his friends who have made him their cat's paw.

A POINT ABOUT SALES AND EXCHANGING.

Help from the Police.

SIR,—I have read with interest the letters that have appeared the last few weeks under the above heading in your valuable journal. I always feel sorry for anyone who has been "had," for I have been through it myself (but not of late years). There are many working men like myself that think if one county courts the offender it is only throwing good money after bad. A few years ago I advertised two cock Thrushes and cages for 15s. each. I got numerous replies, and amongst them a well-written and put together letter from a man in the Midlands, asking me to send both the birds on, on approval. I wrote and told him I was sending one, as the other had been claimed by a lady, by telegram. A day or two afterwards I received a letter saying the bird had arrived safe, and the writer was very pleased with the condition the bird was in, but it had not sung—could I send it some food it had been used to, for it did not seem to care for the food he was giving? I heard no more for a fortnight, so wrote him. A reply came in a day or so to say the bird was singing fine, but he himself was called away to Scotland and would forward me a cheque on his return. I waited for the cheque for a month or more, and then I wrote him again. To this letter I had no answer. I waited on for another month or so, and by then I had given up hopes of having either bird or money, and thought it was no good throwing good money after bad, when an idea struck me. I wrote a letter detailing the case, also forwarded all the correspondence, to the chief police inspector of the town wherein the man resided. Four or five days afterwards I received a visit from our own local police, and they gave me a letter they had received from the county police, stating they had investigated my case and found that the man was a poor old man living with his son under very miserable conditions. The bird, they reported, was still in their possession, but in shocking condition. They advised me to have the bird sent back, for if I prosecuted he would be unable to pay. I wrote and thanked the police for the trouble they had taken, and received my bird in about three days, but in a shocking condition—no tail, and feet all clogged up. I received another letter from the police, saying they had found other birds that these two people had got from persons in different parts of the country, and thanking me for drawing their attention to the case. They said they wished there were many more people who would act as I had done, for then these frauds would soon be put down. Some two years ago I saw a "beautiful, tame, hand-reared cock Bullfinch, a ladies' pet," advertised, and being in want of one to give away, I wrote for it and forwarded postal order. I waited for a fortnight and no answer came, so I wrote saying I was putting the matter in the hands of the police. This worked like magic, for I received a postal order by return (I suppose the "ladies' pet" had not been caught), and a letter that only a blackguard would have written—but that did not hurt me. I advise my brother fanciers if they are ever "had," to follow my example, for it will cost nothing (only a penny stamp) and it will soon put a stop to these frauds and the people who perpetrate them.

FANCIERS & THE CLOSE SEASON.

SIR,—My remarks are intended to suggest an aspiration rather than to criticise. It seems to me that fanciers (who are particularly open to the attacks of faddist legislation) might perhaps do more than they do to further the interests of the British bird-keepers, by not encouraging the dealers and catchers to evade the law regarding the close season. Apart from the R.S.P.C.A. people, there are plenty of genuine ornithologists who love the wild birds wild, and such persons seeing advertisements of traps to catch soft-bills, etc. (advertised as such during the close season), and offers for sale of Linnets with "lovely red heads and breasts" (such are almost necessarily caught in the close time), and articles on bird-catching by "old hands" who make no secret of their dodges to avoid observation by the police—such persons, I contend, are sorry to think the "Fancy" cannot be cleansed of these defects. There is not a shadow of doubt that a great many birds are caught during the close season and sold, and that a great deal of cruelty is still practised. The correction of these things is, I submit, a question of education, and it should be pointed out that their correction may prevent a public outcry and legislation of a drastic character.

A DERBYSHIRE SUBSCRIBER.

THE CAGING OF BIRDS.

The following vigorous letter, which speaks for itself, appeared in the "Northern Daily Mail" on July 28.—EDITOR.

SIR,—On Saturday last, the "Northern Daily Mail" quoted from a contemporary two paragraphs relative to the keeping of cage birds. As late hon. secretary of the Hartlepools Cage Bird Society, I think it is my duty at any rate to justify the position taken up by its members. The outburst referred to was apparently prompted by the unfortunate fire which destroyed a number of Quails, but nothing is suggested or inferred that those birds suffered through neglect previous to the fire. Yet a deliberate statement is made that millions of caged birds perish through neglect. Let us look at the matter from our standpoint, lest we become prejudiced by the unjust statements referred to. We have in our country over 340 societies, controlled by men and women, whose love for a cage bird is a good second to that of a human being, and in the list of rules governing such societies the most important refers to the "proper keeping and exhibition of cage birds," and of various publications, one journal alone—devoted entirely to the management of cage birds—has a circulation of over 40,000 copies weekly. In order that these birds may enter into competition they are most carefully tended from the day they take the perch to the day they are placed before the judge. Not even excitement is allowed, lest a feather becomes misplaced. Scrupulous cleanliness, regular attention, and perfect training must be theirs also, of necessity. And all these are the outcome of what? Surely not "an illusion," but a genuine love and regard for their charges, which "task" seldom becomes "tedious," and never "neglected." And yet it is suggested that the arm of the law should stretch out and make it a criminal offence to keep a cage bird. The statement referring to a bird's song is really too absurd to answer, for the homely Linnet's is the only field bird's song that thousands of our fellow men ever hear. Instances have come under my notice where the tending of birds has brought about the reformation of character when man's eloquence has failed. No, the keeping of cage birds is the result of a desire to have about one things that are beautiful, whose song is music to the ear, and the possession of which brings a ray of sunshine into the lives of the owner.

*Polly Discovers a Thief.

A lady once had a Parrot which used to say "Here I am." One day Polly found herself at a show, her owner having sent her there for exhibition. And at a moment when no one was looking, a man came along and took her out of her cage and put her in his pocket. When the lady missed Polly she searched everywhere for her, and it was not until some time after, as the secretary of the show was walking past the thief that the bird was discovered. Polly called out "Here I am," and this soon put matters right.—Sent by Emily Carter (age 12), 19, Edward-street, Stoke-on-Trent.

*A Domesticated Sparrow.

One day in Jubilee week, a partly-fledged Sparrow fell from a nest in a roof. It was picked up by a man, who put it in a cage, where it kept up an unceasing chirp. The distressed parents of the Sparrow, in their search for their lost child, heard its well-known voice, and fearlessly flew through the doorway to its call—first the female and then the male bird. They continue to feed their little one, which flutters about the premises uncaged. When the shop door is closed the parent birds pass through the narrow slit of a disused letter-box.—Sent by Rose Poynter (age 14), 217, Munster Road, Fulham.

A Rook to the Rescue.

When I was out for a walk one day I passed a big field in which there were a number of Rooks, Jackdaws, and some smaller birds, all clustered together and making a dreadful noise. I happened to look up into the sky and there I noticed a Hawk hovering about them. Then all of a sudden the noise stopped, and one of the Rooks flew straight at the Hawk, and started fighting it. The fight lasted for some minutes, till at last the Rook drove the Hawk out of sight. There was quietness all the time the Rook was away. When the Rook came in sight the noise began again as if to welcome the conqueror back.—Sent by Elsie Harbour (age 14), 33, Wexham Road, Slough, Bucks.

Martins Nesting upon Cliffs.

The House Martins, whose nests we see each season under the eaves of our houses, do not build exclusively in these positions, but will occasionally fasten their mud houses to the face of the cliffs along the coast, or to suitable places inland. This was possibly the natural manner of nesting before man built houses with overhanging eaves.

The Art of Cage-making.

By A. W. CURTIS.

To make a good joint, one must use the best glue. If you are without a pot, glue can be made in the following way: Break up about half a cake of glue into small pieces; put in an earthenware jar, and then add sufficient water to just cover the glue. Allow it to soak for about twelve hours. The jar can then be placed in a small saucepan, which has been first half-filled with water; allow the water in the saucepan to boil slowly for a couple of hours or so, and stir the glue in jars at intervals with a piece of stick. If the glue should be too thick for your liking, add a little hot water from your saucepan, well stirring it in.

Be careful not to get your glue too thin, or you will not make a very strong joint. A small brush will be required to put on the glue.

Method of Procedure.

Before starting to glue up your cage-back, make sure you have your clamps set to the right width to receive it; also have your hammer and wedges where you can lay your hands on them. With everything in readiness, the two pieces to form the back can now be put face to face, with the two edges that are to be glued uppermost and quite level. Take the brush and put the glue on as quickly as possible. Then put edge to edge and, with one hand holding the wide piece quite firm, move the narrow piece backwards and forwards a few times, so as to rub out as much glue as you can. The back can now be placed in the clamps, and, the folding wedges placed in position and tightened up. If the ends of your two pieces are not quite level when wedged in the clamps, now is your time, before the glue gets set, to knock them level with your hammer.

The back should be left in the clamps for from six to eight hours before being removed to be cleaned off. If removed too soon it may mean your having to do the work over again.

Having got the top, bottom, and ends to exact lengths of rods, and ready for setting out, lay the top and bottom face to face with the front edges towards you; then lay on your rod, making sure to keep it exactly level with ends of board. Now take your 3in. square, and square down the marks on ends of rod to the edges of boards; then remove your rods and square the marks (that you have just put on edges of boards) across the flat, using the 12in. square when marking. These lines are for the purpose of showing you the required position of the ends. Next, get out four pieces of stuff about 12in. long by ½in. wide by ⅜in. thick; shoot the edges straight and square; and then temporarily nail these to the top and bottom pieces, keeping them close to the inside marks (see Fig. 41). There is no need to drive the nails right home, as these pieces will have to come off again later on.

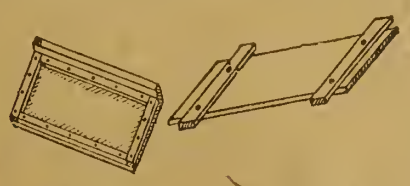

Fig. 40: The sand-tray, or drawer.
Fig. 41: The temporary rails in position.

Now, with a fine bradawl pierce in centre between the two lines about five holes, keeping your first and last hole quite half-an-inch from the edges of boards. If screws are to be used, the holes should be countersunk, on the reverse side to that on which the slips of wood are tacked. Readers will find these temporary slips very useful when screwing or nailing cage together.

The next thing is to set out ends from your rods, in the same way as the top and bottom were set out, with the exception that in this instance it is not necessary to square lines across your board, as they are only wanted to denote the required position of the front rail.

The Carcase of the Cage Complete.

You may now nail or screw the carcase together. Keep the back edges of boards towards you, and before driving in your nail make sure the back edge of end is quite flush with the back edge of top or bottom that you happen to be nailing on. Also make sure you have the inside of your end pressed tight against the slip tacked on for that purpose. Don't finish nailing one corner before touching the others, but first put in the two outside nails to all four corners. Having done this, you will find it easier to finish nailing, as you have your carcase self-supporting, as it were.

There being now no further use for the temporary slips, they can be removed, and put aside until wanted for another cage. If in the construction of your cages screws are not being used throughout, one at least should be used in each of the four front corners of the cage. The kind of nails I find most suitable for cage-making are those known as panel pins and oval brads; the handiest sizes being ¾in., 1in., and 1¼in.

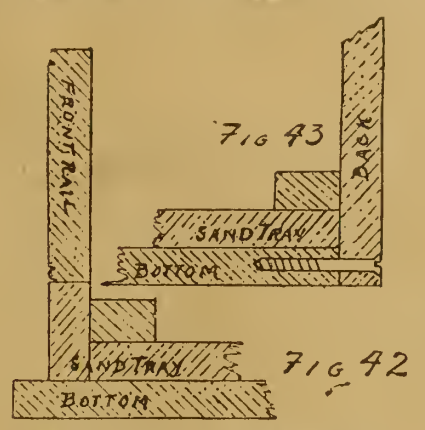

Fig. 42: Section of cage, at front.

Assuming that your cage-back is dry and cleaned off ready to be put on, it will be necessary before starting to nail together, to put a hole in the back, to hang the cage up by. The hole should be about two inches from the top, and of an equal distance from each end. The ⅝in. centre-bit will do very well for this, but be careful when boring not to force the bit through from one side, but as soon as you can feel the point through your cage-back turn the board over and finish the hole from that side, and so do away with ugly splintered-out pieces around the hole.

To fasten on the cage-back, first put in a nail or screw at two bottom corners; then make sure the carcase is quite square before putting in a nail at the two top corners. Now square over the centre of nails holding on top and bottom, and put a straight edge from one point to the other, drawing a line right across. As this line indicates the centre of the end edges, you will have to keep to it when nailing on the backs.

It you have not already got out the front rail, you can now shoot one edge of the piece you had to span from the back. Set your marking gauge to 1¾in., and then run a line along the face-side of the board, ripping off the piece required. Shoot the sawn edge and square one end; then mark the length from cage, square over, and cut off.

The piece wanted for the front of sand tray can be got out in the same way, and the ½in. pieces to go along the back, front and ends of tray can be got ready. Fig. 40 shows how the tray should be made; the ½in. pieces should be put on with ¾in. panel pins, which should be clenched on the back-side. Fig. 42 gives a section view of front rail, and parts of sand tray and cage bottom. Fig. 43 gives section through part of the back, tray, and bottom.

THE USE OF CINNAMON BLOOD IN THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD.

By W. Shepherd.

How to Obtain Quality of Feather.

The next and greatest benefit, in my opinion, accruing from the use of this cross is the quality of feather which the offspring possess. I consider there is nothing at the command of the Norwich Canary breeder like Cinnamon blood for obtaining this. I have noticed this times without number when using this blood on either side. Where the birds come pink-eyed, following the Cinnamon more than the Norwich, they have in 19 cases out of every 20 been the finest and silkiest birds in the nest. They have carried their feathers tightly and compactly, whilst the black-eyed birds, on the other hand, have been much the coarsest birds.

Some of you will argue, no doubt, that seeing the pink-eyed birds come out the best in quality of feathers, the use of this blood on the cock side must therefore be attended by many benefits. Well, as I said previously, one's idea should be to get one's birds as free as possible from Cinnamon feather. Another reason is that you are not breeding for quality alone. As it is on the hen's side most breeders prefer to have quality, it is as a producer of hens where this cross becomes of the greatest value to breeders. The man with good hens breeds the winners. I do not advise you to part with the cocks, but I do advise you to use the best, and use them judiciously.

A Disadvantage.

I have told you now the good points of the cross; we will now turn to the other side. The only thing I think you are likely to lose is size. The more Cinnamon blood you get into your stock the more pronounced you will see this defect.

As I said previously, you will get quality and compactness in your hens, and if you can do this, surely you can afford to give a little away on the cock side. Where you are using Cinnamon blood there always seems to me to be a tendency to breed truer to quality, at the expense of size; and this, I presume, is the reason why the good Cinnamons of to-day are in so comparatively few hands.

A beginner in this branch of the Fancy purchases a pair of birds from a noted breeder, and it is just possible it may turn up a topper at the first attempt—the result of the original breeder's good judgment. But let him keep breeding Cinnamon and Cinnamon for a season or two, and his birds are far more likely to score in Border Fancy classes than in a good Cinnamon class. He will get, maybe, everything—colour, pencilling, and quality—but size, which will be gone; or, at any rate, the bird will not be nearly large enough to compete successfully with the big ones we see to-day.

The race for size has nearly killed the Cinnamon Fancy. I believe that most of the present-day winners in this variety are very closely allied to the Crest-bred. This I tell you merely to show how these birds are likely to make your birds deteriorate, if you don't use the blood judiciously, although it is not shown to such a marked degree, whilst using full-blooded Norwich cocks.

I do not wish to trespass further on your time, except to say, as I said before, that I know by experience that the more one deals with this subject the less one seems to know. Things I have heard old Cinnamon breeders assert were impossible I have to my own satisfaction proved otherwise. It is a very interesting problem, and I hope those who have had greater experience in the matter than I have will give us the benefit of their experience.

Moulting and Colour Feeding the Yorkshire Canary

A Paper read by Mr. G. R. Rushworth before the members and friends of the Great Horton Good Intent O.S. on July 25th.

What I am about to read concerns the moulting and colour feeding of the Yorkshire Canary, and will doubtless be of more interest to the beginner or novice than to the older fanciers, and those whose experience has long since taught them all, and may be, more than I can tell them. Much of the ground, therefore, that I shall traverse in the course of my paper, will have been worn threadbare by the trained fancier, from whom I must ask, consequently, a little indulgence. All the older hands have had to make a start, and most of us at one time or another have been delighted and highly interested to listen to different fanciers' views, and after listening to them, we have sometimes been the wiser men.

Symptoms of the Moult.

First of all then, most fanciers present are aware that the moulting of a bird requires no small amount of attention and care. The moult is the most critical period a bird has to go through, and is accountable for a large number of disasters that take place amongst our feathered pets. The time for the commencement of the moult varies in different birds in no small degree. Those of the first round will generally hold out until they are about ten weeks old, and the later nests of youngsters, not quite so long. Adult birds fall into moult at different periods, according to the energy they possess after the work they have got through during the breeding season.

No hard and fast line can be laid down in regard to the age, or the time at which adult birds will begin to cast. You must be on the alert and keep your eye open; watch the condition of your bird, and be on the look out for drooped flight and tail feathers. Birds become drowsy, languid, mopy, and slack in feather and so on, just prior to the moult. When this state of affairs exists, it warns one that danger is ahead. Be cautious and careful then of your charges. When a bird is moulting, it will very soon catch cold, therefore, keep it away from all draughts and keep it fairly warm. Disturb them as little as possible. Colds and chills claim many old and young birds at this time of the year.

Introducing New Blood.

We come now to what many fanciers are anxious about—the best way to colour birds. Without it, one stands but a remote chance on the show bench, especially with Yorkshires and several other varieties I might mention. So colour we must have.

To breed for colour, it is important to have a certain amount of green blood in your birds. Green stock birds are somewhat hard to purchase, but are comparatively easy to breed. In purchasing a green stock bird, you have to rely on the good faith of the seller. But having bred a green stock bird, you know exactly where you are. To obtain an ideal green stock bird, I advise you to pair two heavily-variegated yellows together. Let the two heavily-variegated yellows be birds of good type and quality of feather. A yellow-green bred from two such birds will prove to be of wonderful value in breeding for colour. Having bred your green stock bird, mate him with a clear hen, and the produce of the union will be some rare coloured birds, especially if they are yellow cocks. The young from such birds are always teeming with colour and quality, and when colour fed are what our show reporters like to call "Balls of Fire."

Some fanciers endeavour to improve the colour of their birds by the introduction of cinnamon blood, but my experience has assured me that it is not a satisfactory method. The cinnamon blood more often than not produces a salmon-pink yellow instead of the golden-yellow required.

Mixing the Colour Food.

Fanciers have various ways of preparing their colour foods and each one usually believes his way to be the best. All I can say is this: whatever way proves satisfactory, stick to it. My own method is as follows: For the first few days I make my food weak, gradually getting it to the fullest strength I want it. It is a great mistake to give the food too strong in pepper for a start. Birds, as a rule, fight shy of it at first; so you must humour them somewhat.

To each hard-boiled egg, add about 3ozs. of bread or biscuits, whichever you are accustomed to provide them with; add to this ½-oz. of colour food and mix well together. Then add a little moist sugar, making the mixture fairly sweet and a little more palatable for the birds. By degrees, work the quantity of pepper up to 1½ oz. to the above-mentioned items and the colour of your birds should be very near the mark.

Some prefer to use a little oil for producing sheen on the birds' plumage. Most of the colour food on the market to-day contains plenty of oil, so it is not needful to make any addition. As to the colour food to use, it would not be fair for me to recommend any vendor's food, so I will leave this entirely in your own hands. I will say this, however, that it is most advisable to add to each pound of tasteless, 2 ozs. of hot natal. The latter provides a little warmth and also assists in getting your birds brighter in colour, doing away with that bricky cast one so often sees.

Always make a practice of mixing your colour food over-night, as by so doing, the colour gets absorbed well into the other ingredients before the time for using. By this method the birds are unable to pick out the eggs and leave the pepper, as birds are apt to do if you provide them with the food directly after you have mixed it. This is a hint well worth the taking.

The Giving of Colour Food.

A teaspoonful of the colour-food should be got into each bird if possible each day. This is quite sufficient to answer any purpose. Some birds take more readily to the feed than others. Those which shun the colour food you are bound to refrain from giving seed to for a few hours, until they have eaten up the required quantity. In the majority of instances, you will be compelled to lift off the seed hopper, to ensure your birds eating sufficient colour food to produce the correct colour; from three to four hours per day should suffice for this. I have often heard fanciers say, "Oh, I never take away any seed; my birds will eat pepper alright." It may be so, and their birds may become a decent colour. But are they really deep enough in colour? That is the point. My experience is that no matter what you mix with the colour food, or how palatable you make it, birds will prefer seed more often than not to colour food, and more especially at first. I never yet have been the happy possessor of a strain of birds that have been found clinging on the cage fronts, with beaks wide open and crying for more colour food. I honestly believe that for birds to be moulted out to the desired colour in order to stand the chances in the keen competition of to-day, seed must be denied them over a certain period during the moulting season.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET ST., LONDON.

Some British Birds I have Kept and Exhibited.

By E. MILNE.

Much has appeared from time to time on the above subject, but it has not all been the outcome of practical experience in the keeping of British birds or of the study of the birds in their native haunts. It is my purpose, therefore, to give in as brief a form as possible the result of my experience in the keeping and exhibiting of some of the most popular of our resident birds.

An Excellent Staple Diet.

Before doing so, let me warn my readers, and especially those who are interested in this branch of our hobby, not to follow the advice of those who say that it is a great waste to give Canary seed to most Britishers. Rather, I would say, make it the staple food in the case of those of them that eat it. I have moulted Goldies and Bullies on nothing else, and have only given them in addition plenty of wild seed in season and my Bullies a little linseed during the latter part of the moult, and I have found them always to come out better in colour than those birds fed on various mixtures recommended by some fanciers of wide experience and also by successful exhibitors. In fact, I have found it positively dangerous to give niger, hemp, and sunflower seeds in any quantity to those birds which we know are so passionately fond of them. This does not apply so strongly to birds kept in aviaries, of course, but even there they will thrive longer on a plain diet.

My next point is, don't use anything but sand on the cage bottoms. Keep your birds clean, but do not pamper them, leaving newly-caught birds alone especially until they get gradually used to cage life.

Lastly (and this is perhaps the most important principle) give them the bath every day, summer and winter, taking it off always at about twelve noon. Those birds that won't wash spray regularly for a week, and you will generally find it effects a cure; but give them water. I quite sympathise with those who have fine racks of cages for their pets, as the bathing operations certainly do make a bit of a mess, and help to remove the paint, varnish (or whatever else it is) from the cage fronts more quickly than would otherwise be the case. But one will be amply repaid for the little extra trouble when one knows that his birds are kept in fine fettle and the death-rate (any British bird fancier can tell you what that word means) is very much reduced.

Methods of Keeping Britishers.

Taking first the Magpies; this bird is, I consider, one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most interesting of birds kept in captivity, but if you would keep him in good exhibition form you must have a small aviary or a hutch; 5ft. long by 2ft. broad will do, with wire netting on the front. You will find Mr. Mag. does not much relish the ordinary Thrush or Blackbird food; but if he is given a bit of flesh raw, every day or second day, he will feel himself obliged to take it, and he will live and thrive exceedingly well. Scraps from your butcher are the things, and a Sparrow now and again (as often as you like) is much appreciated; in fact, anything that is tasty.

A few words on the Jay may prove appropriate. The same treatment suits this bird admirably; but he is more partial to a vegetable diet, and is passionately fond of nuts. If, however, one's Jay is not a hand-reared one, my experience is that he is rather desperate.

Some Particular Favourites.

Blackbirds, Thrushes, Fieldfares, etc., are particular favourites of mine, and especially the Blackies. The orange beak and eye cere of the bird contrast most beautifully with the glossy black of his body. I also found him as a rule more easily inured to the loss of liberty than in the case of his companions.

You will observe, therefore, that I do not believe much in hand-rearing these birds, and my reason is simply that you have to wait at least two years before your Blackie is of any use for exhibition purposes. The wild-caught ones are much hardier, and you will find that after all your trouble and expense in connection with the hand-rearing, many of your Thrushes grow as wild as birds only a few months in a cage.

Get your birds in the end or at the beginning of the year, and they should be steady enough to keep their feathers when the moult comes round, and if good specimens do some service for you on the show bench. Of course, some birds would never steady sufficiently for show purposes, and I advise you to give those that sit and stare at you on your approach their freedom.

Any advertised softbill or rather Thrush food will suit the above birds, but I prefer to make up my own, as then one can be sure of its freshness. A good chicken meal is about the best thing I know, with a proportion of crissel and a pinch of ants' eggs or dried flies. Any dainty table scraps will also be relished. By way of a change, I mix these foods with boiled potato or grated raw carrot instead of water.

Show cages for all the above-mentioned birds should be painted black, and the inside should be of a light olive green colour.

The Bunting Family.

I am rather doubtful about the nationality of some of the members of this family now being exhibited, but the Yellowhammers, Snow Buntings, Common and Reed Buntings are all well enough known to us. The only two to my mind worth keeping are the Yellowhammer and the Reed Bunting; but the same treatment applies to them all. Plain Canary seed that is, and as much live food as you care to give them. In fact, my experience tells me that unless supplied with plenty of it they are difficult to moult in a cage, and particularly the Reed and Snow Buntings.

They might be given other seeds crushed. And I had a Yellowhammer quite recently that would crack hemp with any Finch. For exhibition purposes get these birds as large as possible, with the colours clean and bright, and the markings distinct.

The main point in a good Yellowhammer is to have the V. mark on his head clearly cut and going far enough back to allow of there being no lining on the feathers in between. The Reed Bunting's head must be jet black, and the colour round his neck as pure white as is possible. All the Buntings are inclined to be shy in their wild state, and as it is impossible to win with a wild bird, Reed Buntings will require a great deal of careful handling. Once steady, however, the "Yaldie" is a fine fellow, and his song is charming, reminding me always of the simple ways of childhood.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Nothing further happened that year in the way of breeding, but the happy pair passed the winter out of doors in the most perfect health and contentment.

The Many Colour, I may say in passing, is a very frugal bird, and a plain and simple diet suits him admirably. All mine have in the way of food is Indian millet, Canary seed, and an abundance of groundsel and flowering grass. Many Colours may be safely trusted with the tiniest of Finches.

The next year's breeding operations commenced very early. It must have been February that the hen disappeared into a log. I feared for the result—unfertile eggs. It proved I was right, for when she gave over sitting I found five clear eggs in the nest. After a very few days, my experienced eye saw that another batch of eggs was in preparation. Soon Mrs. Many Colour disappeared once more, and hope and expectation ran high once again. Once more she left her lord and master alone in his glory.

How long and weary the weeks of waiting seem'd! At last, one day I fancied I heard the well-known noise that young Parrakeets make, which once heard is never forgotten. It was days before I heard the sound again. You may listen for hours and you will hear nothing. The old birds signal the youngsters to shut up if anyone is about. If you hear them it is by accident. One day I saw the cock slinking out of the nest in a most apologetic way. I wondered what he had been in for, as when the old hen wants feeding she always comes off the nest. I hoped that he had gone to feed his family. Later on I found out that he had. The moment I suspected that youngsters were about, I gave green meat ad libitum. During early days the young are fed on little else.

How can you tell when youngsters are about? Some people say, Go and look at the nest. Wisdom says, Do nothing of the sort. Watch for signs. When you see a cock Many Colour, as for that matter any other Parrakeet, eating all day long against time, or as if there was no hereafter, you may be certain of one or two things: either he is going to die, or he has a family to provide for.

As my cock bird looked the picture of health, I took the latter view. This is not intuitive wisdom, but gathered slowly and painfully. My duties now blossomed forth like Aaron's rod, and I became in turn feeder, watcher, and general supervisor.

For weeks I literally lived on thorns. Was all my labour for naught? Should I just take one little peep, like Bluebeard's wife? Curiosity said "Yes"; Prudence whispered "No," and Prudence won the day. One morning in June, as I entered the aviary at 8 a.m., there was a rustling demonstration of surprise, such as you may have observed in a country congregation, when they hear an allusion to their every-day sins from the pulpit. Mr. and Mrs. Many Colour were running about the floor and calling to each other in the most frantic and excited state of mind, and I was not long in perceiving that the cause of all this parental joy and fussiness was the advent of a beautiful young Many Colour. I never saw a youngster that could fly so swiftly and easily from the first.

Many young Parrakeets go back to sleep in the nest for quite a long time. This one never did. The reason may have been that the hen went to nest again about a week before it came out, and she is now sitting steadily on a third batch. In the second batch there were three eggs—two clear and one youngster. The young one is a hen.

When I went into the house and told what I had found, neither Demosthenes nor a Nationalist member at a Cork election could have been listened to with more gratifying attention. Mr. Many Colour is left in sole charge, but the youngster is quite able to do for itself now, and is highly proud of itself as the first Many Colour ever born in the British Islands. As I look at her, I lift my hat reverently and whisper, Laudate. I feel almost like Jeremy Taylor's widow—that I may almost sit in a clean apron, with my hands folded, and my work done.

I hope my readers will all go and endeavour to follow my good example. All they require, as someone has said, is a pair of Many Colours, a small barrel on end, a large garden aviary, and—that is all! I fancy my readers will say that there is something else.

As I have seen several remarks of late to the effect that my success is due to immense aviaries, I should like to say that I have none. The aviary in which the Many Colours bred is about 6ft. square. I have just been looking at the youngster. She is about three-quarters of the size of her parents. Beak, flesh colour; eye, black; the red mark on the head very faint and indistinct at present; the breast, manvish green, verging into yellow below, the breast crossed with tiny lines; flight, dark blue; the shoulder has the pale red patch; under tail, blue. This is only a rough descripiton, as it is difficult to get near the bird and to describe exactly shades of colour in words.

CHAPTER XVI.: My Bicheno Finches.

Bichenos are among the tiniest of the little Finches that come from Australia. I know of nothing so tiny as their little legs and feet; they are more like threads than legs. Where to get them is always a difficult question. As an old school inspector, it reminds me of another difficult question. How much is eleven twelves? said H.M.I., and there was no answer. He put the question in a more searching way. Who knows how much is eleven twelves? And the village idiot answered, "Gawd," that being the generally accepted answer to difficult questions couched in this form.

If you were to ask me at the present time where to get Bichenos, I should be equally puzzled as those poor children. Only a tiny consignment comes over each year, and unless these get into the right hands, they speedily shuffle off this mortal coil. Being very rare, they always command good prices, and when their great delicacy is taken into account on landing, they are literally, when acclimatised, worth their weight in gold. The only way to keep them alive, if they land in February (as they usually do) is to put them at once into one of my little patent "night light cages" and keep them there till the summer is well advanced. You may be of the opinion of the elder Weller as to the trouble. "Whether it's worth while goin' through so much to learn so little," as the charity boy said when he got to the end of the alphabet; for my part I distinctly think it is; the sight of a pair of light-feathered little Bichenos is ample reward, to my mind, for long months of pain and trouble.

I should say that of the few pairs that come over nearly all die within a few days of reaching their new homes, unless their new owners are more than usually skilful in the difficult art of hardening off. A friend of mine this spring bought two pairs, and they were all dead within forty-eight hours.

I cannot, therefore, recommend Bichenos to everyone; they are not strong and hardy annuals. But if a man really loves birds and understands them, I would say, try Bichenos. The nuisance is that Bichenos always come over at the very coldest season of the year, usually in January; so this adds to the risk, as a cold journey of only a few hours will finish off these tender little things.

To buy Bichenos one day and lose them the next is distinctly a hard case. It is the sort of case that an ingenious editor might propound for solution. What should A do? Bichenos are marvellously active, and pop about like little mice, and it is no easy matter to catch an escaped one. I have, at the present moment, quite a little host of them, and they are certainly great favourites of mine. They are very tame and friendly (at least, mine are), and will let me get quite close to them in their big aviary without showing the least fear, and they will feed all round my feet. (The latter I may remark are large, so probably the Bichenos think that there is ample space!)

Oozing from every Pore.

Bichenos are gregarious, and keep together all day, frequently uttering their call note, to keep their mates apprised of their positions. In an aviary they always sleep in a box warmly lined with hay, and when hardened do not mind the cold a bit; but I believe that many a one is lost that need not be, were sleeping places provided. How long would English Wrens live in an aviary if compelled to sleep all night on the bare branches? It isn't everybody that would give away all his secrets, as I am doing. I think sometimes I must be related to that friend of Bishop Wilberforce, of whom he said, "I have often heard of the milk of human kindness, but till I met you, I had never met the cow!"

The cock bird has a pretty little song—diddy dee, diddy dee, diddy—repeated at intervals. Some people might be of the opinion of a certain respectable verger. Asked as to his opinion of the solo singer, he replied: "Oh, you haven't missed nowt to-night, sir; we only 'ad a bee in a bottle." Well, my poor little Bicheno does not make much more noise, perhaps, but still, I like to think he has a pretty song. At any rate, I am sure he thinks so, and so does his dear little wife.

Their favourite food I find to be Indian millet, and sometimes they will take a little Canary seed. They are very fond of crushed cuttlefish bone, and I have seen them eat fresh garden ants' eggs. Bichenos are beautifully marked, especially on the wings, where the black and white pencilling is exquisite. The front of the head is black in the cock, and brownish rusty in the hen; the back snuff colour, the tail black, the breast of the cock and the cheeks dazzling snow white, but the belly and underparts of the hen are buffy white. I can pick out the sexes with tolerable certainty, but I doubt if a beginner could. The surest test is the song, but then I doubt if a newly-come-over cock could sing; but get a good, healthy cock and suddenly introduce into his presence several presumable ladies of his species, and he will speedily let you see that he is a gentleman. He probably feels like that old cottager who, having learned for the first time that Solomon had had all those wives, exclaimed, "Lor' sir, what blessed privileges them early Christians had!" I may be libelling Master Bicheno, but that is my private opinion. I do not think that the double band on the chest is any mark of sex, though it may be, and generally is, of age. The beak is bluish, and the legs and feet slate colour.

The ease and readiness with which Bichenos are said to breed in books is, to put it mildly, remarkable. A dealer in the East End, now dead, used to buttonhole me (so that I couldn't get away), and proceed to tell me that he had bred almost every kind of bird in his own shop. I believed him no more than I do the verger, who tells me that the "squint" seen in some churches was to let the poor lepers see the "Elevation of the Host"; our forefathers knew better than to allow lepers to get into the churchyard.

WILD BIRD NOTES.

Goldcrests in Surrey.

Fir trees and pines appear to be necessary to the tiny Gold-crested Wren; consequently it is mostly to be met with in the wilder and less-frequented districts. It is the smallest of our British birds. Occasionally one manages to find this charming little bird in some out-of-the-way place. There is much common land throughout Surrey, and some of it is partly covered with firs and pines. Many of these tracts are comparatively wild and undisturbed, and the Goldcrest builds his cradle-like homes in these quiet woods. The chattering of the Tits, the harsh cry of the Woodpeckers, and the cooing of the Doves are more frequently heard here than any other sounds. Young wild birds may often be located by their baby cries, while the parent birds are feeding them. Following these sounds we located a pair of small birds feeding a brood in a nest placed under the branch of a pine tree, some twenty-five feet above the ground. It was quite at the extremity of the branch, and at first could only be located by a thickness of the foliage, and might have been passed as such, but for the frequent journeys of the parent birds to the nest. By careful manœuvring we could manage to get a view of the side of the structure. It was suspended under the branch thickly covered with foliage. The old birds visited it every few minutes. Perching on a branch below it, they flew up and clung to the side of it, fed the brood and dropping, flew straight away in search of more food. This they appeared to find underneath the lancet-shaped leaves, and so quick were their movements that it was a most difficult matter to get a good view of them, even with the glasses. When at the nest, they appeared just as full of animation. They fed the brood and were off again at once. We watched them for quite an hour, but failed to get a good view of the birds' crest. The afternoon sun only occasionally penetrated the thick branches of the firs, and as the nest was overhung with leaves it was impossible to see them here with any degree of plainness. This was unfortunate, as this was the only place one could be certain of seeing them for a few seconds.

Eagle's Solitary Chick.

Eagles, and other raptorial birds, seldom hatch more one young one. The second egg is frequently addled.

Late Brood of Starlings.

The writer saw on July 12 a brood of young Starlings just out of the nest. If these birds are not double brooded, this appears to be a very late date for a first brood.

Nesting Boxes for Starlings.

It is stated that Starlings will not nest in boxes just large enough to hold them. The reason given is that they like a large space to alight upon. To those who prefer to encourage the smaller birds, this knowledge should be invaluable.

Birds of Short Flight.

The pretty little Long-tailed Tits are great travellers and yet are exceptionally bad flyers. One may watch a family party of them for hours and never see them fly but a few yards at one time, just from bush to bush. If compelled to go out of the wood they skirt it to the nearest hedgerow, and will work along this to another wood or plantation. If obliged to fly into the open, they will not go far before perching on a stick or tall weed. And this they will do several times when crossing a field. Their wings are comparatively short.

Little Owl in Kent.

The Little Owl has bred in an old chalk pit in a remote part of Kent for the last two seasons, and no doubt this interesting species would soon become fairly plentiful if allowed to live, without persecution. One of these birds which recently came into my possession was shot by the gamekeeper on the estate. He had an idea it was after some of his young Pheasants. Now this particular individual will destroy anything at all uncommon, or larger than usual, even such harmless birds as Woodpeckers and Nightjars. This being the case I fear this small colony of Little Owls has not much chance of becoming firmly established. Undoubtedly these birds feed principally upon beetles and other creeping things.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned togother, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

ARE YOU READY

for the ensuing catching season by having all your appliances ready? If not I can supply you with everything you require at lowest prices consistent with quality; clap nets, made from finest thread, ¾-in mesh, 3 yds. long, 4/- pair; 4 yds. 5/-, 5 yds. 6/-, 6 yds. 7/-, 7 yds. 8/-, 8 yds. 9/-, 9 yds. 10/-, 10 yds. 11/- per pair, all 6½ ft. deep and 4 ft. fly; all clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted with poles, pegs, lines and everything ready for immediate use; bat folding sparrow nets fitted on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair, ditto fitted on 19 ft. poles, 6/6 pair; loose netting, pure thread, ¾ in. mesh, 7 ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9 ft. deep, 4d. yd., post free; scores of different sizes of nets always in stock; single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to immediately reset itself soon as bird is caught, 1/6 each; self-acting spring net traps, 24 in. long, 1/- each; 18 in. long, 9d. each; carriage 4d. extra; these net traps are totally unlike any other on the market, being much larger, more simple to use, require no pegging down, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook; real Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, will not run in sun, and guaranteed to hold a hawk; ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 9d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample box 3d.; all post free; pure hemp pull lines, 65 yds. long, specially spun without "snarl," or "back twist," 1/4 each, carriage paid; bird brace swivels, 6d. doz., post free; stave poles, flirt pegs, store cages, and everything required by catchers always in stock; for full printed list send stamp; all the leading professional catchers use my appliances, and will have no others. Everything sent on approval at my risk, either cash or deposit system, and money fully refunded if every satisfaction not given; last season I publicly asked every disappointed purchaser to smash up the goods I sent him if they did not prove in every way exactly as advertised, and described, and I would return every penny of his money, but not one article was broken up, nor was I ever asked to return a copper; this offer is still open to one and all. (Imitators please copy.) The reason I am so confident as to value of my goods is because no expense is spared to make them as durable as possible, and my workmen are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced bird catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required. Thousands of testimonials received and published during past few seasons; don't forget the old name and address; no connection with any other house in the trade.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capehill, Birmingham.

BIRD CATCHERS.

Of Course, you cannot afford to be always buying. You require appliances that not only work well, but last and give satisfaction, then buy from the Actual Maker. Read following unsolicited Testimonial:— 460, Underwood Lane, Crewe, Cheshire. Sir, please send your Catalogue of Nets, I had a pair from elsewhere, and they are completely done, advertised as Hemp lines they were only parcel string, of no use whatever. I want some good nets as I cannot afford to be always buying. - Yours truly, W. Bowker.

No deception here; order to-day; nets will be there to-morrow. Large stock always ready; I guarantee my appliances the best value ever offered; high-class goods only; made to wear, not merely to sell; with extra improvements added this season, makes them the easiest and fastest working ones ever invented; order now from the old firm. Nets, traps, decoys, every down to date and useful appliance; to be successful use only the best; all on approval; deposit with Editor if desired; satisfaction guaranteed or money returned; ½, ⅝, or ¾ mesh supplied; green, tan, drab, colour warranted not to show on ground; large stocks of Nightingale traps at 1/6, as illustrated in CAGE BIRDS August 1st by Mr. Sandy. All the latest improvements; finest and best invisible netting possible to manufacture; all clap-nets will be fitted with improved steel sockets, and money returned if dissatisfied. Used by all the leading catchers, who will accept no other make. Beware of cheap imitations. Clap-nets, poles, sockets, irons, lines, two nets, carrying bag, full directions for setting, with sketches, 9 ft. long, each net 3 ft. wide, 6/-; 10 ft. by 3 ft., 6/6; 12 ft. by 3 ft., 7/6; 18 ft. by 3 ft., 9/6; 18 by 4, 11/-; 24 by 4, 12/-; 24 by 4½, 14/-; 30 ft. by 5, 17/6; 36 by 6, 21/-; 48 by 6 ft., 25/-; spring net traps, the "catch all," easy carried, self-acting, takes alive uninjured; Goldfinch size 1/8, two 2/3; Rook Pigeon Blackbird 2/-, two 3/6; carriage paid; swivel bird traces, 20 years reputation, no injury, no tying, trace 3d.; dozen 8d., with sketch; brace bird poles, 9d., bird lime, best quality, Japanese hold Rooks, any weather, 1/8 pound, half pound 1/-, quarter 7d., large box 4d., carriage paid; lime twigs, holder and four 7d., with eight 9d., post free; call cages, green, 6d.; store cages, 1/3, 2/3, 3/3; trap cages, double 1/-, treble 1/9, four compartments 3/-; for all other appliances send stamp for 40-page illustrated catalogue, also 7d. for large book (copyright) Hints on Birdcatching, feeding, taming, setting nets, selecting sexes useful hints where to set baits, etc., etc.; life experience with nets.

HARRY ALLEN,

And Champion of all Champions; now, all you little Linnet Kings, gather round and learn what no other man in the world can teach you. Facts speak louder than words; I sold to a gentleman at Preston, a Linnet for £6 10s.; another for £1; also gentlemen in Hull two for £11, and one for £7, one for £5, and lots for £3 and over, and one for the largest price ever known, in the bird world. To one gentleman, Cumberland, I sold three Linnets for £8, six for £13; and to a gentleman in Cheshire one for £2, one for 30s.; and another for 16s.; also there was money deposited with the Editor of this paper for £3, £2, 32s., 30s., and lots at £1 and over. For proof of any one, or all, of the above, a line to the Editor of CAGE BIRDS is sufficient; also I will guarantee I have sent out more prize-winners than all so-called Linnet Kings put together, this last twelve months, for contest and show bench, and there is not a man living can come near my sales, both for quantity and quality, for the last 27 years; and I am still sending out winners. Gentlemen, I have the following now ready for sale, a nice lot of Linnets through the moult, right for either catching or teaching young ones, at 10/0 and 7/6, with cage, which are equal to any other Linnets sold at £1; also a nice lot of Linnets, singing grand, at 5/- each, with a new contest cage. My special Linnet, with contest cage, a packet of my special mixture, and my book of secrets, 4/- the lot; this is the best and cheapest lot ever put before the public. I have some splendid Linnets at 1/- and 1/6 each; these are my special line, and come from the same place as my champions come from, and when six months old, I have sold them for £5 each; those who want real value for their money, please send at once, as they will not last long. My book of secrets 1/0 each; splendid cock Larks, singing grand, 1/- and 1/6 each; the best Linnet whistlers in the world, 6d. each; contest cages, the same as the champion Linnet of the world is in, 1/6 each, or 15/- per dozen. Four packets of my special mixture, 1/-; please read what others say:—Ang. 7th, 1908. 4, Cresbell Grove, Holbeck. —To Harry Allen, King of all Kings, I am writing to inform you that with the Linnet I purchased from you, I won 1st prize with it in the Members' Class at the Morley Show, on July 18th in a class of 10. I thank you for your straightforward and honest dealings. Yours, etc., Harry Carter.

I have hundreds in stock, please state wants, to the largest British Bird Dealer in the world. Thanking one and all for their patronage, and hoping they will not forget to tell their friends. —Harry Allen, Bird Specialist, and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett Street, Leeds.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

VICTORIAN CANARY SOCIETY (Australia).

The 23rd annual show of the above society was held in Melbourne on June 5th and 6th. It was a large exhibition, no less than about 350 Canaries and Finches being staged. The medal presented by our own London and Provincial O.S. for the best Crest and the best Norwich in show (both Colonial bred) were won by Messrs. A. B. Mason and F. White respectively. The Crest was the deservedly popular "Eclipse," which also won the five-guinea Gaskell Trophy (for the second time). It was first in its class, and obtained the special for best natural colour Crest. The other special winner is a grand Norwich yellow cock, which everyone admired. It took first in its class and spl for best natural colour Norwich. The Norwich all round were a level lot, typical all over. Yorkshires, too, were good, and that not only in numbers but also in quality, Mr. W. T. Linton winning the trophy in this section. Lizards, while weak in numerical strength, were of excellent quality, the challenge trophy being won by Mr. P. Verey; he also took first and special in every class. Mr. C. L. Greenwood took the special in the British Bird class, he exhibiting a fine Thrush. The Foreign and Australian birds proved a source of much attraction, Mr. Boardman winning with a good specimen of the Pope Cardinal, which was shown in A1 condition. Mr. Dyer won the special in the section devoted to Parrots, his Cockatoo being an admirable specimen and well shown. The show throughout was a marked success, and reflected great credit on the able officials.

NEWTON ABBOT & DI T. F.A.

A successful show was held on August 8th. The cage bird section proved very interesting to the large number of visitors to the show. The secretary, Mr. H. J. Turner, had everything in apple-pie order, and is deserving of praise for his able management. Mr. F. Redwood (Newton) judged, his awards giving general satisfaction.

HUNWICK AND DISTRICT H.S.

Annual Show held on August 8th. We were favoured with a splendid day, and there was a capital attendance of the public. Cage bird classes have been added to the schedule for the first time, and they proved a centre of great attraction, which proves there was a keen interest taken in them. The secretarial duties were ably carried out by Messrs. Tennick, A. J. Farrar, who were well backed by the stewards, Messrs. J. Browson and A. T. Dargue. Mr. T. Fogget judged, and gave satisfaction. The principal winners in the Norwich Section were Messrs. Henry Wilson, Hetton, and Wildsmith, and A. Hawkins in the British Bird Section with a good Goldfinch. It will be well perhaps for the society to make a little alteration in these sections another year.

NOR. (3): 1, 2, Wilson, clear yellow, with good size and fine colour; 2, similar in size; 3, Atess well-known; 4-pointed Buff. BRED 1908 (10): 1, 2, Wilson, leader grand bird, good feather; 2, very similar; 3, Boyd, good bird all over. YORKS. OLD (4): 1, 2, Rutherford and Bright, eye ticked yellow in grand condition, smart feather, good colour; 2, clear Yellow, loses only in colour and condition to winner. LINNET (10): 1, Wildsmith and Hawkins, good size and colour, well pencilled, worth its place; 2, Wilson, fine size, nice pencilling and steady; 3, Mogil, grand bird, little light in colour to winner, otherwise good all over; 4, Boyd, nice bird. A.O.S. BRIT FINCH (9): 1, Wildsmith and Hawkins, grand Goldfinch, excellent size and colour, well worth its place; 2, Rutherford and Bright, Hawfinch, unfortunately deep in moult; 3, Wilson, Goldfinch, nice bird. WILD (4): 1, 2, Foster, leader Yellowhammer, good size and colour showing markings distinctly; 2, Wheatear, in the pink of condition, steady as a rock; 3, Davidson, Song Thrush, good bird, but rather damaged in tail.—W. Rutherford.

DAWLEY (SALOP).

This show (held in connection with the Horticultural Exhibition), was held on August 5th, in the Vicarage grounds. Cage birds were nicely staged in a roomy tent, and proved an attraction. Entries came up well considering the time of year, and numbered 80 in the eleven classes. Many of them were showing "signs of the times." The open section was not strong numerically, but was certainly not lacking in quality. The "locals" turned up in strong force, making quite a show in themselves. The Fancy in this district appears to have taken root well, many keen fanciers living in the vicinity. We understand a Cage Bird Society has already been formed, and feel sure that if the same amount of interest is taken in it as was displayed at the show, its future is well assured. The Hon. Secs., Messrs. Bowen and Smith, had everything in apple-pie order, and were ably assisted by Mr. Calleas, who looked well after the comforts of the exhibits. Mr. A. J. Gladwin, placed the cards, and gave general satisfaction.

Open Classes: NOR.: 1, 2, Brotherhood, leader heavily variegated Buff, good typo and quality, nice short tail; 2, clear Buff, grand type, good head, well packed wings, true Norwich, bit moulty; 3, vhc, Machin, nice type, good head; vhc, Tranter. YORKS.: 1, 2, Brotherhood, wing ticked Yell. leading, rare shape and length, sweet head, beautiful quality, stands well for a youngster; 2, another young one, clear Yell., nice shape, well drawn, moulty on head, pair of very promising birds; 3, vhc, Johnson, uneven marked Yell., grand length; vhc, Edwards and Poole. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Brotherhood, clinking even marked Buff Goldie-Canary, nice size, lovely colour and quality, markings well balanced, shows nice blend of parentage; 2, Callear, unevenly marked Buff Goldie-Canary, nice flush, loses only a little in size and quality to winner; 3, Potter, variegated Buff Goldie-Canary, nice size, shown in nest feather. BRIT.: 1, Brotherhood, well-known Waxwing in nice order; 2, Tranter, Goldfinch, good size, nice blaze and bars, steady, fine tanning and buttons; 3, Potter, well up in size, pretty equal to winner in colour of bars and blaze, but had knocked a few feathers out of blaze. Local Classes: NOR.: 1, vhc, Miss Thompson, marked Buff, very rich in colour, nice frosting, grand quality, good head; 2, Callear, unevenly marked Yell., very nice shape, gets well across perch, in grand feather for time of year; 3, Bailey, ticked Buff, very fair type; hc, Campbell, Machin, Callear. YORKS.: 1, vhc, Johnson, Yell., ticked on head, nice length and quality, very moulty; 2, Machin, Yell., good colour and length, nice head; 3, Hyde, well drawn Buff, nice build, good quality; vhc, Campbell; hc, Butler; c, Williams. A.V., BRED 1908: 1, vhc, W. Johnson, Buff Yorks., good length and type, strong in beak; 2, Machin, Buff Norwich, nice type and feather, gets well across perch; 3, vhc, Campbell, Buff Yorks., nice quality; vhc, T. Johnson (2); hc, Edwards and Poole; vhc, hc, c, Mrs. Clayton. GOLDFINCH: 1, Windsor, little gem, very rich blaze, grand coloured tan, lovely bars, in rare condition, with a bit more size would be a real good one; 2, hc, Butler, nice blaze, well cut whites, loses only in body colour and condition; 3, Downes, nice blaze, but rather rough in feather and unsteady; 4, Westbrook; hc, Bailey, Pugh, Hyde; c, Clarke, Rowe. BULLFINCH: 1, Westbrook, nice size and shape, good cap; 2, Callear, lovely colour on breast; 3, Pugh, another good one, but a little rough in feather—moulty; vhc, Edwards. BRIT. A.O.S.: 1, 3, Mrs. Green, leader nice song Thrush, grand size, well spotted, in rare feather and condition; 3, Lark, good size, very steady; 2, Callear, medium-sized Hawfinch, in moult; vhc (2), Machin; hc, Davies, Butler; c, Butler. MULE OR HYB.: 1, 3, Callear, leader variegated Buff Goldie Can., very moulty; 3, good-sized dark Coldie Can., again moulty; 2, Machin, variegated Goldie Can., nice size, in nest feather; vhc, Johnson, Downes.

CARMARTHENSHIRE C.B.S.

The Carmarthenshire P.P. and C.B.S. held their first members' show at the Plough Hotel, on August 6th. The number of exhibits came up to expectations and there were some really good birds shown in the several classes. Mr. Thomas officiated as judge of cage birds, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

NOR.: 1, 2, 3, R. Bevan. A.O.V.: 1, 2, R. Bevan; vhc, E. Howells. GOLDFINCH: 1, 2, T. Evans; 3, T. Lloyd.—F. King, Hon. Sec.

RUABON.

Wynnstay Park was the scene of a nice show of cage birds held on August 3rd. The entries were good in number, if the quality (at this time of year) were somewhat below par. The judge was Mr. C. W. Wicks, whose placing of the awards gave entire satisfaction.

CAN. CK. (8): 1, vhc, Jordan; 2, 3, Butler; res., Dudleston. HEN (7): 1, 2, res., Butler; 3, Jordan; vhc, Dudleston. GOLDFINCH (8): 1, 2, Williams; 3, Salter; res., Jordan. MULE (7): 1, 3, Butler; 2, W. Williams; res., J. Williams.

ECCLESHILL C.B.A.

The monthly First Feather Show was held on July 28th at Fountain Inn, when some very nice youngsters were staged. Mr. C. Whiting (Bradford) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

CLASS I.: 1, Sparks; 2, Clark; 3, Stebbing; 4, Lee; vhc, Elsegood; hc, Mortimer. CLASS II.: 1, vhc, Stebbinge; 2, Clark; 3, Mortimer; 4, c, Elsegood; hc, Lee. CLASS III.: 1, Sparks; 2, Elsegood. CLASS IV.: 1, Mortimer; 2, Sparks; 3, Elsegood; 4, Lee; vhc, Clark. CLASS V.: 1, Mortimer; 2, Elsegood; 3, Clark. CLASS VI.: 1, Clark. CLASS VII.: 1, Stebbings; 2, Clark. CLASS VIII.: 1, 2, Clark. CLASS IX.: 1, 2, Clark. CLASS X.: 1, hc, Clark; 2, 3, 4, vhc, Wilcock. Mr. C. Stebbings gained most points in open classes, and Mr. Tom Elsegood most points in Novice classes.—W. Ashworth, Hon. Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

The tenth annual show of young birds was held on August 1st in the Trades' Hall, Partick. There was a very good turn out of young birds, over 60 being staged. This was the more gratifying, seeing a good number of our members are on holiday, including our president, Mr. Duncan Graham. The secretary, Mr. J. Henderson, had the arrangements well in hand. Mr. John Young (Rutherglen) judged, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

CREST. BRED.: 1, 2, Lappin. CL., ETC., YELL. P.H.: 1, spl, 2, Sheriden. BUFF (0): 1, 2, spl, for best 2nd in hall, Sheriden; 3, vhc, hc, McRobbie; 4, Maxwell; c, Hendry. VARIEC. YELL. HORFIELD.

This popular Western fixture was held on August 5th. The entry was not large, but the quality was above the average for the time of year. Mr. O. Shipp had everything in grand order, whilst Messrs. Carnew and Manly made most efficient and obliging stewards. Mr. E. A. Lovell judged.

NOR. (8): 1, 3, hc, c, Brown, very hot yellow and a wing marked buff, two grand birds for type and quality; 2, 4, vhc, Trissem and Taylor, nice shaped, good coloured buff and yellow, not so light in feather. YORKS (7): 1, 3, Martin, yellow and buff, rather stout, but good colour, feather, and style; 2, 4, vhc, hc, strong, yellow and buff, much better shape, but beaten in condition; hc, Ewing. BRED 1908 (8): 1, Tristem and Taylor, nice chubby buff Norwich, close feather, and good style; 2, hc, strong variegated, of nice shape, on the strong side; 3, 4, White, very smart, well drooped, nicely radiated green crest, and a stout, clear buff C.B., Mr. Martin. BRIT. GOLD., ETC. (6): 1, Harris, noted winner, looking well; 2, and two spls, Manley, nice face and back, hardly so rich on breast; 3, Howard, rather dark in blaze, nice shape, and feather; 4, Locke, well marked, rich coloured, falls in feather—all Goldies; vhc, Rowe and Hancock; hc, Barry Bros., A.O.V. SMALL: 1, 2, Barry Bros., very smart, well marked, red-backed Shrike, and a nice soft-coloured Nuthatch, both in good plumage; 3, 4, Rowe and Hancock, very neat, well-marked Siskin, and a well-feathered yellow Bunting. MULE (11): 1, 2, Collins, dark Greenfinch Canary, of beautiful colour and plumage, and a larger, well-marked, rich-coloured dark buff; 3, Carnew, variegated yellow; 4, Locke; vhc, hc, c, Maggs. (3): 1, 2, 3, Barry Bros. MULE (2): 1, Tadfield; 2, Atwell.

HAWARDEN.

Several classes were provided for cage birds at the third annual show held in the Hawarden Park, on August 3rd. Mr. G. H. Boddar judged, giving general satisfaction. The entries contained birds of excellent merit, and all proved a source of not a little attraction.

NOR. (1): F. Jones. YORKS. (10): 1, W. Jones; 2, 3, res., E. Edwardes; vhc, hc, P. Buckley; c, Farrell BRIT. HARDBILL (4), 1, 3, E. Price; 2, F. Jones; res., Johnson. MULE (1): Edwards. LOCAL CAN. (1): Borrows. A.O.V. (1): 3, Parrish.

SHIPLEY O.S.

Members' Show held on August 8th, at Prince of Wales Hotel, Saltaire Road. Entries came up very well, so near the moult. Mr. R. Garnett (Windhill) judged, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. H. Long won the Most Points' Special, Mr. H. Dobson second, and Mr. E. Grange the Novice Special.

CL. YELL.: 1, 3, vhc, Long; 2, Taylor. BUFF: 1, Long, 2, Batty; 3, Taylor; vhc, Towers. TICK. YELL.: 1, Towers; 2, c, Long; 3, Dobson; vhc, hc, Taylor. BUFF: 1, Long; 2, Dobson. UNEVENLY MKD. WAKEFIELD O.S.

A First Feather Show was held on August 8th at headquarters, Crown and Anchor Hotel, when a fair number of young birds were staged. The Yorkshire classes did not fill up quite as well as was expected, due to some of the members not having done so well in the last round. The quality, however, of the exhibits showed an improvement on that of the previous show. The Norwich class brought out some good birds. Some grand Britishers were shown, there being little to choose between several of the specimens. Mr. Lindley (Wombwell) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

YORKS. CL.: 1, vbc, T. and C. Parkes; 2, 3, Taylor. TKD.: 1, 2, vhc, hc, T. and C. Parkes; 3, Taylor; c, Brown. NOR: 1, hc, c, Atkinson; 2, Netherwood; 3, Taylor. Parker and Atkinson, Hon. Secs.

STRATTON AND BUDE F.A.

The fifth annual show was held on August 3rd, amid ideal weather conditions. The attendance was good and the cage bird section proved not the least attractive by any means. The Hon. Secs., Messrs. Clampitt and Wilsher, had carried out the arrangements excellently, and the success of the whole show was in no small measure due to their efforts. The assistant Secretary, Mr. Fairchild, and the committee are also to be congratulated on the success achieved. Mr. J. Davies judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

DOWNEND.

The 25th annual show was held on August 4th at Staple Hill, when the classes provided for cage birds were well filled. The exhibits themselves were all of good merit, some of them being from well-known "stables." Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged, his awards giving every satisfaction.

NOR. P.H (7): 1, hc, Tristem and Taylor, smart unevenly mkd. yellow, good big one, well shaped, and full of quality; 2, vhc, Brown, another very fine marked yellow, splendid carriage, good in size and shape, shown nicely. YORKS.: 1, 3, Martin, birds of good type, standing well up, lengthy, neat, winner best moulded body; res, vhc, hc, Williams, all nice ones for type, leader a well-drawn and stylish yellow. BRED 1908: 1, Tristem and Taylor, promising youngster, which should make up well, it has a good body and head, and stands well across the perch, a Norwich Plainhead; 2, 3, Morgan, Yorkies these, and very good babies, nice ones for type and position; vhc, White; hc, Keegan, Colbourne. MULE: 1, Collins, in the best condition; 2, Tiller; 3, Gornes, all three leaders were nice birds; res, Maggs; hc, Williams. MEMBERS' (6): 1, Winston; 2, Magg; 3, Barry.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

First Young Stock Show held on July 18th. The entries totalled about 60, the majority of the members having done badly this season. A concert had been arranged, and was well carried out by Mr. Hartland, and this with the show proved a decided success from all standpoints. Mr. Allison won the Cup for most points at this and the pair show, Mr. Putner and Mr. Meades following. Mr. Hawkes took special for best British with a good Bullfinch. Mr Easterling judged, his awards being well received. In the Champion Section Mr. Meades took the prizes.

A vote of thanks, proposed by the president to the artistes at the concert, brought a very pleasant evening to a close. Three new members were enrolled during the evening.—W. PAWLEY, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

The second annual young stock show was held at headquarters recently, when the entries came up well considering the time of the year, and the poorness generally of the breeding season, about 100 exhibits being staged in all. The quality in most classes was excellent. The cup for best bird in show was won by Mr. C. H. Cooper, with a Yellow Norwich, which also won two water-colour drawings, one for best champion exhibit and the other for best bird in show. Mr. H. W. Burbidge repeated his success of last year in winning the committee's special, this time for the second best Canary in show, with a Yellow Yorkshire. With the same bird he won a silver spoon for the best Yorkshire in the novice section. Mr. A. J. Billingsley was the winner of the special for best Norwich in the novice section, and Mr. J. Bonwick, the winner of special for best amateur exhibit. The special for best Goldfinch went to Mr. C. H. Cooper. There was a good attendance of members and friends, and everything went along swimmingly. The show was a big success, and will be the bigger when outstanding ticket money has been paid in. Special mention should be made of the energy displayed by Mr. H. W. Burbidge (the assistant secretary), Mr. Shnnkley, and the Messrs. Forse. Mr. J. S. Clarke judged, and gave general satisfaction.

In connection with the annual show of the Rutland H.S. a cage bird exhibition was held on August 3rd in the Limekilns Field. Entries came up well in most classes, but in others they were poor in number, being probably due to the time of year, the birds having already commenced to moult. There were some fine exhibits amongst the Norwich and Yorkshires. The attendance throughout the day was good, and the staging and comfort of the exhibits were well looked after by the stewards. The secretary, Mr. Munton, is deserving of every praise for his successful management. The judging was in the hands of our old friend, Mr. Josepb Bexson, and be pleased everyone.

RUNCORN.

In connection with the annual show of the Runcorn H. and O.S., held in the Plantation Pleasure Grounds on August 1st, there was a fine exhibition of cage birds. The weather was lovely for the occasion, and the number of visitors very satisfactory. The entries were both numerous and of good quality. Mr. Cawley secured the cup for best bird in show with his fine Norwich Yellow, which was admired by all. It was a bird full of excellent qualities and typical all over. Mr. Cooke was runner-up with his winner in the Foreign bird section. The cage bird section of the show did not suffer from want of assistance from fanciers, for there was an able body of stewards, with Mr. C. Hardy, the indefatigable hon. sec., at the head of them, and all are deserving of much praise. Mr. Welliugs (Prescot) judged, and as soon as he made his awards (which gave every satisfaction) the stewards had the cards put up. The fixture afforded a very pleasant day's outing.

YORKS. YELL. (7): 1, 3, c, Cawley, winner a very nice one, all there for length and position, neatly feathered; 3rd, good, with a nicely moulded body; 2, Andrews, smart all round, neat, well shown; vhc, Boote, also typical; hc, Marsn. CLUB REPORTS.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting of committee held on August 8th; chairman, Mr. D. Sunderlnnd. "That patronage of the O.N.P.C. ho granted to Warrington and Dist. C.B.S. (Judge, Mr. A. Wellings)," in addition to those already published, was agreed to, making a total of eight shows. Bye-law passed: "That all amateurs and novices must compete in the open classes for any specials given hy the O.N.P.C., for novices, and will be required to write the word 'novice' or 'amateur' on entry forms." The tender for printing year books was accepted from Messrs. Treweek and Woodhead. Suggestion from sub-committee passed, viz.: "That intending members applying for year and rule books be charged 6d. per copy, which can be deducted from subscription." The following members were appointed to co-operate with other specialist clubs in reference to "railway charges," etc.: Messrs. J. Wilcock, Sunderland, Mitchell, and Simonette. A vole of thanks to the chairman for presiding concluded the meeting.—O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

WIGAN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held on August 1st at the Adelphi Inn, Harrogate Street, Mr. W. Dyer presiding over a very good muster of fanciers. After the usual business, the opportunity was taken of giving a send-off to Mr. D. Simpson, who was going to sail for Canada on August 7th. The Secretary spoke of Mr. Simpson's long and loyal allegiance to to the cage bird Faucy generally, and to the Wigan C.B.S. in particular, and handed to him a pipe and case and pouch filled with tobacco, as a small token of regard from the members. The chairman also spoke in praise of Mr. Simpson as a brother fancier and as an opponent; he always felt, he said, that if he had been able to beat Jack, he had beaten a worthy foe. He wished him every success in his new home. Most of the other members had something to say, the feeling prevailing that in losing Mr. Simpson the society was losing one of its best members. Mr. Simpson suitably and feelingly replied. He said he could never forget his Birdy friends in the Mother country, and that some of his happiest hours had been when he was with the Wigan Bird men.—W. RINGE, Hon. Sec.

ORMSKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters (Buck I' th' Vine Hotel), on August 4th, the chairman (Mr. G. J. Johnson presiding over a numerous attendance. The chief item on the agenda was the presentation of prizes won at the young bird show last month. On account of the satisfaction given at our previous show, Mr. Charles Houlton (St. Helens) was again selected as judge for the old bird show fixed for Nov. 28th. One new member was proposed, and an honorarium was also granted the secretary. Several novel suggestions for the next show were left over for consideration. Other minor items and the usual votes of thanks terminated a pleasant evening.—T. H. TIFFEN, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

A meeting was held in Lockhart's Cafe, Claytonstreet, Newcastle, on August 5th. There was a very fair attendance. Mr. Farrar took the chair in the absence of Mr. Currah. A letter was read from Mr. Taylor, secretary of Gateshead Society, intimating that his society had added two classes to the Crest section at their forthcoming show for novices—one for Crests and one for Crest-breds. So it is to be hoped novices from all parts will show how they appreciate the provision of such classes by sending a humping entry. A letter was read from Mr. Goulden asking to be allowed to give a club medal at the club show. The request was readily granted. The society have also decided to give a silver medal to novices at their club show. Mr. Goulden's medal will he given for the best Crest, and the club medal for the best Crest-bred, bred and exhibited hy a novice member of the club. It was decided that a member of the club who commenced the season as a novice, would remain a novice, so far as competing for club specials was concerned, until the end of the season. Mr. Crawhall tendered his resignation as a protest against the severity of the sentence passed upon him by the committee of District No. 1 of C.B.U. for his exhibiting birds at an unlicensed show. The members were indignant, and thought that the committee had dealt very harshly with Mr. Crawhall, and instructed that the secretary of the C.B.U. be written to and requested to have the case reconsidered as the sentence was far too severe. It was also decided not to accept Mr. Crawhall's resignatiou, as the club could not afford to lose such a valuable member. Mr. Robson gave his report of the C.B.U. meeting. This terminated a most pleasant and enjoyable meeting.—J. G. HUTCHINSON, Hon. Sec.

MACCLESFIELD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Lecture on Colour Feeding.

A quiet and enjoyable evening was spent on July 30th in the Daybrook-street Schoolroom, where a goodly number of members met to listen to the reading of a paper by Mr. Broadhead, an enthusiastic member of the society. Mr. Chas. Oliver presided, and after the usual business called upon Mr. Broadhead to read his paper on "Colour Feeding." Mr. Broadhead said: The paper I am about to read is simply a straight and plain talk, and in writing it out I have withheld no secrets. I am giving you my idea of colour-feeding—how I feed my birds, and how I prepare my food for them during the moulting season. As you already know, this is a very critical and tryiug period of a Canary's life, and a time when more attention is required. The greater care and patience you exercise the better results you may expect. I often put my young birds on colour food when they are about seven weeks old—when they require a more nourishing and substantial food, the strain upon them being at that time very trying. Therefore extra food is much needed. I give them in their drinking water on alternate days a few drops of the best sherry wine, and also tincture of gentian, once a week, adding a piece of sulphate of iron about the size of a split pea. If I notice that any of my birds have a difficulty to start moulting, twice a week I give flowers of sulphur in their egg-food, and in their drinking water a few drops of essence of Penny Royal. As to mixing my colour food, I just simply take out of the same tin some of that I serve to my customers—the Royal Red Feed—and a little hot pepper, mixing these with egg-food and adding a little sugar to sweeten it. That is all I use as regards food. I should like to say that in colour-feeding I never take the seed-box away. So that it is left to the good fortune of the birds. But I am strongly of opinion that to maintain a nice colour you must breed for colour. That is, you must have plenty of dark blood—birds of rich quality of feather, as some birds will never show colour no matter how much feed they eat. I must say I have been very successful in exhibiting for colour. On one occasion, about five years ago, at Pendleton and Salford, I was second for Mr. Sandiford's cup for best fed birds. Again, I won a cash prize at Glossop, and finally at our own show I gained the medal for hottest fed bird. I will conclude, thanking you for your kind attention, and hoping you will all be successful in moulting and feeding real good toppers. I also wish the best success and continued prosperity to our society and its members, and hope they will always work well together. At the conclusion of the paper numerous questions were asked, which Mr. Broadhead answered very satisfactorily. At the close of the meeting the chairman thanked Mr. Broadhead for his able and interesting paper, which had, he said, given us food for thought. A vote of thanks was passed to the chairman and to the lecturer, which brought a most interesting evening to a close.—H. WALLWORTH, Assistant Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

A meeting was held in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle, on August 5th, to further consider patronage, as we had two specials offered after our previous meeting to allot patronage. It was decided to give Dr. O'Neal's special in accordance with the donor's wish, viz., for most points gained over the six patronage shows by a member who, previous to the coming show season, has not won more than three first in Yorkshire classes, novice or open. The cup presented by Mr. J. Sandiford, of Preston, it was decided to give at Gateshead, for best young bird other than the Challenge Cup winner, the winner to have been fed on Sandiford's Royal Red Feed. In the event of the two cups being won by birds belonging to the same owner, Sandiford's cup will be given to the reserve bird.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Hon. Sec.

MANNINGHAM C.B.A. v. BRADFORD CITY O.S.

A cricket match took place on August 11th, on the Clock House Estate, between Manningham C.B.A. and Bradford City O.S. The weather was favourable, but owing to its being holiday week very few members of either club turned up, so we had to play ten men aside. The umpires were Messrs. Hill and Halliday. City of Bradford won the toss and batted first. The clubs have met on three occasions, City having won on two of them. I wonder where Mr. J. C—— was, not to have been there to see that nine hit? Oh, that tree! Scores:—CITY OF BRADFORD: Holmes 4, A. Lee 7, S. Horsfield 0, Stansfield 3, J. Horsfield 10, Morement 0, Hellewell 3, Fawcett 0, Broscombe 0, F. Rhodes 0; extras 4; total, 31. MANNINGHAM C.B.A.: Huddleston 2, Armstrong 7, T. Smith 17, H. Grange 2; extras, 6; total, 34.—F. WESTERN, Hon. Sec. Manningham C.B.A.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

The following are the arrangements made for the various competitions for the coming season:—

Bolton, Oct. 16th and 17th.—Judge, Mr. Roe.

Accrington, Oct. 23 and 24.—Messrs. Davis and Battye.

Manchester, Oct. 30th and 31st.—Judge, Mr. T. Trengove.

Liverpool, Nov. 6th and 7th.—Judge, Mr. W. Vardy.

The International Contest, England versus Scotland, will be held at Glasgow, on Nov. 13th and 14th. The contest with the Southern N.P. Club is arranged to take pace on their ground, date and judge not yet decided on.

Will the secetaries of the twenty odd societies who have applied for our support and failed to get same kindly note this, that none of the above societies got anything last year, and doubtless they will have to stand down next year, for some of those who are disappointed (if they will apply again next year). The committee would like to extend their patronage, but funds will not allow them.

The following are the prizes offered for competition: Accrington (Club Show), the N.P.C. Challenge Cup, Gold Medal for the best Norwich, 5s. for best first bird, 5s. for best second, 5s. for best third, 5s. for best fourth, 5s. for best sixth in the Champion Section. The Amateurs will compete in classes provided for them, for a Gold Medal for the Best Bird, six money prizes of 5s. each (the same as in the Chnmpion Section), total £3 in cash. At each of the other four shows the club will give 5s. for most points, open to both sections, but any member winning a first prize at that show to be debarred. The Challenge Cup will he competed for at all the five shows, on the same conditions as last year, viz., not more than four birds to compete from the same owner, and which must be marked with the word "Cup" on entry form. The winner and the runner-up are each to receive a Gold Medal each year. The Amateurs will compete for an electro teapot, first prize, an electro coffee-pot, second prize, electro cream jug, third prize, for first, second and third most points gained during the year at shows where the cup is being competed for. All those wishing to become members are requested to send on their application, along with 2s. 6d. for the annual subscription to me at once; and those members who have not paid for this year are reminded that it is overdue, and must be paid before competing for club specials. If forwarded at once it will save my time and expense to the club.—J. RAYNES, Hon. Sec., 9, Richmond Road, Chorlton-cum-Hardy.

SINGING CONTESTS.

NEWTOWN (Leeds.)

Annual Linnet contest held, when 16 birds sang for three good prizes. Result.—1 and 3, Chippendale, 2, Soloman. Judges, Messrs. Towers, Allan, Jackson.—W. DEAN, Secretary.

LEEDS.

Bank Holiday contest held at King's Head, Shannon Street, August 3rd, when some very good singing was heard. Forty-two birds faced the judges, Messrs. Summers and Cooper. 1, Hardcastle; 2 and 3, Stead. Also on August 3th, when 20 birds sang 1, 3, 4, Stead; 2, Robinson. Judges, Messrs. Cooper and Naylor.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

All prize money won at our young stock show on July 25th has been paid, writes Mr. A. Bowes, sec. of the Crook Original C.B.R. and T.S.

Will show secretaries and others please note that I have removed, writes Geo. Osborne (Wednesfield), to 537, Dudley Road, Wolverhampton.

The proposed Lancashire and Lizard F.A. meeting at Glossop, on August 16th, is postponed, owing to holidays, writes Mr. John Rukin, the hon. sec.

Is the Hoopoe a British bird? writes Mr. J. H. Verrall (Portslade). I should say, yes. I have seen one flying in Sussex and calling "Hoop-oop." Very many years ago an uncle of mine shot one.

We are informed by Mr. J. C. Heaton, the hon. sec. of the Crewe and Dis. O.S., that Mr. W. Bentley, a hard working official of the Bury C.B.S., having taken up residence at Crewe, has thrown in his lot with the Crewe and Dis. O.S.

When buying pepper, don't be persuaded that any other pepper (probably giving much more profit to the dealer offering it), is just as good as Ramsden's. It isn't. Insist on having Ramsden's, the acknowledged standard of perfection. (ADVT.)

At the 33rd annual Flower Show held at Twerton on August 3rd, there were two classes provided for cage birds—one for Canaries, and one of cages of four Canaries. Messrs. H. G. Pitman, S. Day, H. James, won the first, second and third prizes in each class.

A little bird whispers that during last Saturday's cricket match between the Birmingham C.B.A. and Bradford City O.S., one of the batsmen smote the ball so mightily that nine runs accrued from the hit. Both ball and the fielder, rumour has it, were "up a tree."

For the benefit of those who have overlooked us, writes Mr. B. M. Clark (Foxhills, Radstock), sec. of the Radstock and Dis. H. and F.A., kindly state that I will take entries for our show to be held on August 19th up to first post, August 17th. Mr. W. G. Bull judges cage birds.

We have secured the services of the following gentlemen as judges at our annual show, writes Mr. A. Murdoch, sec. of the Airdrie and Coatbridge O.S. (amalgamated): for Scotch Fancies, Messrs. McDougal (Larbert), and J. Hunter (Wishaw), and for Norwich, Mr. Adamson (Kilmarnock).

Our report of the small British class in the recent Cambridge Show should have read:—1st, Fowell, very smart specimen of the Snow Bunting. Our printers unfortunately turned the word smart into "small." This Snow Bunting is, as a matter of fact, an exceptionally large bird, and a winner of several prizes.

Samples of the hemp lines and twine mesh used in the manufacture of the nets he sells, are sent us by Mr. W. Gore, of 131 Gooch Street, Birmingham. They are of the very best quality, and nets made of such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users, and stand a great amount of wear and tear.

We have received from Mr. W. Cornwall, 707, Lincoln Road, Peterboro', a sample spring-net trap, such as he is advertising in our columns. It is very well and strongly made, acts instantly, and is of most convenient size and of the latest pattern. This self-acting trap should prove just the thing for those in need of such an article.

I have to-day, writes Mr. C. E. Silk (Emsworth), had a letter from New York, inviting me to go over and judge their forthcoming show in December. They offer to pay all travelling expenses and give me a fee, also entertainment by the club while in New York. But I must decline, as it means spending Christmas on the voyage, and that is our busiest time here in my trade.

Dr. Forbes, director of the Liverpool City Museum, has just opened at Waterloo a new museum which forms a charming addition to the library buildings, the gift of Mr. Andrew Carnegie. Within the museum is housed a fine and comprehensive collection of British birds, the gift of Colonel Echalaz. The birds are represented in their natural surroundings, and the effect is interesting, instructive, and picturesque.

We were pleased, write Messrs. Shaw Bros. (Allerton Road, Bradford), to see you favoured us with a picture of our Clear Yellow Yorkshire on the front page of CAGE BIRDS last week. He was rather a late-hatched youngster last year, and did not get into show form until late on in the season, so that we only had the chance of exhibiting him on three occasions. The first time was at Brighouse, where he got v.h.c. in a very strong class. He improved and filled up a bit, and we sent him to St. Horton, where he was awarded third prize. We then decided to keep him at home until the Palace show, as we had shown there the year before for the first time and done very well, so we thought we would have another try. We sent three birds and got first and special for best bird in the eight novice classes with the aforementioned Clear Yellow; also, we got second in unevenly marked Buffs, not so very bad, I think, out of three birds. I may say that the Yellow has turned out a very good stock bird, as we have bred some very promising youngsters from him, paired to a Buff hen we exhibited in the novice section last winter. I think he will be better this coming season after a good moult. We wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success, which it well deserves.

Kindly notify that in consequence of the Larkhall show being held on August 20th, writes Mr. H. Turtle, hon. sec. of the Bath and Dis. F.A., there will be no meeting of this Association on that date.

Whilst wandering through some fields near here, writes Mr. J. K. Bagshaw (Matlock), I saw what I thought to be a Hawk chasing a small bird; but as I got nearer, I found it to be a Cuckoo, which was being fed by a Grey Wagtail.

We gather from the "Yarmouth Mercury" that the Perseverance Bird Breeding Society held a washing exhibition of birds at their club-house, Market-place, on August 5th, when Mr. H. E. Tringham (London), of Yorkshire fame, put several dirty birds through the wash, which showed the members present the vast difference between dirty ones and clean ones for the show bench.

A reliable informant states that he recently saw a specimen of that rare and beautiful bird, the Hoopoe feeding near some cows in the neighbourhood of Parkstone (near Bournemouth), and that he also saw one near the same spot last year. This bird, which may always be recognised by its handsome crest, is an irregular summer visitant to this country, and would be seen much oftener if allowed to remain and breed, instead of being shot. It has several times been seen at Radipole, near Weymouth, and other places in Dorset, and also at Christchurch. It is an insect feeder, and therefore a friend to the farmer.

Kindly announce, write Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, the hon. secs., that the annual show of the Dulwich O.S. will be held (under the rules of the C.B.U.) on Nov. 24th and 25th, and not the date previously arranged, at the Imperial Hall, which is most easy of access, and lighted by night by electricity, and warmed by hot water pipes. The hall has been booked for three days, so that a clear day may be given to the staging and comfort of the birds. The following gentlemen will judge:—Messrs. J. Robson (Crests, Borders, etc.), G. Gardner (Norwich), W. Mundell (Yorks), and W. H. Vale (British and Foreign). In addition to the six silver bowls for open competition, Mr. W. Goodwin is presenting a perpetual trophy to the Society, a cup for best bird, the winner to have a medal also at the donor's expense. Mr. Foster also presents a dinner service for best Norwich shown by a member.

Lancashire Canary Association.

In my report published last week, I should have stated that all birds competing for L.C.A. specials must be shown in the club's standard cage.—WM. ADAMS, sec.

"Side by Side to the Better Land."

For many years, says M.A. in the "Spectator," a pair of graceful Swans have sailed on the lakes in the grounds of Meldrum House, Aberdeenshire. But the other day the male Swan, who was getting lame, and evidently feeling the infirmities of age, while sailing with his faithful mate seized hold of her neck, and held her head under the water until she died. Shortly after he himself was found dead near the same spot, with his long neck and awry feet trailing in the water.

And then She Died!

A correspondent of the "Field" writes:—The following details of a prolific Canary, for the accuracy of which I can vouch, may be of interest to your readers: In April, 1906, my gardener became the owner of a Canary, then one year old. She was mated, and immediately began to lay eggs. In eighteen months she laid ninety-one eggs, of which six were unfertile. She reared eighty-five young birds. The last brood was hatched October 21st, 1907, after which she laid twenty-nine unfertile eggs up to February 24th, 1908, on which day she died.

Rural Peace.

If one Owl shrieks on an average eight times per minute, writes "Distracted" to a daily contemporary, how many shrieks will you get from three Owls in four hours at the same rate? Answer, 5,760. This is what we are experiencing night after night, from darkness till dawn, just outside the bedroom window. The terrible noise is maddening. It is fast getting on our nerves. We cannot get rest unless we close every window tightly, which we do not wish to do during this hot weather. The Wild Birds' Protection Act was designed for a laudable purpose, no doubt, but this is one of the results. Noisy organ grinders may be removed in the daytime, but at night all the Owls in the kingdom may screech themselves hoarse and there is apparently no remedy.

Serious for Once!

A certain Army captain, on returning home from abroad, brought with him a goodly stock of souvenirs. Among them was a pair of 'Laughing Jackasses," which he entrusted to one of the sailors. Alas! The unaccustomed shipboard life did not agree with the birds, and, in spite of all Jack Tar's care, they pined and finally died. When he discovered the catastrophe, the sailor was in despair.

"I daren't tell the captain!"

"Don't shirk it, mate," said his pal. "Break it to him gently, and you'll find it'll be all right."

The advice seemed sound, and so he sought the gallant captain.

"'Scuse me, sir," he said, "you know them things below—what you call Larfin' Jackasses? Well, sir, they ain't got nuffin to larf at this morning."

An Unfounded Rumour.

It is not true that the Plumage Prohibition Bill now before Parliament prohibits birds from wearing their own feathers.

Marriage Bells at Newcastle.

Fanciers of the Tyneside will be interested to hear of the marriage of Mr. W. J. Shepherd, junior partner in the firm of Shepherd and Son, and son of Mr. James Shepherd, the first chairman of Newcastle C.B.S., to Miss Ethel Long, also of Newcastle. We wish the happy pair long life and prosperity.

N.B.B. and M.C.

At the last meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club, a large number of applications for patronage came before the committee, and as the finances of the club are now in such a satisfactory condition, they were able to grant medals to all the shows applying for them, and complying with the conditions. In all, five gold, seventeen silver, and eleven bronze medals (besides several given privately) were put out in various parts of the country for competition amongst the club members. Fanciers desirous of joining the N.B.B. and M.C. should send their names to the secretaries, Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, 2, Broad Street Station, London, E.C.

The Order of the Bath.

The Order of the Bath is just as much a matter of vital importance to the cage-bird fancier as it is to favoured persons moving in the upper circles of society. But there is this difference: on the one hand, it is an honour conferred; on the other hand, it is a means whereby honours may be attained. That a fancier's birds cannot hope to win the highest honours of the exhibition world until they have received the "order of the bath" is an indisputable truth—a truth that cannot be too forcibly driven home into the minds of bird-keepers. The exhibition side is one of the pleasantest sides of the hobby, but those who would enter upon it must be keenly alive to take advantage of every point which can possibly tell in their favour. Probably the most important point is the proper staging of the birds. Years ago information on this point could hardly be obtained for love or money But CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL has altered all that. For sixpence, sent along to the Manager of CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., you will receive by return of post a copy of the ANNUAL, in which will be found the finest illustrated article ever published on the art of washing and preparing birds for exhibition. It will enable you to acquire that invaluable art, the only other thing necessary being a little practice. The illustrations make it all clear. Send that sixpenny postal order off at once, then you will be in readiness for the shows, and their valuable prizes.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

I am a novice, and this is my first season's breeding experience. I have six cock Canaries and seven hens. I have had 29 young, and all of them are doing for themselves. Eleven, which are still in the nest, are doing well. You will agree this is not bad for a start. All my knowledge was obtained from CAGE BIRDS.—F. BAYLEY (Birkenhead).

Matlock and District.

We have not had a very successful season. One breeder had about 13 nests with the nett result of one young one. Another had eleven nests and only one young, and another had only three young ones from 8 nests, and five Mules, Goldfinch and Canary and Siskin and Canary. One breeder has bred 3 Hybrids, which are doing well. I have had a successful season. I have lost two hens, they being egg-bound in May, but have done well since, as I have reared 22 out of 24 young Norwich. Two of them died when only 6 weeks old. My first nest contained 7 eggs, of which 6 hatched out, 5 of the young being reared, which I think is not very bad. And I have only 3 hens and 2 cocks to breed with. All the young are clear yellow and buff. Another breeder for his first year has had 19 young from 7 hens and 5 cocks, Norwich only; but has lost his 3 last nests of young through the hen sweating them. I recommended him to take CAGE BIRDS in, from which he would get to know how to manage them.—G. K. SHAW, (Matlock).

Airdrie & Coatbridge O.S. (Amalgamated).

The breeding results in this district have been very poor, a number of the members having little or nothing to show for their season's breeding. The following is a list of members' results:—Scotch Fancies, J. Wynes, 25; P. McIver, 20; J. Main, 6; J. Fairley, 8; R. Murdock, 8; Wm. Hutchinson, 6; J. Hamilton, 5; J. Prentice, 5; Wm. Hailstons, 5; A. Russell, 4; R. Brag, 3; Wm. Frame, 3; J. Treddon, 3; J. Young, 3; T. Smith, 2; A. Hamilton, 2; R. Douglas, and A. Harper, one each. Norwich, Wm. Kennedy, 28; R. Boag, 18; D. Clark, 15; F. McTyre, 5; J. Fairley, 9; D. McLauchlan, 4; Wm. Frame, 4; Wm. Simpson, 12; R. Downie, 5; J. Wilson, 8; J. Kirkwood, 3, and a few others that I have not seen—in all over 100 Norwich. Mr. J. Fairley has bred 12 Belgian Canaries.—A. MURDOCH, secretary.

IN THE COURTS.

NIGHTINGALES & A HEAVY FINE.

At Thrapston (Northants) Divisional Petty Sessions, held on August 4, William Aitkin, shoe operative, Raunds, was ordered to pay an inclusive fine of 46s. for disobeying a magistrate's order to give up possession of four Nightingales. The defendant stated that he had handed over three birds. The other one he gave away before proceedings were taken against him.

CURIOUS CASE FROM SCOTLAND.

At Falkirk Sheriff Court on August 3, Alexander Anderson, miner, Crosscroes, Muiravonside, was charged with having, on July 6, had in his control and possession a Teal recently killed, contrary to the Wild Birds' Protection Act. It was stated that accused's brother had found the Teal, which had evidently been shot just previously on a moor in the neighbourhood, and he took it to his brother (the accused), and asked him to take it to Falkirk to get it stuffed.

An agent on behalf of the accused argued that the intention of the Legislature in the Act was not to strike at persons who might have found a bird in this manner or acted as a messenger of another party, as accused did in this case but at those who destroyed birds during the close season.—Sheriff Moffatt said that according to the terms of the section there was no doubt that the accused had in his control and possession the Teal, and he (the Sheriff) was not there to interpret the intentions of the Legislature, but to carry out the statute. He imposed a fine of 2s. 6d.

The Nestling Cuckoo.

The young of Hawks and Falcons are fierce at almost any age. This we naturally expect from birds which are to live by the killing of smaller birds and animals; but one can hardly understand this ferocity in a bird of insectivorous habits, such as the Cuckoo. These young birds are regular fiends while in the nest; they appear to be the embodiment of bad temper. If you only look at one he will swell with passion, and a finger placed near him will cause him to rise in the nest and "go for it" with all the power he possesses. As nestlings they are most greedy and voracious, and are regular tyrants to their foster parents. A pair of birds that have succeeded in rearing a young Cuckoo need rest for the remainder of the season.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE. Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., A.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Canary having Fits.

W.M.—I fear you will not be able to do much for the relief of this bird. The chance of a cure being effected in such cases is so remote, that it is almost the kindest thing to chloroform them at once. However, if you wish to treat it, proceed as follows:—First of all, see that the cage is quite free from red-mites, and do not let the bird be fully exposed to the sun. Instead of your present diet, which is not very good, give, as a staple, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part of summer rape; give a spray of some green food daily, and three times a week a small piece of bread dipped in milk, with two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw-seed. Keep the bird supplied regularly with grittty sand, and see that the bowels are always freely moving—if the daily supply of green food is not sufficient to accomplish this, give a few grains of Epsom salts occasionally. For three or four days after the bird has had a fit, give it as much bromide of potassium as will cover a threepenny piece in an ounce of drinking water, and at other times give twelve drops of chemical food in the water every second day.

Is it Judicious?

X.Y.—The wisdom or otherwise of pulling out the tails and flights of young Canaries during the moult is very largely a matter for each individual fancier to decide for himself. Personally, considering all aspects of the question, I should certainly say that, barring exceptional cases, it is a trifle injudicious, and is not exceptionally elevating from a moral or humane standpoint. If it has to be done, in consequence of one's deciding in that direction, the best time to do it is when the birds are getting about half-way through the moult, as at this time the feathers will not be so tightly held in their socket as they are at an earlier stage, and will draw out more easily. I should also prefer to draw half a dozen or so—say, two from each wing, and the tail, every second day—rather than remove a tail or wing all at once. Most certainly tailing and flighting the birds render them ineligible for the "unflighted" classes at shows.

For Future Guidance.

W. Griffin.—If you had given details of your method of feeding and treatment, instead of saying you feed on the usual diet for breeding, which may mean many things, I could have given you a few general rules, for future guidance, with much greater confidence than is possible in the absence of such particulars. The cause of death of your hens was undoubtedly egg-binding, and as it seems to have occurred in a severe form, and to have been rather general, there can be no room for doubt that something in your dietary, or management, was chiefly responsible for it. What green food did you use? I almost suspect it was dandelion, as, given a little weakness in your hens, arising from injudicious management, this herb I know will invariably produce similar troubles to those you experienced. For future work I would not advise you to keep on these hens. They would, in proper hands, probably breed successfully, but might prove disappointing again with you, so that it would be much better to discard them at once, and replace them with strong, healthy, medium-sized birds. Keep them on a plain, wholesome diet throughout the winter, consisting principally of good, sound Canary seed, with a pinch of rape two or three times a week, a teaspoonful of hemp each, twice a week, and once or twice a small teaspoonful of egg food or a scrap of bread soaked in milk as a substitute. Towards the end of winter, begin to give each hen a pinch of inga twice each week, and continue this right up to the time the first nest of eggs is laid. Give a small piece of green food three or four times a week as long as the weather keeps mild, and no frost is about; when this is the case, substitute a piece of sweet fruit of some kind, or a bit of raw carrot until you can again get suitable green food in the spring. Keep them supplied with gritty sand, and give as much space for exercise as possible all through the winter. Finally, do not make up too early next spring. The end of March or the beginning of April is quite early enough. In a general way this should prevent a recurrence of your troubles. If you meet with any special difficulty, or desire information on any particular point, do not hesitate to write us. Shall always be pleased to solve any difficulty for you.

Cause of Death.

J. K. B.—It is not an easy task to guess the cause of death of your young birds from your description of certain post-mortem appearances. A few of the symptoms shown prior to death would have been of much more use. But to hazard a guess, I should imagine that a severe form of constipation—practically stoppage of the bowels—was the predisposing cause. A drop of lukewarm olive oil inserted in the vent with the tip of a bird's wing, or tail feather night and morning until relief was obtained, a drop of a mixture of equal parts syrup of buckthorn and glycerine given in the beak night and morning, and a saline aperient such as Epsom salts in the drinking water for a few days afterwards, would doubtless have saved the birds' lives. At the same time, you should have withheld the hemp and rape seed for a time and given instead a pinch of either inga, linseed, or gold of pleasure, every second day, and a spray of green food on the alternate days. This is the treatment you should adopt if any other bird becomes similarly affected.

All in a Heap.

Park.—Your bird is evidently only feeling the effect of moulting, which is a little more strain on its resources than when it was younger, and consequently had plenty of vitality, and to spare. This is but the natural effect of advancing years with birds, as with every other class of living creatures. Of course your bird cannot be called old for years yet to come, but still there are many who from unskilled management have seen the best of their days after the third moult is over. Your feeding is not of the best. As a staple diet give a mixture of two parts Canary to one part rape, and add just a sprinkling of gold of pleasure. Now and again, as a special treat, give a few grains of hemp, teazle, thistle, or linseed, not altogether, but ringing the changes with these for variety. Every day give a small spray of green food, and during the moult, half a teaspoonful of egg food, or its equivalent in bread and milk every second day. Keep it fairly warm until the moult over, and for a fortnight add twenty drops of Chemical Food to the drinking water every second day, and on alternate days during the first week give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and three of tincture of gentian.

Better and Worse.

A Beginner, Salop.—I have not the least doubt but that the birds are kept in an unsuitable place—one in which they are exposed either to draughts or damp. Until these causes are removed you will not be able to do much for the birds, and from now onwards until next spring you must expect to find them go rapidly from bad to worse. Therefore, you should lose no time in remedying these defects. What you most of all want is to see that your room is perfectly free from damp either in the walls or floor, and that it is not subject to cutting draughts from doors or windows. If only draughts are present, then you may be able to so arrange the cages that the birds will not feel the effects of them, or, failing this, arrange a set of curtains to nullify them. There is no other rational course open to you save removing the birds altogether to a more suitable room. Does the room abut on some building which causes it to be subject to great fluctuations of heat? If so, that would help to bring about the condition of your birds, and would also require to be removed before any cure could be effected. After paying proper attention to these points, feed the birds as frequently advised here and give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and three of oil of eucalyptus in each ounce of drinking water every second day for a fortnight. Shake the mixture thoroughly before placing it on the cages. On the alternate days give twenty drops of chemical food in the water.

Bowels Getting Blocked.

Aberdour.—No, I do not advise beginning to use medicines in any shape or form at such an early age. For the trouble you experience I never found a proper supply of green-food fail to prove an efficient remedy. Just about the age when you say it occurs you should be commencing to give a little green-food each day, and if there appears any tendency to constipation in the young you should give groundsel. If this is not a sufficient remedy add a little young succulent chickweed, or a piece of crisp young lettuce leaf. But, as a rule, a spray of groundsel daily for each pair is all that is required. Try this next season, and if it fails write us at once and we will be pleased to help you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

In Variety.

F. Leng.—1. The weed you enclose is not shepherd's-purse. The seed-pods of the latter plant are heart-shaped, and grow up the stem (not in a cluster). 2. The usual grit given British Finches will suit Foreign Finches and Budgerigars. If you keep this grit on their cage bottoms, Blackbird will find amongst it suitable particles to pick—you are quite right in assuming they take up grit occasionally, and Thrushes as well. A top dressing of the coarser grit sold for Parrots (Parrot grit) will make the sand suitable for Magpies, Jays, etc. Personally, I put my own bird grit through a sieve, using the fine sandy grit obtained by this method for the cages of my Softbills, and the bigger gritty particles that remain in the sieve for my Hardbills, large Softbills, Parrot, etc. 3. Grissel is a trade name for dried meat, and the finest grade grissel is practically the same thing as meat meal. You should try powdered silkworm pupæ if you have not already done so. All my own birds, large and small, eat it readily, seem to like it, and they certainly thrive. Pea-meal I have but seldom used, though I often give my bigger Softbills a little "German paste" (mixed among their other soft-food) when I can get it good, and this is largely composed of pea meal. In air-tight glass jars these food-stuffs will keep good a long time.

About a Linnet.

Micky, Castleford.—I quite understand your trouble now—though "trouble" is hardly the word to use, for your Linnet is merely moulting, which is a natural thing to do, and need not necessarily cause you alarm. As a matter of fact, the early start he has made is a most excellent sign, a good portent of a quick conclusion, and an early return to song. It is the birds which commence to moult very late, and drag on right into the wintry weather, that give their owners an anxious time of it. A small teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food (obtainable cheaply from any good chemist) stirred into about two tablespoonfuls of drinking water every second day (plain water in between) would no doubt help the bird along. Use either a glass or pot vessel to give it in. I don't quite like your seed mixture. Niger is not a good thing to give regularly. You should use the following during the moult:—Canary three parts, teazle two parts, German and English rape one part each, hemp one part, and linseed half a part, increasing the latter to one part towards the conclusion of the moult. Millet seed is no good for Linnets, in my experience. You should also mix maw and niger seeds in equal parts, and give a small teaspoonful of this mixture on the days you are not giving the chemical food. See also reply to "H. H. Wood."

Blackcap or Nightingale?

R.L.—Your question is very difficult to answer, because everything depends on the dispositiou of the two birds. Some caged Blackcaps are very much better songsters than some caged Nightingales, and, on the other hand, some 'Gales are infinitely superior vocalists to any Blackcaps that ever paced perches. If your Nightingale turns out a free singer of its natural notes, then you will want no better "daytime songster," as you phrase it, even assuming you could get such. I will say this, however, that if you are more or less a beginner in the keeping of these species, you will find the Blackcap the best subject to start with. Compared with the 'Gale, it invariably takes more kindly to captivity, is not so susceptible to cold, and is easier to cater for, being very partial to ripe fruit, while it sings freely, and its song is "a thing of beauty and a joy for ever." Many Nightingales (adult-caught birds) are disappointments—hard to get on food, and more or less "sulky" afterwards. A "kind" bird, however, when well-fed and treated makes a thoroughly delightful pet. And now you will have to please yourself.

Young Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

L.C.B.—Very pleased to hear of your success; especially so seeing that you followed my advice. To rear three is not at all bad for one season's work. You were unlucky in having five fertile eggs fail to hatch properly, though this is a difficulty most breeders (all, probably) run up against. The hen Bullie is evidently a good 'un, and you should take care of her. You should be careful not to wean the young Hybrids off soft-food too suddenly. A feed of Osborne biscuit soaked in new milk (or prepared condensed milk) is a fine thing to give. But be careful it is always fresh and sweet; give it in a glass or earthenware dish, and cleanse the latter every time a new supply is offered. At first offer Canary seed (the finest quality only), very lightly cracked, as much as they like to eat, with a fair supply of maw seed and cracked hemp seed. All cracked seed, remember, must be freshly prepared every day. In a day or two, as the youngsters get on, give the Canary seed whole, and add a little teazle and genuine summer (sweet) rape seeds. A few crushed sunflower seeds, and crushed groats can also be offered. Stop crushing the hemp as soon as the young Hybrids are old enough to crack it, and don't give too much of it; the same remarks apply to the groats if used. It is as well to let their stock mixture be a fairly plain one, giving the oily, stimulating seeds as "tit-bits." The best possible green-foods are seeding chickweed and shepherd's-purse, giving the ripe heads, and stripping off big, old coarse leaves. These should be freely given. Thistle heads and seeding groundsel tops are also good; while a little young tender lettuce and watercress can be given if the other things are not easily obtainable. On such a dietary the youngsters should thrive apace. When first separated from their parents, do not allow them to "burst" themselves with water. Give this very sparingly, and it is well to just colour it by the addition of a little Parrish's Chemical Food. The milk-sop provides sufficient moisture.

Insects; Also Birds.

Boy.—I do not know exactly what the "animals" are that you sent me, but I have several times found them in meal, and promptly given them to my birds to devour. They are quite harmless to the birds, but I suppose their presence shows that the meal has been prepared some time—in other words, is not quite fresh. Fine puppy meal makes an excellent substitute for game meal in the recipe for Thrush, Lark, etc., food, which I recommend for use. The sample you send looks to be of excellent quality. The behaviour of your two Larks proves the truth of what I so often say about the difference in the disposition of individuals of the same species; one will make a pleasing, tame pet, another proves quite intractable, although kept under similar conditions. As your "shy" bird sings a little at times, I certainly think him worth keeping. If you hang his cage lower down while he is undergoing the moult, he may possibly get very much steadier. You should mix finely-minced hard-boiled egg into their stock food frequently while the moult is in progress.

Sexing a Linnet.

J.W.H.—It would have been much easier to answer your question if you had stated whether the Linnet was a young or an adult bird, and whether house moulted or in field plumage. I can tell you, however, that Linnets are not easy birds for inexperienced bird-lovers to sex, unless they are old birds, and the season is the breeding season, when the males have red breasts (often red polls, too), whereas the females have no red on the breast. In the autumn and winter (just after the moult) both sexes are plain brown (or brownish grey), but whereas the cock is a warm, nutty-brown, especially on the backs and shoulders of the wings, the hen is very grey (or ash coloured) by comparison, and is usually much more heavily streaked with dark markings on the breast, and has not the same amount of white edging to the wing and tail feathers as the cock bird, the white in the flights of the latter going right back to the quill (shaft) in the outer feathers. If you ruffle the breast feathers of the cock, too, you will notice a quarter-moon shaped shading on them (it is very difficult to describe in words), and oft-times a tinge of crimson is to be seen there. A young male, be it noted, is never so deep a brown as a two-year-old male, and a three-year-old male beats both. Young Linnets (in their nest feathers) are too difficult for the beginner to sex, I am afraid. If I had an adult bird, by the way, in good health, and it neither sang nor chirped, I should put it down as a hen. House-moulted hens, as a matter of fact, often sing quite prettily. A male Linnet, if in good health and steady, could not keep from singing. They are one of the freest songsters and nicest pets I know.

Brevities.

Loss of Feathers (Selby).—I don't think you need worry about this, for the feathers will almost certainly be reproduced at the moult, which should now be close at hand. Every second day for a fortnight stir into its soft food as much flowers of sulphur (from the chemist) as will lie on a shilling. Let the young Thrush bathe daily during hot weather; twice a day if it chooses.

Loss of Feathers (G.S.).—Note reply to "Selby" this week. If, however, the bare patches are the result of parasites under the skin, then you will doubtless have to cage the Finches up out of the aviary, and gently anoint the affected parts daily with a little sulphur ointment, or boracic ointment, obtainable from a chemist. Cease the treatment as soon as new quills can be felt coming.

Nightingale Cage (J.H.).—The cage you sketch might house a Nightingale fairly comfortably, though not one I should choose personally for this purpose. The "seed-drawer" is obviously useless. You would require to put food and water inside, in glass or earthenware vessels. A proper Nightingale stock cage has glass vessels which swing in from openings cut in bottom rail of cage. Size of cage, 20 to 24 in. long by 14 high by 11 wide; two perches, resting on bottom rail. See the "British Bird Manual," just published.

Outdoor Aviary (W. H. Wheatley).—Yes; it is always best to have the floor raised from the ground in a place such as you sketch, as it keeps the aviary much drier and obviates rotting of the floor-boards. You could safely winter any of the Finch family in it (I include Buntings, of course), and Canaries, if cold-room bred, and sound of constitution, would take no harm. I am assuming the place to be thoroughly wind and wet-proof. If keeping many birds in it, you would do best by sticking solely to members of the male sex.

Stoving; also a Goldfinch (Enquirer).—If fumes from the room which is to be treated with sulphur and copperas enter your bird-room in appreciable quantity, the result will undoubtedly be serious for the inmates. I should hardly think it likely to happen, though. If there is a window looking on to the staircase, keep this wide open. Your Goldfinch has evidently got into a sad condition, and I feel very doubtful about its recovery. For one day stir a small teaspoonful of citrate of magnesia into its drinking water. Afterwards mix four or five drops of chlorodyne into a small teaspoonful of brandy, and stir this into the water, fresh daily, for five or six days. Quantity of water, a good two tablespoonfuls.

What Weed? (A.P.).—The weed you send is not shepherd's-purse (it has not heart-shaped seed-pods), but "mouse-ear," a kind of chickweed. This is very plentiful now, and the ripe seeds are excellent for both British seed-eaters and Canaries.

Silkworm Pupæ (Oriole).—The sample sent appears to be the ordinary silkworm pupæ, in an unground state. This requires to be very finely powdered before being added to stock insectivorous foods. Personally, I buy it ready reduced to powder; it smells less offensively, and is a saving of trouble. My own birds take to it readily, and the smallest and most delicate get it—Gold Crests, "Jenny" Wrens, Creepers, Cliff-chaffs, etc.

Mealworm Breeding (A. Hume).—I am not acquainted with any method other than that frequently described by me, viz., keeping the mealworms and mealworm beetles in bran or coarse meals in large flat tins (or bins) in a place wherein the temperature consistently stands at a high figure—a bakehouse, for instance. Warmth is the great essential. The "bottoms" of the tins must occasionally be removed, and put through a fine sieve, and

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Senegal and Grey Parrots.

P.R.E.—Yes, if the aviary is large, that is, allowing plenty of space for birds of this size to get out of one another's way, and also for them to have sufficient nesting logs, a reasonable distance apart. I do not know of any instance of their having bred in this country. I am of the opinion you would stand a better chance if you were to give them, say, a 6-feet square enclosure to themselves. If your birds are young, it is quite possible it may be a couple of years before they nest, as Parrots mature slowly. There is so much individualism with Parrots, that you must keep them under close observation till their demeanour has been ascertained, for it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast line, one pair being quite suitable and another pair of the same species just the reverse. If you will kindly inform me how you have been treating your grey Parrot, I can tell you where you have gone wrong; I strongly suspect your diet is at fault somewhere. In the meantime, put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food.

Blue-Fronted Amazon.

Rosalie.—Stop giving the bread and milk, and do not give any table scraps, slops or any kind of animal food. Diet: Seed mixture (Canary, oats, wheat, dari, hemp, maize, and sunflower seed), ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, little madeira or sponge cake and green-food (a leaf of tender lettuce is as good as anything). Keep a piece of cuttlefish in its cage, and it should do well. It will be better to give your bird also, a little boiled maize twice a week; but this must only be allowed to remain in cage one day, as it soon turns sour, and the utensil containing it should be scalded out for each occasion. Give the bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water for one day, and repeat same in a few days' time. When not giving the magnesia, make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this for some weeks. If you diet and treat as above, there should soon be an improvement in the bird's condition. The first moult in this country is often a protracted one. Let it have its bath as usual.

Pintail Nonpariel with Disease.

"Thank You."—I have had the Nonpariel Bunting affected in similar fashion, but as I left him at large in an outdoor aviary, and did nothing more than put magnesia in the water, he ultimately became worse; at last a miserable object. Then he shuffled off. At the same time your note leaves me a little in doubt, as to whether your bird is suffering from a scaly skin disease or from actual tumorous growths. If the former, lightly anoint with clean vaseline, and give one teaspoonful of Dumeford's Magnesia in the drinking water sufficiently often to keep its bowels gently moving, but the voidings should not be allowed to become or continue watery loose. Give as much green food as it will eat, particularly grass in flower and fresh lettuce; also of such ripe fruit as it favours. Also give a little crumbled sponge cake, and a few ants' eggs if it will take such, and regularly drop on to same 10 to 12 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. In addition to Canary, white and spray millet seeds, supply rice in the husk ("Paddy" rice). If the growths are in the nature of tumours, but hard, lightly touch them with tincture of iodine, taking care that none gets into the bird's eyes. Let it have its bath as usual, and all the fresh air possible without draught. I am afraid you will lose the bird, which is the worse, but you should succeed in saving the other with ordinary luck. If they will eat mealworms let them have several daily, and also a little milk sop (this must not be allowed to become sour) if they will take it. This should be prepared by crushing a plain biscuit, adding sufficient milk, and placing over the fire or stove till it boils. If, after perusing this you can give me any further details, do so at once, and I will try and help you further. You give no particulars as to treatment.

Seasonal Plumage of Whydahs.

J.L.B.—These are very erratic during the first year in this country, where climatic changes throw them into winter plumage, or out of colour, as it is popularly termed, at most irregular intervals, and the same applies to Weavers. In my outdoor aviary they usually go into moult between December and February, and begin to come into colour (breeding plumage) by April or May. Most certainly you should be able to get one to last out for exhibition purposes, as such are seen every season; but most of these show indications of going out of colour, and frequently get penalised; therefore, I should say your present bird will duly assume full colour or the nuptial plumage next spring. If you purchase a bird in full plumage now, it will probably so last out the exhibition season—there is a doubt though with a newly-imported specimen. But the prospect is sufficiently reasonable to be worth a trial. A bird that has been moulted in this country would be the better for your purpose. It is just possible your present bird may yet grow its tail this year; if so, it will serve your purpose, as coming into colour so late it should outlast the show season. Give it two or three mealworms daily in addition to the regulation diet.

Sexual Distinctions.

O.H.M.—(1) The simplest way of sexing Java Sparrows, where you have several for comparison, is to view their beaks in profile; that of the female is narrower at the base and more pointed than that of the male. She is also of slightly smaller size Again; she has little more than a chirp, while the male has a pleasant chattering warble which is frequently uttered. Striated Finch: the plumages are similar, but the head of the female is narrower, and her beak shorter and more stubby than that of the male. Orange-cheek Waxbill: I have invariably found the orange cheek patch a little smaller in area and not so rich in colour in the female. The males have the ventral region yellowish; in some females the yellow is lacking, but I cannot say if this is constant or not, as I have possessed one or two old hens that were distinctly yellowish round the vent. Sexing these birds, except the first-named, is not easy to the untrained eye, and for the comparisons to be reliable the birds compared should be adult: there are very few experts that would care to give off-hand the sex of an odd bird. But there is nearly always an effeminate appearance about a hen bird that is soon noticed by the trained eye, so that after observing a given couple of birds for a short period, it is mostly fairly easy to tell from their demeanour whether they are a true pair or not.

Grey Parrot with Growth.

H.C.H.—It is certainly most difficult to treat a case of this kind when the bird will not let you handle it. If the growth is soft, it should be lanced when ripe, and well cleaned out. If hard it should be touched with tincture of iodine; this could be done by means of a long-handled camel hair brush. Try and induce it to suck a little boney and borax from a wooden skewer, or something similar. For one day put one teaspoonful of Dumeford's Magnesia in the drinking water—say, two tablespoonfuls—and let it have only this to drink for the day. Follow this by putting 15 grains of chlorate of potassium, daily, in the drinking water (one ounce) for the next week or ten days. If the growth is soft you had better foment it with a warm decoction of camomile flowers, using a camel hair brush as above—this, of course, would take the place of the tincture of iodine mentioned above. After the growth has disappeared put the bird on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. I am, of course, assuming that you are feeding your bird as advised weekly in this column. You must not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

What Bird is it?

H.W.—It is a Military Troupial, probably De Filippi's. It should have a roomy cage, and besides a seed diet of Canary, white millet, hemp, and a few oats, it should have about half a dozen mealworms daily, and a few ants' eggs (cocoons) given as bought. Its value, if in fair condition, should be from 20s. to 30s., according to number on the market. I should also give a leaf of lettuce and garden weeds as green food, and any beetles, earwigs, spiders, smooth caterpillars I could capture in addition to the mealworms mentioned above. My Troupials visit the soft food dish regularly, also the milk sop put in the aviary for Lorikeets.

Treating Grey Parrot.

Mrs. A. M.—Glad to hear the treatment has been effective. I should advise you to let it have Parrish's Chemical Food in its drinking water four days a week for the next month; it is an excellent tonic, and will materially help the bird. The bird should continue well if you feed and treat it correctly, which you should do by keeping strictly to the diet given in our previous reply. To be quite clear, I will repeat the almost weekly caution. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

Making an Aviary.

S.S.—(1) If you follow my advice you will not attempt any structural alterations, but will simply add an open wire flight to the shed, 3 or 4 feet wide, along one side of the shed, the side which is nearest south for preference. The only alteration in the shed is that it should have a good sized pane of glass inserted so as to light it up well, and of course a good sized opening for the birds to get in and out by, which should always be open. (2) If you are bound to carry out the proposed conversion, leave the roof as it is, otherwise the details on your rough sketch cannot be very well improved upon. (3) The wire netting should be of ½inch mesh, and see that you don't get ¾inch sold you as ½inch. (4) Yes, the Budgerigars are rather risky, but if you confine them to a single pair, and remove the young as soon as they are able to feed themselves, I do not think the risk is a large one. The others will all agree together. (5) It is not well to over-crowd, and I should advise simply the addition of a pair of Zebra Finches. (6) It is fairly safe to confine your birds to the same number as there are feet in the floor area of aviary; thus in an aviary 6ft. by 4ft. you could accommodate 24 birds not larger than a Norwich Canary, for breeding purposes only include half this number.

Some Aviary Queries.

G.W.S.—The egg you have found in the corner of your aviary on the sand is a Cuttthroat's egg, and if you put up one or two nest boxes they will most probably breed. Any kind of box that is about 6 inches square, closed all round save for an oval hole, in the front and near the top of box, say, 1 by 1½ inch will do. Fix a perch in front of same, supply long hay and grass, and leave them to themselves, and you are almost sure to get a brood of young before the year is out. You had better put up at least three of the nest boxes; this will prevent the other birds from striving for the one box. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seeds. Green food, ad lib, such as grass in flower, fresh lettuce, and non-poisonous garden and hedge-row weeds. Also give a few ants' eggs (cocoons) as purchased; scatter these on floor of aviary, especially while they are feeding young. I have found this speckes to be good feeders, and to usually rear all they hatch out. Hope you'll have luck with the birds.

Sexing Cockatoos.

A.L.C.B.—(1) Am afraid I can give you but little assistance as regards a single bird, for so far as I am aware the sexes can only be told by the comparison of adult birds; the plumages are practically alike, but the female is slightly smaller than the male. Her beak is narrower and shorter, and the hook at end of same is shorter than that of the male. (2) They have been bred, or have attempted to do so, at the London Zoo. Give suitable accommodation in a stout wire aviary; the framework should be of iron (gas barrel is as good as anything for the purpose), and the sleeping quarters arranged under this. (3) A seed mixture of Canary seed and oats, two parts each, and one part each of hemp, wheat, dari, maize, and sunflower seeds; such ripe fruit and green food as it favours (tastes differ with individual birds), plain biscuit, nuts, cuttlefish, grit, and water ad lib, for drinking and bathing. (4) It is found in the Celebes, Buton, and Togian Islands. (5) This should be either a roomy log, or a nest box of suitable size with a concave bottom.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Young Canary (Mrs. T.).—Well-established enlargement of liver, possibly hereditary, recent inflammation, involving the lungs. A Canary six or seven weeks old would be better on plain canary and rape seed, no egg-food, rape seed, or salad.

Lizard Canary (Sick Lizard).—Bird Fever. All this family should be isolated, and their sand trays frequently sterilised with boric acid solution of the strength of one teaspoonful to a pint of hot water.

Bullfinch (E. Balfour).—Chronic softening of liver, recent acute inflammation, involving the lungs.

Canary (Mrs. M. Hodgson).—Well established bird-fever. Although you say other birds from same clutch seem to be in perfect health, it is suggested that they be isolated, or the infection will spread over the lot.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Contribution (R. Rbydderch).—We are extremely obliged to you.

F. J. Drye.—We can only refer you to the reply given "R. W." this week. We do not agree with you when you say that the "amount was not worth the trouble of taking him to the County Court for"; this is just the thing that encourages such people to continue their tactics. In this case there is no doubt you would have got your money.

An Exchange (R. W.).—Evidently you are unaware of the fact that the law of libel prevents the publication of particulars such as you send. If we printed them, both yourself and ourselves would be landed in an action at law, and the weather is too hot to make amusement of that description agreeable.

Photograph (A. Blair).—Thanks for an interesting little snapshot, which we will reproduce if we find we can deal with so small a picture.

Dead Birds (Mrs. M. H.).—We do not remember the details of your case, and we presume same would be given in the letter sent our post-mortem expert. We may say, however, that there is no recognised term of approval amongst fanciers, that being a matter of arrangement between the parties concerned in a deal. If, however, the deal takes place under our deposit system, the approval term is clearly defined in the rules governing same, though even then the period may be varied by arrangement of the buyer and seller. If you made no arrangement, then it would probably lie with the judge to determine whether the other party exceeded a reasonable term, considering the circumstances. You should certainly consult a solicitor before taking action. You would need to be in a position to fully substantiate your allegation that the birds came in contact with other diseased birds whilst away on approval.

Bird Catching (Anonymous).—If you will send us a letter giving your own views, attaching your name and address (not necessarily for publication), we shall be pleased to print it. Our correspondence columns are intended for the airing of both sides of a question, we do not believe in throttling any one's views, and never have done. But please do not fall into the error of assuming that the opinions expressed by every correspondent are our own opinions too.

"Brainy Tips" (H. Cartwright).—We are delighted to know you like our "Brainy Tips." We like yours, too, and shall hope to reveal them to an admiring world in the near future.

Concerning Aviaries (G. Milne).—We thank you for an interesting contribution, with which we will try to deal next week.

Photo (H. Robinson).—We will keep this excellent little photograph in mind for a future issue.

A Recipe (Joker).—Don't you believe it; we could have answered that query all right. We'll fix you up with instructions how to darn socks—if you're single and need 'em.

Address (J. Fletcher).—The address you want is Mr. A. Thomas, 9, College-street, Gloucester.

A FIRST SEASON'S SUCCESS IN MULE-BREEDING.

SIR,—Being a reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, and a novice in the Fancy, I thought it would interest novices like myself if I related my experience of good luck with a cock Siskin and a hen Canary. I put the hen up with a Canary for the first nest with the result, four eggs from which I got three young ones. Then I introduced the Siskin for the second nest; result, four eggs and four young, which are now seven weeks old. In the third nest there were five eggs and five young ones, which are now about ten days old. They are doing well, and look of a very good colour. I might say the Siskin takes his turn sitting on the eggs and is a good feeder. I had the Siskin all last season, and my only regret is in regard to the time I have lost with him. This is my first season with Mules, but I hope it won't be the last. I should be very pleased to know if any other fancier has a Siskin which takes its turn in helping to incubate. I would sooner have CAGE BIRDS on a Saturday night than I would have my supper. W. AMPHLETT.

A METHOD OF PREVENTING RED-MITE.

SIR,—I know readers of CAGE BIRDS will gladly welcome a method to get rid, or rather, to prevent, red-mite. We all know this little pest takes to himself all the crevices he can possibly find. Now, the thing is to make the crevices as untenantable as possible. The best way to do this is to get some Stockholm tar (obtainable from any chemist, and you can get any quantity from a pennyworth). With a penny brush you put the tar into all the crevices you can possibly find, and you will soon see the result, and be satisfied that the red-mite will not survive this treatment. Also put a little on both ends of the perches; this, you will see, prevents the red-mite getting to the bird either from the wires or from the back of the cage. Then, again, if you are breeding you want to keep the red-mite from the nest pan, or nest box. To do this, you put some Stockholm tar all over the inside of the nest pan, or box, then your nest lining will adhere to the tar and the red-mite be prevented from getting to the birds. I might say that the tar is not injurious to the birds. It has a very pleasant smell.

SOME PURE WHITE BRITISH BIRDS.

SIR,—It may be of interest to your many readers to know that a pure white Starling was caught in May last, in Giffnock, a place about a mile from the outskirts of Glasgow. It was caught by Mr. Stewart Luckie at his house, "Camperdown," on the main road between Glasgow and Rouken Glen, where at the least five thousand people and over fifty electric cars pass daily. This white Starling ("Pretty Richard," Mr. Luckie calls him) has no dark feathers whatsoever, but at some places shows a faint shade of Cinnamon. He is very tame, and in splendid condition. He is admired by the many folk who call to see him, many of whom are not at all interested in the Fancy. All are unanimous in saying that Mr. Luckie is lucky (forgive me) to be the owner and catcher of such a rarity. He ("Pretty Richard") was hatched with three others of ordinary colour at the back of Mr. Luckie's house, only about a stone's throw off the road, in a small box (strange to say a chalk box), and was caught by the old-fashioned method—the riddle—when about four weeks old. Mr. Luckie will be pleased to show him to any person interested, and I am sure it is a bird all fanciers should see if possible. Mr. Luckie has also a stuffed, pure white Blackbird, which was caught alive in Inverness-shire and forwarded to him by a friend; but unfortunately it died a few hours after being delivered. This also is a splendid specimen, and is well worth seeing. Mr. Luckie has still another novelty; it is a Thrush that died at the age of 25 years. This was in his possession for close on 23 years, and was two years old when he first had it. It was kept in an ordinary Thrush cage in Mr Luckie's shop in Eglinton-street the whole time he had it. It was quite blind, and had been so for two years before it died. This is also stuffed and can be seen by anyone calling on Mr Luckie. On the way out to his house, on one occasion, I saw an almost white Sparrow.

ORDER YOUR "ANNUAL" AT ONCE.

SOME POINTS ABOUT SALES AND EXCHANGING.

SIR,—From my experience my advice to one and all about to send on first (unless it is to someone you know) is to demand a deposit with the Editor of CAGE BIRDS. The money will then be quite safe, and he only takes a "tanner" from it—not much for minding, we'll say, one pound. Failing to get a deposit, well, take my tip, have nothing to do with anyone who won't comply with this rule, with the exception, of course, of someone you know to be honest. I believe in giving 20s. for 20s. when exchanging, and if one cannot deal straight, it is not worth the candle. A. J. BROWN.

SIR,—I have read the interesting letters that have appeared in CAGE BIRDS in connection with the above, and would like to give readers my experience in exchanging. I advertised in CAGE BIRDS of May 5, Mule hens and 2s. 6d. cash, for a real good Norwich hen. I had numerous applications, and amongst them was a reply from a lady fancier residing at Southend, offering a real good hen in exchange for the Mules and 3s. cash. So I accepted her offer and sent her the five Mules and cash. She very stupidly sent away the hen on a Saturday and it was detained all Sunday in Edinburgh. When it arrived here on Monday morning, of course, it was dead. I paid the carriage on it and sent it back to the station to be returned; but as far as I understand, the dead bird is still lying at the station, and I have never had a hen to replace it. Nor have I had any word from the lady about it. Such "fanciers" ought, I think, to be exposed.

R. W., JNR.

WHAT BIRD IS THIS?

SIR,—I have a bird which was sent me from Essex by a young man who caught it near his home, and who failed to find out what it is. It is believed to be a Hybrid. I have let some fanciers see it, and some think it is a cross between the Yellowhammer and Stonechat, while one man thought it a spangled Yellowhammer. But I have been advised to write to CAGE BIRDS and give its markings, so that it might be mentioned in your valuable paper, and invite correspondence as to its identity. The bird is rather larger than a Yellowhammer. Head, cocoa colour; top of eyes (which are black) is a white half circle; from base of beak down its throat is white, which extends half-way round the neck, like a ring. The white is broken below the throat by a chain of cocoa colour, which extends across the breast. Underparts to end of tail are white, with only a tinge of cocoa colour on the thighs. Its back is the colour of a hen Yellowhammer, with wings nearly all white excepting towards the tips of the outer flights, four or five of which are black for about one inch from the tips. Its legs are black. An answer from some kind reader will oblige.

THE DECEPTIVE SINGING HEN.

SIR,—I expect that many of your young readers have been deceived in their birds by having singing hens. I have myself this year had a Canary, an excellent songster, and which I quite believed was a cock. It even appeared to pair properly with a hen, and fed her. But as the latter and the "she" I thought was a "he" both persisted in sitting on the nest, I separated them. My cage is a double breeder, and the "he" took to the other nest-box, and laid three eggs and sat three weeks! I just let her sit as long as she liked, as I had no cock Canary. She is a Cinnamon marked, and I and other fanciers have proved that most of these singing hens have Cinnamon coloured feathers on them. Singing hen Canaries are commonly poor layers of eggs, like the common barn-door fowl that "crows" and now and then lays an egg. Some hens amongst British birds are excellent singers. I have known of hen Skylarks, Goldfinches and Linnets which were good singers. I had a hen Linnet which sang the Goldfinch's song to perfection, and varied my experience of singing hen Canaries, as she bred Hybrids with a cock Redpoll one year, and with a cock Goldfinch the second year. She and her mates reared their own young. Many owners of singing hen British birds believe their birds to be cocks until they lay eggs.

HEN LINNET NESTS IN A CAGE.

SIR,—It may interest your readers to hear that I have had a hen Linnet, mated to a cock Canary, which has built her nest, laid a clutch of five eggs and incubated them, all in an open wire cage. The latter is of fairly large size, and the end where the nest was I screened somewhat by throwing over a cover. The hen Linnet had three fertile eggs out of the five, but the chicks were dead in the shell. Perhaps nesting too late in the season was the cause of the trouble. The Linnet sat closely for 15 days, ending on the 8th of this month. I understand that it is rare for a hen Linnet to nest in a cage. This bird was hatched under a Canary, the egg being sent from the country. This may have been the reason she nested so readily.

(Mrs.) J. J. CLARKE.

THE PRODUCTION OF LIGHT MULING STRAINS.

SIR,—I read in CAGE BIRDS that Mr. J. W. Dickson believes there is no certain method of producing a light-muling strain of hen Canaries. The late Mr. Wallace gave directions in his Canary Book how to breed for such birds, but I have never tested his method. Has Mr. Dickson ever tried my own directions? They are, to pair two clear Yellow Norwich together. I know from my own and many other Mule-breeders' experiences that every buff hen bred from two Yellows will throw Mules variegated with white. The Yellow hens bred from two Yellows will not throw Mules with any light feathers. If a buff brother is paired to the buff hen bred from two Yellows, and their young constantly sib-bred for a few years, always testing the young hens with a Goldfinch and breeding from the hens that throw the lightest Mules, it will not take many years before light Mules good enough for keen competition will be produced.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say that I was surprised when I read the correspondence under the above heading. I think the judge that Mr. Elsmore refers to is Mr. House, who is engaged by Plymouth for their next open show. Might I say that it is rather strange that such a judge as Mr. House is considered not capable of judging for the S.Y.C.C.; and on the other hand, he is one of the first men chosen in the Yorkshire societies, and I should like to say that there is not one single society in the Yorkshire Union but what is delighted when they know that Mr. House has been drawn for their show. This looks as if he understands Yorkshires as well as pigeons. I think Mr. Elsmore's remarks quite uncalled for.

J. HARTLEY.

SIR,—Mr. W. G. Elsmore states that Plymouth have been deprived of the S.Y.C.C. patronage because they have engaged the services of a judge who is also a pigeon and fur judge. If this is true, why are the S.Y.C.C. so inconsistent? They give to Worcester what they refuse to Plymouth. Messrs. Payne and House are both fur judges, and are in the list of specialist judges for more than one fur club. Why, one may well ask, should this be a bar in the one case and not in the other? Mr. Elsmore is well aware this is not the true reason. The reason why the S.Y.C.C. patronage was not given to Plymouth on this occasion was because last October Mr. House threw out two birds for exceeding the standard length, these same birds belonging to two of the S.Y.C.C. officials. I notice from your last issue that the Yorkshire Canary Club are giving their patronage to Rochdale Show, which Mr. House, according to your "Dates Fixed" column, is judging. Thus the judge who is good enough for the Yorkshire C.C. is not good enough for the S.Y.C.C.! Try again, Mr. Elsmore, your present story contradicts itself. Mr. House was a pigeon and fur judge last year, yet the S.Y.C.C. gave their patronage to Plymouth as they have given it to other shows which have been judged by Mr. House in previous years. But then he had not passed leading officials' birds as over length.

THE THREE TOWNS.

SIR,—The three gentlemen who have answered my letter re the S.Y.C.C. patronage are all of opinion that I am meddling in business that does not concern me. This is a very obvious retort but is scarcely a strong argument. Had I wished to influence the S.Y.C.C. I should hardly wait until after the patronage had been allotted. The stand I take is that of a critic of an accomplished fact and not that of one endeavouring to give advice, which is not welcome. I take it I am quite within my rights as a secretary of a show within the district covered by the S.Y.C.C., to pass comment on their actions when once they have been made public through the Fancy Press. Mr. Rennie says the West is well catered for at Cardiff and Swansea—towns, I may point out, which are within 45 miles of each other, and the nearest (Cardiff) 170 miles from Plymouth and correspondingly farther away from the Cornish towns. This is certainly not a first-class arrangement, considered geographically. My contention is that the Western Counties O.S. was left out of the running in regard to the S.Y.C.C. patronage because the judge at the last show was candid enough to give reasons for passing certain members' birds—viz., their being over length according to their own standard. I also contend that the action of the S.Y.C.C. is not calculated to do the Fancy at large any good. Mr. Crisp suggests that I am used as a cat's paw. May I ask who he thinks is using me to pull the chestnuts out of the fire? For surely a gentleman who objects to what he terms my "opprobrious adjectives" has some ground for making this insinuation.

THOS. POPE, Hon. Sec. W.C.O.S.

WHAT IS "QUALITY" LINNET SONG?

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little further space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, on this subject. I see that Mr. Jump, a Lancashire fancier, does not agree with me in my version of the note whinnying. He says that if I were amongst the Lancashire fanciers they would tell me there are only two ways of whinnying. I wish Mr. Jump to understand that I know a great many fanciers in Preston, Wigan, Great-Harwood and Blackburn, and in the last-named especially. I have been amongst them many a time, and not once have they told me that there are only two ways of whinnying. I feel Mr. Jump is speaking at random, especially when he says that spinking, from the Yellowhammer, is a good note. If he will read part of my last letter he will see that I say "I am perfectly well aware that in different parts of England the Linnet fanciers' birds have different notes and different ways of singing." I always understood that the Lancashire and Yorkshire styles were very much alike. Mr. Jump says the bad notes of a Linnet are tojaw, tochay, toflip, tutagit, chet, recparecpa, orec, cra. I hope he is not speaking of foreign birds, for here, where I am spending my holidays, there are a few foreign birds shouting out toflip, cree, cra, etc. I should like some Blackburn fancier more qualified than Mr. Jump to say whether I am right or wrong.

IS A BLACKBIRD A NUISANCE?

SIR,—In spite of Sir F. Cory-Wright, when giving his decision in the case published last week, a Blackbird may be a very decided nuisance, as even he would readily acknowledge, I fancy, if, instead of having them "in his grounds," he lived opposite to one in a cage in London as I do. It is a splendid bird, with a tremendous voice, and has begun singing at daylight every day, for the last six weeks, at all events, and the blank wall against which it is hung acts as a sounding board, throwing the voice into the opposite windows, and so making it appear louder even than it is. I am very fond of birds and like their singing, and being a fair sleeper was not kept awake more than one or two mornings; but an invalid or a light sleeper would have had a very bad time, in fact could not have kept their windows open after daylight. Why should it be possible for a person who likes (or does not dislike) noise to hang a bird outside the house in the street, and annoy perhaps fifty people in the houses opposite? I, personally, hate seeing a Blackbird in a small cage in town or elsewhere, but no doubt that is more sentimentalism and beside the point; when they are living in the garden it is easy enough to drive them away from singing too close to your windows, but if the bird is in a cage (like my neighbour's) I can testify that it is a nuisance.

THRUSHES BREEDING IN A CAGE.

SIR,—I read with much interest the letter by W. Downing with regard to his Thrushes' nesting in a cage. I may say I have had a similar experience. My noted Missel Thrush at the beginning of the breeding season seemed very anxious for a partner, and I was successful in procuring a twice house-moulted hen Song Thrush. They became very chummy with one another and when I saw the hen carrying a little piece of chip that had been thrown into the cage along with the sawdust, and repeatedly pecking the side of the cage, I was under the impression she was wanting to make a nest. So I fixed a hanging Lark cage outside their stock cage, giving her some hay, and was very much surprised to see her set to work at once and make a nest. When the nest had been made with the hay, I got a little cow dung, which she used for lining it, which she did most beautifully, it being, in fact, as round as if one had struck it out with a pair of compasses. On the third or fourth day after its completion she laid her first egg, and another on each morning until she had laid five. But I found that two out of the five eggs had very thin shells, and they soon broke. Then I took out two of the eggs, being afraid the Missel Thrush (Billie) would be too inquisitive and put his bill in them to taste what they were like. I put a couple of pot Canary eggs in their place. You may imagine my surprise when the birds, as soon as they saw them, took one each in their bills, hammering the bottom of the cage at the same time to try to break them. I was also afraid of their swallowing them, so I lost no time in pulling them out of the cage. On the evening of the last egg being laid, I replaced the other two, and the hen started to sit; but she had no eggs the following evening, as "Billie" had sampled them. I was not over anxious to rear young Thrushes, or I should have procured eggs out of a bush; but it was most interesting to watch a Thrush in confinement build her nest—the way she carried the cow dung, and the bonny object she looked being very interesting; one could not see the hen for cow dung. But a bath was provided, and she was soon clean again. I may say I have the nest just as it was finished in the Lark cage, and consider it a smart piece of architecture. No doubt the most surprising thing is that the cage is within a yard from the bench in the workshop, and I was continually, all through the day, passing within a foot of the cage, the hen taking no notice whatever of my movements. Now an interesting question arises—one which some of your readers may be able to answer. Supposing I keep those two birds and try again to breed with them next season, would they be Hybrids? Has there ever been recorded a bird produced from these two birds, viz., Missel Thrush and Song Thrush? I have had my Missel Thrush photographed, but he appears rather rough, having fallen in the moult. The photograph represents him standing on a perch. I intended to hold him, but the photographer said he would not be steady enough, so I rested the perch on a chair back. I might say I showed him during the last two seasons and the lowest award he got was reserve. He was exhibited in all about fifteen times, so he is pretty well known, his wins being at Rochdale, Middleton, Wigan, Wakefield, Oldham and other places.

Mr. J. Law's tame Missel Thrush, "Billie."

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—I am afraid Mr. G. E. Weston's reply in last week's issue to Mr. G. F. Woolhouse will cause confusion, and as I am one of the judges to officiate at our forthcoming Norwich Alliance All England Cage Bird Show, I wish all intending exhibitors not to be misled. All birds with dark underflue, even if only one feather, are certainly not clear birds, therefore are not eligible in Clear classes, their proper place being the Ticked or Unevenly-marked classes. For a bird with dark underflue to be eligible in Clear classes, the schedule should read: "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification." Even then it would count against the bird should there be two birds of equal merit, as a good Clear bird is harder to get, and much more rare than a bird with dark underflue. I may say there are several thousands of breeders in Norwich, and I don't think any of them would exhibit a bird with dark underflue in a Clear class, not if they knew it. Of course, these feathers are overlooked sometimes by exhibitors, but when pointed out to them, they are satisfied they are showing in the wrong class. Anyway, a judge has no right to make rules to suit himself, but should work according to the schedule, and then no blame can possibly be attached to him. I may say that the thighs are by no means the only places where you find this dark underflue, as I have most frequently found it under the wings, also tail coverts, and at or near the vent. As to a judge blowing and poking the feathers of a bird about for five or six minutes in trying to find a tick, and then handing the bird over to a steward to finish his work for him, that is proof positive this judge is not fit for the job.

A. WOOLLARD.

SIR,—You will remember I wrote CAGE BIRDS last year about this vexed question of what constitutes a ticked bird, and said that I hoped secretaries of shows would make their schedules read: "Clear, or invisible ticks." It seems by the way Mr. Weston has treated Mr. Woolhouse's bird that he believes in my suggestion. At the same time, if it is not law, exhibitors don't know where they are. I am of the same opinion as Mr. Woolhouse, that nine judges out of ten would have disqualified his bird in the Clear class, if they had seen the tick. Mr. W. evidently had himself, and he entered the bird thinking the judge, after selecting the best for the money, would look for the tick. But you can see by Mr. Weston's letter that he does not intend to look for them. I think it is time judges had a conference on the matter, or that societies worded their schedules the same as I have suggested.

Emsworth. C. E. SILK.

SIR,—I felt glad when I read our friend, Mr. Weston's, straight-speaking letter on the above subject, for all through my experience since I began to think of such points (it goes back many years, this) I did not understand why dark underflue should make a bird which was clear on the top into a bird which must compete in the marked class. It seems even sillier than the point that a "tick" (which one at once thinks must be a tiny mark) can be as big as a crown piece, or can be two or three marks. Were the fanciers hard up for words to describe their meaning when they arrived at these definitions, I wonder? Let commonsense and straightforward meanings prevail, say I, and a tick mean a tick, and a clear bird, one that is clear to the eye on the top of its plumage, which would be better for the birds, as Mr. Weston points out. Of course, it is bad for exhibitors for one judge to think and do one thing, and another another thing, so these points ought to be settled by the governing body—why not the C.B.U., who should get each society to discuss and vote on the matter?

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

THE Year Book of the Yorkshire Union is to be issued to-day (Saturday), at the council meeting. It is getting to be rather a bulky volume, containing now 76 pages, this being an increase of 12 over last year. The number of societies affiliated is now twenty-seven, with a total membership of 1,191, this giving an average of 44 members per society. Gt. Horton O.S. lead the way with the largest total, viz., 112, Wibsey being next with 79, closely followed by Bradford City, 73, Bradford West and Halifax 72 each, Bradford East and Huddersfield bringing up the rear of the "3-delegate brigade" with 65 and 64 respectively. Pudsey, Stanningley and Dis. Society is the unfortunate holder of the wooden spoon, with 13 members, the remaining societies ranging in membership from 22 to 55. The Year Book also contains the rules of the Union, dates of shows and judges, the name and address of every member of the societies affiliated. Every member should make a point of obtaining his copy as early as possible, and should also read the rules carefully, so as to avoid any errors during the coming show season.

THE various specialist clubs have now held their meetings to allot the patronage covering their various competitions, and all have had a good number of applications, this pointing to a healthy rivalry obtaining during the coming show season, the only drawback being that many societies are disappointed at not being allotted the competitions for which they applied. Many points have to be taken into consideration when this business comes before the club members, the principal being that one judge shall not officiate at more than one show in a competition. This, I believe, is a rule that finds a place with most specialist societies, and is often the cause of a lot of trouble in allocating the patronage. The Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C. have had to pass several shows on this account, and they could do with another application inside the Bradford district, and two or three from outside that district, in order to fix up the number of shows to which they wish their patronage to extend.

ON Saturday last there was again quite a crowd of festivities arranged for the edification of the members of the various societies. Bradford City O.S. and Manningham C.B.S. were down to play a cricket match, whilst Wakefield, Laisterdyke, Shipley, Wibsey, and Queensbury had each arranged for members' shows. The time is getting very late for these shows; many birds that were put down on Saturday showed the colour coming through, and ere long will be in the thick of the moult.

AT Queensbury, the Yellow Yorkshire class contained some very smart exhibits, and in the buffs also a few good birds were staged; these, however, were mostly hens, and will probably make smart ladies when through the moult. The Yorkshires at Wakefield were not great in point of numbers, but were an improvement in quality on the last show. The Norwich were a grand lot, as were also the Mules and British, some very good birds being staged.

BRADFORD East Society are already making arrangements for their coming open show, and have ordered the trestles for the staging of the birds. These will be rather higher than is usually the case in the Bradford district, the object being to enable visitors to see the birds at a convenient height without lifting up the cages. This should be an improvement, and the idea will probably be taken up by other societies if it "catches on." The staging used by most societies hereabouts is the property of the schools at which the show is held, and these trestles were made for getting the feet under, and not for the staging of birds.

THE above society at their next members' show provide a gift class, the proceeds from which are to go towards the rose bowls that they intend having for competition in the unflighted classes at their open show. As is usual among the members of this society, the idea is being carried out with much enthusiasm, and a good sum is expected to accrue from it.

"CAGE BIRDS." 154, FLEET ST., LONDON.

The Canary Hobby and How to Ride it.

By J. W. FISHER.

What fanciers of thirty years ago would ever have expected to see a paper like CAGE BIRDS, and especially its Birthday Numbers, with their lovely plates—a paper devoted entirely to the cage bird hobby. I should say that very few ever thought of such a thing, and even these would hardly have had the courage to give expression to such a thought. At the time I mention we used to think ourselves very lucky if we could get a few lines on our hobby into the pages of some of the all-round Fancy papers. But here we are, and I for one am glad I have lived to see the day, and in this short article I hope to show the fancier of to-day the splendid chance he has now compared with what his brother fancier had in days gone by.

The Good of a Hobby.

Now, firstly, as parsons say, is a hobby of any kind good or bad for the individual and the community? I know some who think it very bad, and it is a matter that is, I suppose, open to debate; I maintain it is good for many reasons to have a hobby of some sort, and I always look very kindly upon anyone who has one, even when it is not my own particular craze. It takes a man away from his many little worries, and if he can spend a few hours daily in pursuit of his hobby he will come back into the arena of life again the better equipped for grappling with its problems and be the more likely to succeed than the man who has been spending his interval in vain broodings or something worse.

Now, one of the most interesting hobbies that we can possibly have is the Canary hobby, and if we go the right way about it we can derive a great amount of pleasure from it, and perhaps a little profit; at any rate we can make it pay for itself.

Some Tips for the Beginner.

Now, to the young fancier or the beginner I would say, having made up your mind to have a try, go in for one variety of Canary, and concentrate your energies on that; pick out the particular variety you intend to keep. Whether it be the Norwich or the Yorkshire, Cinnamons or Crests, makes no difference. But having decided which it is to be, be a perfect glutton for information; get hold of all the printed matter you can lay hands on, and by making the acquaintance of other fanciers and visiting other bird rooms you will be able to pick up here and there such bits of information as may be to you like grains of seed dropped into ground—small in themselves, but when properly and carefully utilised are productive of much good result. Your bits of information will be of such bulk as will enable you to cope with the giants in the Fancy, and surprise both them and yourself by the success you attain.

A Word about Cages.

Now, one of the first things a true fancier begins with is the cage. There has, however, been so much written on the subject, and there are so many varieties to choose from that it may almost be left to the individual's own taste to make a choice. I will, therefore, content myself with saying that as long as the cage is roomy enough it is right enough.

I personally like a cage of 3ft. or 3ft. 6in. long with loose wire fronts that fit into the top bar and bottom rail, and having a wood sliding partition for the centre, so that I can shut off the cock bird from the hen when the latter is sitting, and be able to use them for flight cages when not breeding. I also like the cages to have loose-drawn or false bottoms, and having doors in the front of each compartment, so that I can get easily to the inside of the cage. One can then lift the cage down, and run the bird or birds out from either end without disturbing what may be in the other compartment.

A cage of this description is easily "got at" for the thorough cleaning that ought to and does take place before and just after breeding time in every well-managed bird room. Remember, cleanliness is not everything, but it comes so near to being so that it takes a clever chap to tell what comes next in order of importance.

The depth of the cage may be from 16in. to 18in., according to one's own fancy, and from 9in. to 12in. from back to front. Give length rather than height, as birds don't want to climb upstairs, but rather to be able to have a good fly along from one end of their home to the other.

What Birds to Get.

Now, if you know how to feed and look after your birds, go in for the best breeding pairs you can afford to buy, as good birds don't eat any more seed than common ones, and one pair of good ones that may produce one or two or more good young ones in a season will bring more satisfaction than a lot of duffers.

One reason why I advise fanciers to make one variety their sole study is because that by doing so, they cannot help but learn a lot about other varieties. Yet they will be more likely to succeed in their own breed and will avoid coming on the rock on which many would-be fanciers get shipwrecked, viz., overcrowding, by getting too many birds to look after properly. And instead of the hobby being a pleasure, it becomes very like hard labour.

But there is one thing that I wish to particularly impress upon you, and that is that you want good feeders. When you get among the aristocrats of the cage bird fancy, they very much resemble the general run of aristocrats, and seem to think they have no call to be bothered with the duties of looking after the upbringing of their own offspring. Now, to avoid unnecessary heart-breakings and disappointments, always keep a few common ones for feeding and rearing purposes, and when you do get a good feeder don't part with it, no matter what you may be offered for it, nor what its breed may be.

The best feeder that ever I had, I had given me by a Scotsman, who said I could have it for nothing; but it would be of no use to me, as it was then four years old. I took it, and bred with it for four seasons, and the bird reared for me many a pound's worth of young Canaries. I pensioned her off after that and kept her for another five years.

So keep your feeders. Don't expect to breed as many tip-toppers as you can common ones, nor be afraid of breeding them too big, no matter what variety gone in for. I often hear people say their birds are too big, but you will find that you will get plenty of smaller ones and a big "good 'un" ought to beat a little good one any day. Have and seek quality by all means, but have size as well if you can manage it.

Some Breeding Tips.

I always take the eggs away from the hen till she lays her third, and use a small egg-spoon for the purpose of moving them. I put them into a box divided into partitions and numbered so as to correspond with the number on the cages. By-the-bye, not only should the cages always be numbered, but a book should be kept so that you may have an account of where and when you have set your eggs. I keep the eggs in bran to avoid getting them broken, and set on the morning of the fourth day.

Don't start breeding too soon. More haste and less speed may be found as true a maxim in Bird Breeding as in anything else I know of.

In the northern counties, where I have had most of my experience, I find it best to let March get past, or nearly so, and I never pair up till the last week in March or the first week in April. The only difficulty is in keeping the hens back, and this can be done by feeding them sparingly on plain Canary seed and a little niger now and again. About a week before pairing you can feed them a little better, but be generous with the niger seed, as I never had an egg-bound hen who had had a plentiful supply of that.

The cock birds you can feed up to concert pitch, and if your stock is healthy, all will be laying and going on beautifully in nine or ten days' time at the most.

*Owls in a School.

There are some Owls' nests in our school ceiling and we often see the old birds flying through the ventilator. They eat mice and small rats and are in the habit of throwing little balls of fir and skins on the floor. At night time they fly round the place, and their flight is a very quick one. They are brown all over except for their breasts, which are of a creamy colour. They will have the building to themselves for a few weeks, as it is closed on account of the midsummer holidays.—Sent by J. Grimshaw (age 11), 23, Westgate, Hale, Cheshire.

*Lost and Found.

I have three Goldfinches which are very tame. I let them out into the room very often, and they will hop in and out of their cages of themselves. One of them will take his food out of my fingers. One evening I went out for a walk and left the birds flying about the room. When I returned and went to see after them, I found two of them; they were alright. But where was the other? It was gone. I looked everywhere, even up the chimney. But when I went to light the gas (for it was beginning to get dark), I saw the lost bird perched on the gas pipe inside the globe. Of course, I was very glad I had found him.—Sent by J. Fogarty (age 14), Ulster Bank, Wexford, Ireland.

Jim, the Tame Sparrow.

Jim is the name we give to a Sparrow which is the pet of the engine-drivers and the firemen at one of the railway centres in the North of Scotland. It is said that he was hatched within the noisy precincts of a busy locomotive stable, but that he fell out of the nest before he was fully fledged, and was placed in a cage and carefully looked after in a railway office. On the third day he began to be friendly, and in a very short time was flying about in the room. And he allows himself to be petted. He became so tame that when his owner, the local railway engineer, was writing, he flew on to his hand and went to sleep. When the bird was six months old he began to go with his owner on his railway rounds among the engines in the yard, perched on the man's shoulder, or hopping by his side. He chooses queer places for his nests, the oddest and most awkward being the inside coat pocket of its owner.—Sent by J. Shepherd (age 14), 11, Buckley Brook Street, Rochdale.

The Housing and Treatment of Foreign Birds in Captivity.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Queen Cardinal (Gubernatrix cristata).—This is a large and beautiful species, and is absolutely hardy, for it seems merry and lively amid the vilest of our English winter weather, its health remaining certainly unimpaired thereby. Their one failing is, that though they are very ready to build, lay and incubate closely but a very small proportion (in many aviaries none at all) of those hatched out are reared to maturity.

Adult male:—Upper parts rich olive-green, with regular black striations; tail brilliant yellow, with the two central feathers blackish-olive; crest, chin and throat, rich velvety-black; a broad streak above and a small patch below the eye, also the sides of throat, rich golden yellow; breast greenish yellow, remainder of under surface bright yellow; upper mandible black, lower mandible greyish-black; legs and feet dark grey.

Adult female:—Greyer and browner than the male, and the yellow areas of her plumage smaller and much less vivid in colour; the eye-streak and sides of throat are white, and the breast is brownish-grey.

This species is also known as the Black-Crested Cardinal, and is the most docile and confiding of the Cardinals. Nevertheless, they are not safe company for small Finches. My present pair have been in my possession for 5 or 6 years and have never had a day's illness during the whole period; for three years they were quite amiable and harmed nothing, and in bright weather, as they flashed to and fro, were beautiful objects indeed. But afterwards their demeanour changed, and though not really savage, at odd times they murdered several of their smaller companions, and I then turned them in with the Parrakeets, where they continue to thrive and do well.

This pair usually build 4 or 5 open cup-shaped nests each year, and lay as many clutches (usually 4) of palish green eggs, thickly lined and spotted with blackish-brown. Nearly all the eggs have proved fertile. More than 50 must have been hatched out during the time they have been in my possession, but not a single one reared to maturity. My business engagements do not permit me to be at hand to give them live insects every two or three hours.

The male is gorgeous indeed when displaying to his mate; the golden tail is fully expanded, in fact, all the brilliant golden yellow areas are exposed, and the rich olive areas only enhance the effect, which it is beyond the power of words to describe. It has some pleasing and rich notes, which, frequently uttered (summer only), form its song. Habitat:—Ranges generally over Argentina and extends to N. Patagonia.

Yellow-Billed Cardinal (Paroaria capitata).—The Yellow-Bills have been more frequently imported of late and are fast becoming almost as common as the Grey or Red-Crested. They are also known as "Lesser" Cardinals, and Brown and Black-Throated Cardinals; these names are more or less misleading, as they are equally applicable to all.

I only propose to describe the one species viz., capitata. The adult male has the upper surface black, with shining carmine head, the red and black of the upper surface being separated by a band of pure white, which is also the colour of the under surface; throat black, tapering to a point on the chest; bill, legs and feet, ochreous-yellow.

This, to my mind, is one of the most beautiful and shapely of the Cardinals, and is quite safe with small species, but I have not found it so long-lived as either the Green, Dominican, or Grey Cardinals.

Dominican Cardinal (Paroaria larvata).—This is more commonly known as the Pope Cardinal, and in its native wilds is the commonest of all the Cardinals, though in this country the Grey or Red-Crested is the species which comes to hand in the largest numbers. I may say that I have kept the Yellow-Billed, Pope, and Grey Cardinals, for years, and associated with the smallest Ornamental Finches, and have so far found them quite amiable; but the sexes of the respective species must be equal or they will quarrel with each other.

This species has been bred in this country, but as with the Green and Grey Cardinals, very few of the young hatched out are reared to maturity. This species, to my mind, is far more beautiful than the Grey Cardinal, though it does not possess a crest. The hues of its plumage are so rich, pure, and sharply defined, that when in condition they are brilliant and handsome indeed. It is also known as the Red-Headed Cardinal. Comparatively little has been recorded as to its wild life, but it frequents open and cultivated districts, where it builds an open cup-shaped nest; the eggs are pale green and thickly spotted with brown.

Adult male:—Head, crest, chin, and throat, intense crimson; upper surface dark grey; tail and wing feathers blackish-grey; outer webs of wing feathers white; the whole of the under-surface of body, except the throat, is white, which is also the colour of a broad belt bordering the crimson of the cheeks and throat; bill, horn colour; lower mandible much darker than upper; legs and feet slate colour. Habitat:—Brazil; ranges from Rio Janeiro to the Amazon, along the sea border. The song is variable, somewhat scrappy and gritty at times; at other times the notes are rather rich, flute-like and pleasing.

Grey or Red-Crested Cardinal (Paroaria cucullata).—This is the commonest of all the Cardinals in the country, and can nearly always be procured, sometimes even as cheaply as 7s. 6d. a pair. It is a general favourite, and rightly so, its bold alert appearance, showy plumage, hardy and robust constitution, having won for it a place both in bird-rooms and aviaries. Providing it has space for exercise and a roof to retire under, it cares nothing for our vilest weather, and will endure for years in any well-arranged out-door aviary.

Some individuals are malicious (I am bound to record the experience of many reliable aviculturists on this point, though the many pairs I have possessed have all proved amiable), and their demeanour must be ascertained before they are put with small Finches. I have found them to succeed well when kept with Parrakeets, such as Rosellas, Cockatools, and Budgerigars. If you can give this species a shrubby garden aviary to disport itself in, plenty of live insects and not too much company, there will be but little difficulty in inducing it to breed, but unless you can regularly keep up the supply of live insects but few of those hatched out will be reared.

The adult bird is dark grey above, with the head, crest, chin, and throat, crimson, under surface and region behind the cheeks white; tail and wing feathers blackish-grey; bill horn colour; legs and feet pale brownish-grey. The sexes are similar, but the plumage of the female is not so intense in hue and her bill is narrower at the base and more pointed than that of the male.

The dietary of all the Cardinals is very simple. The seed mixture should range over Canary, white millet, oats, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds; fruit, soft food (insectile mixture), green-food (lettuce is greedily eaten), cuttlefish, grit, and some live insects. They are extremely fond of their bath, and should certainly be given the opportunity of taking one daily.

The Dominican Cardinal (Parvaria larvata).

This popular bird is commonly known as the Pope Cardinal and is also sometimes termed the Red-headed.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

A CHAT ABOUT GOLDFINCHES & GREYPATES.

By W. H. Thomas.

The Goldfinch is one of the prettiest of the British birds. It possesses many colours; its head is red from the base of the beak to the top of the skull, right round to the far end of the eye, coming to a point in the corner over the eye, the bottom coming from under the beak right round the neck, and near the far end of the eye; the black also comes to join the red at the bottom of the skull as far as the bottom of the neck, reaching three-quarters round the neck. These are joined between with white, reaching from the side of the head threequarters round, then going narrower right round under the red to the other side, and then joined to the black.

Then comes brown on the back, then a lovely chocolate colour running both sides down to the joint of the Goldfinch's legs, and then white under the abdomen right down to the vent. Then come the dark, shiny, top wing feathers, and at the end come the three big white moonings. After this there are the bottom feathers with lovely yellow bars, with five lovely white buttons. The black tail feathers come next, with three white buttons on the middle of the tail tips, the under tail being white. The bird has black legs, but if house-moulted, the legs turn white.

On the Rearing of Young.

The Goldfinches begin to nest in the month of May, and build their nests in sycamore, elder, apple, and other trees, and on the outside branch between the two leaves. The nest is small and round, like a cup in shape, and is one of the prettiest-built nests of all the British birds.

Goldfinches make their nests of the following materials. The outside is composed of long dry grass and moss from the trees; the middle of the nest is composed of horse and cow hair, and is lined inside with dry, white heads of the dandelion flower. The hen lays from four to five small eggs of a whitish tint, spotted with orange brown. The Goldfinch sits from 13 to 14 days on the eggs before they hatch.

After the young are hatched, the parents begin to feed on dandelion, chickweed, and groundsel seeds, and on small insects from the various fruit trees. The young do not leave the nest until about the end of the third week, but the hen has, in the meantime, made another nest and commenced to lay about the second day after the first hatch has left the nest. The parents go together to feed the first hatch for a week after the young have left the nest, then the female bird leaves the cock bird to feed by himself, so that she may sit on the second clutch of eggs. The cock bird continues to feed the young for about 14 days, when he commences to beat them away that he may commence to feed the second batch. When the second brood are about a month old, the parents leave them. It is seldom that the Goldfinches rear more than two broods.

Food of the Goldfinch.

The winter feeding of the Goldfinch is chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, thistle, hard heads and teazle seed, also small insects from the trees, fruit, and small worms from the apple tree, green flies from the stalks of the old thistle and the little white worm from the old tops of the thistles. And when the snow is on the ground they feed on seeds of elder and sycamore trees.

The cage for the Goldfinch ought really to be 16 ins. long, 6 ins. wide, and 13 ins. high, with the back and ends shut up; it should have three perches, one across from end to end and two up about nine bars from each end. The Goldfinch will live for many years if fed the proper way, and this is the right way of feeding. Mix the following seeds together:—One pint of hemp, ½ lb. of inga, ½ lb. of teazle, ½ lb. of thistle, and ¼ lb. of dandelion. Give a piece of apple now and again, and a pinch of sunflower seed every other day, which ought to be lightly cracked by rolling a bottle over them. By following this method of feeding, your birds will be kept in good health and in good breeding condition. To keep the birds up in good colour, store marigold tops and roll a few now and again with a bottle; also give some linseed now and again to keep the gloss on the feathers, which adds so much to the value of one's birds.

A Word about "Greypate" Goldfinches.

I have read the numerous and interesting articles in Cage Birds, on the feeding and keeping of Greypates. In judging a Greypate class, our judges ought not to judge them after the end of September and October. Then there would not be the expressions of discontent that one hears so often at our shows, about the showing of old birds in young-bird classes. As a working man, my hobby has been bird-catching and the keeping of nearly all our British birds, but my favourites are Goldfinches and Bullfinches. So mine has been a practical experience lasting for about 20 years.

I would like, therefore, to give my experience in the feeding of my Greypates. I put the birds in a small aviary, which is out of doors, and boarded on the top and at both ends, the front being covered with two layers of wire netting to prevent damage by cats, etc. When the thistle heads are in season, I gather them some time before giving them to the birds. I open the thistle in two, so that the birds may get to the seed more easily. I gather a lot of heads and store them for future use. For every two birds I give a handful of thistle heads daily. I also give dandelion heads (as much as they will eat daily), also a few hard heads daily, rolled hemp seed, inga seed, and a few cracked sunflower seeds, and also a pinch of teazle seed. Let an old hen Goldfinch run with them, and if fed in this way, your birds will be kept alive and you will not have the disappointment of finding them all dead. I might also mention that I always keep a few bushes of furze in my aviary, so that the young birds may sleep in them if they so desire.

The Novices Notebook.

This page will consist of topical hints, addressed chiefly to beginners, concerning every branch of the hobby of bird-keeping, and the notes will be contributed from time to time by various leading experts.

Tailing and Flighting.

Everyone, save the very newest recruit in the hobby of Canary breeding, is aware that the birds of the year do not shed their long tail and wing feathers naturally at the first moult. This phenomenon incidentally gave rise to a practice in the olden days, when the K.N. feeding was so much the rage, known as tailing and flighting the birds, which is often puzzling to the novice of to-day.

The practice consisted of forcibly plucking out the whole of the tail and flight feathers of the young birds when they were put up for moulting in order that the new feathers might be produced, showing the effects of the colour-food. Nowadays this practice is, fortunately, far less popular than it was formerly, and it is no longer essential to tail and flight a bird in order to stand a very fair chance of success on the show bench. As a matter of fact, in many cases the bird's winning chances are materially reduced by carrying out the practice, so that where those considerations of humanity, which should at all times be sufficient to prevent the practice, are not sufficiently well developed in the owner, this may be the bird's salvation from what must be at the very best a most painful experience.

Of course, most breeders are aware that the second crop of feathers—the adult plumage it may be called—are slightly better developed and are a trifle longer than those of the nestling, so that although those breeds in which length of feather is advantageous rather than otherwise, may not stand to lose anything, but rather gain by the process, the great majority of the more hardy and popular breeds would lose by just so much as they gained in length of feather.

Its Disadvantages.

Thus, for example, although a Yorkshire or a Lancashire, would undoubtedly gain by the slightly increased length obtained, a Border Fancy, Lizard, Norwich, or, in fact, any other breed which requires to be cobby and compactly built, with no superfluous length of plumage, would most certainly lose points by being tailed or flighted. In certain cases of individual birds it is quite possible to practically destroy a bird's winning chances simply by carrying out the process of tailing and flighting.

If one has, say, a good specimen of a Norwich which is already bordering on the un-passable in length and slimness, the slight increase in length of feather obtained by tailing and flighting will seem to have a very exaggerated effect, and will put the bird right out of count so far as prize winning is concerned.

The same thing might be said of a Border Fancy or any other variety where length of tail is not altogether desirable. Another case in which the effect would be very detrimental is when one has a specimen in which the tips of the flights meet so closely that one naturally expects that bird to develop the fault of being cross-winged or of having the tips of its flights crossed. Now such a bird might have a fairly successful career on the show bench in its first season, but when its adult flights are fully grown, its career as a show bird is seriously affected if not altogether ruined.

To tail and flight such a bird would be to simply cut off its career in the beginning and throw away the one season which it may have enjoyed. Of course, it is only the rawest novice, acting in ignorance, who would do this, and it is for his benefit these points are drawn attention to.

When it is done.

When tailing and flighting are to be carried out for any special reason, it becomes a question which is the best time to do it. Upon this point breeders, when it was "all the vogue," were divided in opinion, for whilst some believed in extracting the whole of the wings and tails at one time as soon as the moult commenced, and in placing the birds in the moulting cages, with perches low down, and covers over the front so that there was little necessity and less inducement for the birds to move about, others adopted the more rational method of spreading the process over two or three operations, either removing the tail and about a third part of each wing for one operation, and the remainder of the wings, when these were about half-grown. Or for a "three-act tragedy"—not a wrong term, this, for the work—removing the tail first, a fortnight or so later the half of each wing, and the remaining part of each wing about three weeks later.

Needless to say, great care is required to do the work without injury and with the least amount of pain to the bird. Better still, considering the little real advantage it is in any case, and the risks attached to it in unskilled hands, to leave it entirely alone.

Flight or Single Cage Moulting.

Whether it is better to keep the birds for moulting in the flight cage or cage them up separately is often a question with the beginner. It is, in fact, one of those questions which might have with equal justice an affirmative reply to both sides of it.

Each method possesses its own special advantages, and each its own demerits, when viewed from certain standpoints. To take the case of a lot of stock birds about which one is not very anxious, either in wanting them for high-class colour-feeding or for showing; or take the case of a lot of surplus birds of ordinary quality which are to be disposed of as songsters, or the hens for feeders—in either case there can be no doubt that the extra space they will get for exercise will be most beneficial, and will help them to develop into healthy, vigorous birds when moulted in good large flights, and kept in them through the following winter, or at least, as long as they are to be kept before disposal.

But for real high quality colour-feeding this plan is quite useless, as it is impossible to have any real control over the process when a number of birds are being fed together. True, one can always accurately gauge the proper quantity of food or colouring matter to give to a group of birds, no matter how large or how small the number of specimens composing the group may be, but there the control ends.

One cannot control the tastes and appetites of the birds themselves, and these vary so greatly that in any group there is always the probability of some birds getting double or treble as much of the soft food as others will get. Thus in this method of moulting on colour food it is almost invariably found that the birds finish up of a most unequal colour, some of them showing scarcely any effect of colour food at all, and others coming through far too "hot" to suit the tastes of every judge.

The Better Plan.

All this, of course, is naturally avoided by caging up the birds separately, when one has absolute control over the amount of colour each bird has, and can practically suit his own tastes and desires as to what colour they are fed to, by keeping an ordinary outlook over the amount left from each feeding time.

Given good, pure peppers made palatable with sugar, there are very few birds indeed that require any persuasion to eat all that is necessary; therefore, if a bird is found to systematically clear up its dole each time, the food may be increased in quantity to bring out the bird to any desired tint.

But in the cases of the few who seem to reject it, or only eat a small portion of the quantity given, a pinch of maw seed may be mixed amongst it as an extra inducement, or a little more sugar added. As a rule the only inducement a Canary requires to take the food quite freely is a certain amount of sugar—more or less according to the taste of the individual bird. Whenever a bird rejects the colour so far that it is necessary to remove the seed to get it to take the colour, it may almost be taken for granted that there is something wrong with the colour food, or that it contains something more than pure tasteless pepper and sugar, and perhaps a very small proportion of hot pepper and oil.

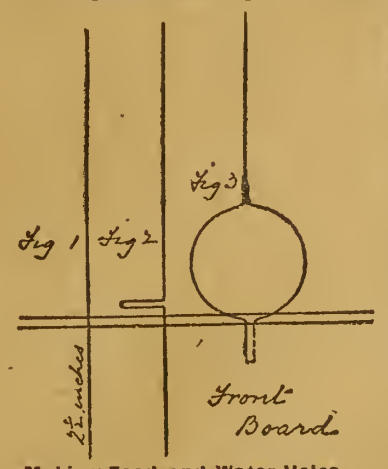
Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post free, 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 231.

TO MAKE FOOD AND WATER HOLES.

Sent by F. Whiting, Iketshall St. Andrew's, near Bungay, Suffolk.

I enclose a very simple plan for making feeding and drinking holes on wood and wire cage fronts. I cut a piece of wire 2½ inches longer than the depth of the cage front, then bend this length as seen in Fig. 1. I then put the double end into a vice (or flat pliers) about ¼ inch, and bend each end over, as seen in Fig 2. Then bring the two ends over a piece of wood (or iron) which is ¾ of an inch round, so as to form a nice round hole, afterwards twisting the short end as seen in Fig. 3. I think readers will agree that this simple little plan makes the amateur's work look more finished.—F. Whiting.

No. 232.

EASILY-MADE FOOD OR WATER VESSELS.

Sent by A. F. Taylor, 51, Princes Road, Romford, Essex.

Useful food and water holders for small cages can be easily made, as seen in enclosed sketch, by using large-sized china ink-wells, as found in school desks, supported by wood and wire, as shown. The well hanging below the rail of the cage prevents waste of food through the birds scattering it. "A" is the ink-well; "B" the wooden holder; "C.C." the bent wires or stout hair pins.—A. F. Taylor.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

It was a week before we were able to visit the spot again where we had been so interested in the Gold-crested Wren's nest, and we knew that the young would have left the nest. But we hoped to find them in the vicinity. Nor were we disappointed. We had hardly penetrated the belt of firs before we heard the well-known call of young birds being fed. Some 30ft. up one of these trees, at a spot where several branches crossed each other, we located what appeared to be nothing but a bundle of moss. Presently an old bird came sidling along the branch to it, and we could see it was two young ones huddled together. They broke away from each other, but collected again when the old bird departed. Watching them for some time, we occasionally got a glimpse of the parents. We knew they were coming some time before we saw them, the call of the young and their agitated manner giving us the clue. We could now visit the empty nest. In consequence of the thick growth of the branches from the stem it was not an easy job. The nest was at the extremity, and the branch had to be cut and lowered to the ground. The nest proved to be a beautifully constructed affair. It was suspended like a hammock; some of the drooping twigs being laced into the outer part of the nest. Moss was the chief material used, with a little dried grass and lichen. The interior was warmly lined with feathers. Upon an adjoining tree, within six feet of this nest, was a beautiful example of the home of the Long-tailed Titmouse. The young had flown, so that the nest, which was in good preservation, was added to our collection.

Heron Hawking.

An old book on sports says:—"Heron Hawking was formerly a diversion in this kingdom, and a penalty of 20s. was incurred by any person taking the eggs of this bird. Its flesh was also in former times much esteemed, being valued at an equal rate with that of the peacock."

A British Albatross.

The strong-winged Albatross is a bird of the open seas, and does not frequent our shores, although it is recorded that a specimen in an exhausted condition was picked up on a farm near Linton, in Cambridgeshire, in 1897. It is just possible that in the remote past, the bird was an inhabitant of these regions, for fossil remains of them have been unearthed in Suffolk. A peep into the past is at all times interesting, for there can be no doubt that many changes have taken place in the wild bird life of our Islands.

Home of the Reed Warbler.

All our wild birds' nests are more or less beautiful. Some we admire for their almost geometrical construction, others for the selection of materials, and some, such as the Reed Warbler's, for their beauty of construction and position. The Reed Warbler's is a neatly constructed affair, the edges being woven round three or four reed stems. It is principally composed of dry sedge grass and reed leaves, with an inner lining of softer material, such as the flowering tops of the reeds. It needs to be deep, for, suspended between the reeds which are constantly in motion with the breeze, a shallow nest would be useless. One can only guess how the builders commence such a nest. It may be they start from one reed stem, but it must be a difficult task, with the swaying of the ever-moving reeds.

"The Reed Warbler swung in a nest with her young, Deep-sheltered and warm from the wind."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

J. SANDIFORDS, Bird Specialists,

PRESTON, LANCS.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS

catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1/0; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capebill, Birmingham.

BIRD CATCHERS.

Of Course, you cannot afford to be always buying. You require appliances that not only work well, but last and give satisfaction, then buy from the Actual Maker. Read following unsolicited Testimonial:— 460, Underwood Lane, Crewe, Cheshire. Sir, please send your Catalogue of Nets, I had a pair from elsewhere, and they are completely done, advertised as Hemp lines they were only parcel string, of no use whatever. I want some good nets as I cannot afford to be always buying.—Yours truly, W. Bowker.

No deception here; order to-day; nets will be there to-morrow. Large stock always ready; I guarantee my appliances the best value ever offered; high-class goods only; made to wear, not merely to sell; with extra improvements added this season, makes them the easiest and fastest working ones ever invented; order now from the old firm. Nets, traps, decoys, every down to date and useful appliance; to be successful use only the best; all on approval; deposit with Editor if desired; satisfaction guaranteed or money returned; ½, ¾, or ⅞ mesh supplied; green, tan, drab, colour warranted not to show on ground; large stocks of Nightingale traps at 3/6, as illustrated in CAGE BIRDS August 1st by Mr. Sandy. All the latest improvements; finest and best invisible netting possible to manufacture; all clap-nets will be fitted with improved steel sockets, and money returned if dissatisfied. Used by all the leading catchers, who will accept no other make. Beware of cheap imitations. Clap-nets, poles, sockets, irons, lines, two nets, carrying bag, full directions for setting, with sketches, 9 ft. long, each net 3 ft. wide, 6/-; 10 ft. by 3 ft., 6/6; 12 ft. by 3 ft., 7/6; 18 ft. by 3 ft., 9/6; 18 by 4, 11/-; 24 by 4, 12/-; 24 by 4½, 14/-; 30 ft. by 5, 17/6; 36 by 6, 21/-; 48 by 6 ft., 25/-; spring net traps, the "catch all," easy carried, self-acting, takes alive uninjured; Goldfinch size 1/3, two 2/3; Rook Pigeon Blackbird 2/-, two 3/0; carriage paid; swivel bird braces, 20 years reputation, no injury, no tying, three 3d.; dozen 8d., with sketch; brace bird poles, 9d.; bird lime, best quality, Japanese hold Rooks, any weather, 1/8 pound, half pound 1/-, quarter 7d., large box 4d., carriage paid; lime twigs, holder and four, 7d., with eight 9d., post free; call cages, green, 6d.; store cages, 1/3, 2/3, 3/3; trap cages, double 1/-, treble 1/9, four compartments 3/-; for all other appliances send stamp for 40-page illustrated catalogue, also 7d. for large book (copyright) Hints on Birdcatching, feeding, taming, setting nets, selecting sexes useful hints where to set baits, etc., etc.; life experience with nets.

W. RUDD, THE Bird Specialist,

NORWICH.

THE THING

that isn't what it seems finds no place with me. I do not sell you American cotton netting and call it thread, nor jute lines for hemp. Everything I sell is guaranteed to be exactly as described and advertised, and is sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless perfectly satisfactory to you your money is promptly refunded in full without question or comment. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾-inch mesh thread, 3 yards long, 4/-; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all are actually 5½ feet deep and strike 4 feet. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up complete with birch stavo poles, birch pegs, and Russian hemp lines, with everything complete ready for immediate setting. Sparrow nets fitted complete on 19 ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; ditto on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and best on the market, and are guaranteed to catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. Mr. Jeffreys, the well-known Nightingale expert, and winner of CAGE BIRDS' recent essay competition, says: "I find your net traps the best I can get, and I always use them for Softbill catching." Loose netting, exactly same as my clap nets are made from, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep 3d. yard, 9 feet deep 4d. yard, post free. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. Round or square topped call cages, as supplied to hundreds of catchers and dealers; my price 3d. each, 2/6 dozen. Genuine Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made; does not run in sun nor freeze in winter, and will hold a Hawk or Rook on hottest day in summer; ¼-lb. 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Solid hemp pull lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, carriage paid. These lines are specially spun and finished without snarl or back twist, and are strong enough for boat lines. See following few testimonials; thousands more open for inspection any time. "Lower Hooe, near Plymouth, August 16th. Sir, —Please send ¼-lb. birdlime, as I had fine results from using your lime last season.—Yours, H. Burridge." "13, Pump-st., Nottingham, August 18th. —Sir,—Received pull line safe, and am very pleased with it and your way of doing business.—Yours, Mr. Harrison (48 years a Linnet catcher)." "Garth View, Builth Wells, August 10th.—Sir,—Please send ¼-lb. birdlime. A friend of mine will want some after he sees this, as we cannot get any good lime anywhere.—Yours, John Hyde." "10, St. George's-passage, Kent-st., Portsea.—Sir,—Please send following loose netting for clap nets. I had some from you two years ago which is just as good now as the day I had it, and I think it marvellous value for the money.—Yours, J. Devine." Mr. Gubley, the well-known catcher of Holbeach, says: "Please send following nets, as your netting is as superior to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS, in commenting on netting and lines used in making my nets, says: "They are of the very best quality, and nets made from such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users and stand a great amount of wear and tear." Everything required by catchers kept in stock. Please send stamp for full printed list and sample of netting, and compare sizes, quality, and prices with those of other makers. One trial solicited. See British Bird column for further advert.

HAVE YOU NOTICED

that all birds I send out are sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or on CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, on the distinct understanding that your money is returned in full if birds fail to prove entirely satisfactory. There is no dodging or unmentioned conditions about my method, you return birds, and I promptly and cheerfully return full cash—see? I claim to be the originator of this system in connection with wild birds, and have never traded under any other conditions during the whole 18 years of my business career. Grand lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 6/6, 12 12/-; specially selected larger cocks for show or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call-bird regularly, 3/6; splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in pink of health, every one warranted a cock, and most of them red-breasted, 9d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; no hen Linnets stocked; young cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; splendid lot young cock Skylarks, in song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each, all very steady, and right sort for making champion songsters; hand-reared cock Larks, that have won contests, and can win again, 20/-, 30/-, and 40/- each; hand-reared cock Song Thrush, singing, 2/6; two-year-old hand-reared Thrush, probably londest songster extant, but now moulting, 5/-, worth 50/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6; cages of every description in stock; dealers send stamp for full list of sizes and prices. See following few letters:—"194, Chorley Old-road, Bolton, August 10th.—Sir, please send three Linnets. I had one from you last season, which proved a beauty for song. Yours, J. Crane." "19, Coningsby-road, Fir Vale, Sheffield, August 15th.—Sir, received Goldfinch safely, and can assure you it gives every satisfaction. I shall not forget where to place my future orders. Thanking you for selection, yours, H. Nelson." "384, Duke-street, Dennistown, August 8th.—Sir, birds to hand to-day, and all seem to be in good condition. Many thanks. Yours, D. Weatherhead." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, Acklington. August 8th.—Sir, I received all birds in fine condition, and am well pleased with them, for they give every satisfaction. I am really surprised at them, for the money believe me you deal fair. Yours, T. Farrington." "2, Lumley-terrace, East Hartlepool, August 5th.—Sir, received Goldfinch, and am quite satisfied. He is a nice bird for the money. Yours, F. Thompson." Hundreds similar letters open for inspection. All birds sold by me are guaranteed exactly as advertised. All are properly netted in Worcestershire by professional catchers employed regularly by me, and all properly on hard seed, and in perfect health and condition before sent out. A perusal of the "Wanted" column of this paper will show that I do not advertise for Goldfinches, etc., from any part of country, and then advertise them for sale as Worcestershire birds. I have more Worcestershire birds through my hands in a season than all other dealers together (denial challenged). If you want genuine cocks for your money, send to me, as I guarantee sex in every instance, and sell cocks as cocks, and hens as hens, not hens for cocks. Established 18 years. See Appliance column for all catchers' appliances.

HARRY ALLEN,

and champion of all champions. Now, gentlemen, I think I have proved to the world that I stand out alone. I have the following good birds for sale: Linnets, house-moulted, singing grand, and fit for any show bench, and taught by the champion Linnet of the world, 15/- each. These are equal to Linnets sold elsewhere at 30/- each. I also have some Linnets, house-moulted, singing grand, and pictures to look at; will suit catchers, or right for teaching young birds; they are real good birds are these, price 10/6. Also some house moulted Linnets at 7/6, singing grand, also right for catching with; all the above are with cages. Also my special book of secrets presented to each purchaser. I have a nice lot of Linnets, singing grand, with a beautiful polished contest cage, price 5/- each. My special Linnet, with contest cage, a packet of my special mixture, and my book of secrets, 4/- the lot. This is the best and cheapest lot ever put before the public. I have some splendid Linnets at 1/- and 1/6 each; these are my special line, and come from the same place as my champions come from, and when six months old I have sold them for £5 each. Those who want real value for their money please send at once, as they will not last long. I have some beautiful polished Lark cages, fit for any drawing-room, with Lark, singing grand, and instructions how to feed them, 3/6 the lot, real eye-openers; I defy the world to beat them at the price. Larks, singing grand, without the cage, 1/- and 1/6 each. My book of secrets, 1/6 each, which may be purchased in Leeds Bird Market, and which is acknowledged to be the finest in the world. Best birdlime in England, 1/- gill, or 2/- per pint. Best Linnet whistlers in the world, right for catchers, 6d. each, post paid; four packets of my special mixture, 1/-. I have hundreds of testimonials, which have been published in this paper. The best meeting place in Leeds for all visitors is Harry Allen's bird stall in Leeds Bird Market, every Tuesday and Saturday. It is impossible for me to answer all the letters I have received, so take the advantage of thanking one and all, through this paper, for their kind patronage. Will gentlemen please state full particulars when sending for any of the above to—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

A TIP!

If you want the best value for money you must send to the fountain head and save middlemen's profits. Without a doubt I have at present the best collection of Canaries ever seen in breeding rooms and aviaries; odd birds and matched pairs that cannot be equalled elsewhere at higher prices. Please note, I offer you genuine adult birds in full song and breeding condition—not sickly birds that are dear at any price. I offer you sound, healthy, reliable birds as follows: Yorkshire cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/-; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; Norwich cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6; hens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6; feeding and Mule breeding hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; Crested and Crestbreds, 10/6, 12/6 pair; St. Andreasberg Rollers for tutors and schoolmasters, cocks in full song by day and artificial light, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; a few reliable hens, 2/-, 2/6 each; neat travelling cages, 3d. each; full illustrated list of birds and cages, 1d. for postage. Eggsupas, the up-to-date cooked egg-food, 8d., 1/3, 1/10 tin, carriage paid; also specially prepared, with colour food, same prices. All birds travel at my sole risk; on seven days' approval.—Miss E. L. Storey, Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

Worth Reading

(Although not a "tip" as I am a Bird Specialist and not a "tipster."

Lismore Union, Co. Waterford Aug 11, 1908.—I beg to acknowledge the safe receipt of the pair of Yorkshire Canaries, unquestionably they are the most beautiful pair of birds of that species ever seen in this locality; all the good fanciers here that have seen them have admitted that they had never seen anything from any store or bird dealer to equal your birds. The cock was scarcely landed in the house, when he commenced to sing like a Nightingale. You may make any use of this letter you like, as I am of opinion the public should be made aware of where to find a man of uprightness and integrity in his dealings with the public, and not one to deceive them, like some of the deceptions I have seen perpetrated on the innocent country people.—J. Leahy, to W. Rudd.

BO'NESS AND DISTRICT O.A.

This society's First Feather Show was held on August 15th at the Coffee House Hall. In addition to the Canary classes, others had been provided for British birds and Mules, and these proved a source of attraction. Over 60 birds in all competed, and some really good specimens were to be found amongst them, especially in the British bird and Mule classes. During the day a large number of the interested public took advantage of the show to inspect the birds, which provided a very satisfactory exhibition. The arrangements were in the hands of Mr. Findlay McGillivray, the capable secretary, and everything passed off satisfactorily.

ANTWERP.

The 62nd annual free show was held at Antwerp, Belgium, on August 9th. Entries were confined to young Belgian birds, and the show was patronised by the Honorary President, Mr. James Dewar (Edinburgh). It is always a difficult time for these young birds during the show. They are not moulted at all, and only the first nest of young could be considered able to risk a debut. The prize of honour went to Mr. Jos. Coenen (Antwerp) with a Buff cock with broad massive shoulders, small head, and plenty of droop, and very good in shape and action.

YELL. COCK: 1, Vanderonvera; 2, 3, Mm. Verhees; 4, Ed. Petsyns; 5, Eug. Vankoctsem. BUFF: 1, Jos. Coenen; 2, Mm. Verhees; 3, M. Voyckaert; 4, Ed. Petsyns; 5, Vanderonvera. YELL. HEN: 1, 2, 4, Jos. BIGGAR.

In connection with the Biggar Farmers' Show, held on August 13th, the society provided four classes for cage birds. They were all nicely staged in a large tent in the show grounds. Mr. R. B. Forrest (Coulter) secured the centenary gold medal for best Canary in show, with a grand Scotch Fancy, which has won a nice few medals in different parts of the country. Some tip-top Britishers were also on view. The judging was in the hands of Mr. D. Martin (Rutherglen), whose awards seemed to give every satisfaction.

SCOTCH FANCY (10): 1, 2, Forrest. 1st noted winner in new hands; 2nd, another good one; 3, 4, Wilson, 3rd just lacks the quality of winner. COMMON CAN. (17): 1, Johnston, good green bird, in grand condition; 2, Walker, grand wing marked Border, much admired; 3, Aitken, nice yellow Border; 4, Dickson. NOR. (12): 1, 2, Sharp, 1st grand typical Norwich, barely ready yet; 2nd, another good one, with grand head and neat wings; 3, 4, Johnston, 3rd different type to winners. BRIT. (10): 1, 2, 4, Mason, 1st beautiful Redstart, in the pink of condition, much admired; 2nd, Wagtail, another nice exhibit; 4th, Goldie, grand blaze; 3, Sharp, Bramblefinch, a right good one in grand condition.—WM. SHARP.

LARGS O.S.

The 29th annual show was held in the Artillery Hall, on August 15th. There was a fair entry, but numbers were not as good in the Scotch Fancy Classes as this old show deserves. Mr. Hendry, who has so ably carried on the work in the secretarial department for many years, again officiated, ably assisted by Mr. Tappin, and under their management everything went smoothly along. Mr. Thomas Thomson (Glasgow) judged all classes, and his awards generally gave satisfaction. In the afternoon the show was well patronised.

YELL. CK. 1, Baird, nice exhibit. BUFF: 1, Neil O'Donnell, good, outstanding bird; 2, Reid, good size and colour; 3, Bowes. BUFF HEN: 1, Reid, good bird. YELL. CLUB REPORTS.

WORCESTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held on August 13th, at the Black Horse Hotel, Lowesmoor. Mr. Truman took the chair. It was proposed by Mr. Johnson, and seconded by Mr. Summerhill, "That we engage the Corn Exchange for our open cage bird show in November," having been successful in securing the patronage of the Y.C.C. and the S.Y.C.C. The report of our first feather show, held on July 9th, was read, and was considered most satisfactory. It showed a balance of £1 7s. 10d. clear profit after paying all necessary expenses. Mr. G. Phillpott was proposed and accepted as a member of the committee. This being all of the most important business a hearty vote of thanks to our worthy chairman brought a successful evening to a close.—A. L. Bisitor, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

At the usual monthly meeting held on August 13th at headquarters, Lockhart's Cafe, Briggate, Mr. Chambers presiding, there was a very fair attendance of members. After the usual business had been got through, Mr. Farrar gave us his paper on "Moulting and Colour Feeding," which was attentively listened to by all. He first dealt with the various ages at which young birds break into the moult. Then with the mixing of the colour food, and the methods adopted by him to ensure a quick and successful moult. He next spoke of the difficulty of getting some birds to break into the moult at the proper time, and the remedies for same. Mr. Farrar dwelt strongly on the subject of breeding for colour, giving us particulars of the way in which he paired his birds to get the desired effect. At the conclusion of his paper numerous questions were asked which Mr. Farrar answered to the satisfaction of all. At the close a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Farrar for his excellent paper. This brought an enjoyable evening to a close.—A. Wilkins, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

A meeting took place on August 10th at headquarters, the Church Institute, 60, Paddington-street, and was well attended. Mr. A. C. Burn took the chair. Messrs. R. B. King, B. W. Walker, and K. Horsey were elected members. Letters were read from Messrs. J. Simpson, A. W. Hart, K. Horsey, F. J. Martin, and the Executive of District 11 C.B.U. (J. W. Ramsden). Arising out of the letters from Mr. Martin in respect to the forfeiture of Messrs. Cooper Bros.' prize money, a discussion took place, with the result that the previous decision of the members is to be upheld, viz., that the same revert to the Association. A schedule consisting of 62 classes was drawn up for the annual show, taking place on November 20th and 21st. The following members gave in their names as promising to take part in a cricket match between the "Early Birds" C.C. and the Association, to be held on September 5th (Saturday) at 3 p.m., at the Paddington Recreation Ground, viz.:—Messrs. W. Knight, J. Simpson, J. Pooley, A. W. Hart, J. Ashby, W. E. Cobb, A. C. Burn, and V. Wynn. The chairman then rose to move a vote of condolence to Mr. J. Robson at the loss sustained by the death of his son. The vote was passed in reverent silence. Proceeding, the chairman said that on their behalf, and anticipating their wishes, the secretary had purchased a lovely wreath and sent it as a token of their sympathy.—Victor Wynn, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, "The Feathers," Westminster, on July 30th. Present: Messrs. Fulljames (in the chair), Silver, Weston, Goodchild, Vale, Dewhurst, Best, Trower, Maxwell, Cooper, Robson, Plumbridge, and Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. A letter was read in reference to supplying a block of the club's standard show cage, and it was proposed by Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, that the secretaries be instructed to state that the block could be supplied under the conditions that the user acknowledge in his advertisement, that it was by permission of the N.B.B. and M.C. Similar applicants were to be given the same privilege. A letter was read from Mr. R. J. Howe respecting the club supplying a form for exhibitors to forward to the secretaries with the entries they nominated for the "Cups." It was proposed by Mr. Weston, seconded by Mr. Trower, that the secretaries write to Mr. Howe and state that the committee had given his letter the greatest consideration, and had come to the decision that it would involve a lot of work and expense, and that it was the duty of the exhibitor to look after his own interests. When the word "Cup" did not appear in the catalogue opposite the bird they had nominated, it was the duty of the exhibitor to write to the secretary of that show, drawing his attention to the fact, and ask him to rectify the mistake by communicating with the secretaries of the N.B.B. and M.C. A great number of applications for the club's patronage were read, and the committee granted four gold, 17 silver, and 11 bronze medals to the following shows: Manchester, Clapham, Gateshead, Preston, Derby, Wallsend, Wellingborough, Newcastle, Cambridge, Crystal Palace, Scottish National, Dulwich and Peckham, Morecambe, Blackburn, Dulwich O.S., Nottingham, St. Helens, Welsh National, and Plymouth. It was decided not to hold a meeting in August unless the secretaries had any important business. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET ST., LONDON.

WESTERN F.S.

A special general meeting was held in the New Market Hotel, Cornwall-street, Plymouth. Mr. E. R. Norman presided over a very good muster of fanciers, met to consider the reorganisation of the society. After an animated discussion it was carried unanimously that the yearly subscription be reduced to 3s. 6d. It is hoped the reduction will induce fanciers to join the society. Mr. W. E. Chapple was elected secretary for the cage bird section, and a vote of thanks to the chairman ended a pleasant evening.—W. J. Sloman, Hon. Secretary.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

Usual monthly meeting held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on August 1st, President T. A. Boyd in the chair. The date of the annual club show was fixed for November 28th in the Templars' Hall, Glasgow. The schedule was revised, and is as follows:—Six classes for Norwich Plainheads, six for Crests and C.B.'s, seven for Border Fancies, four for amateurs who have never won a first prize, two for Yorkshires, and one for A.O.V. not classed, five for Mules and Hybrids, eight for British Birds, three for Foreign Birds, and a 10s. 6d. selling class A.V. Five silver cups and medals will be given for the best young birds bred by members, and a handsome trophy will be given for best young bird in Hall. Entry money is 3d. per bird, which also entitles fanciers to compete for prize money and 60 other special prizes. The members' list will close on September 5th, and all old fanciers or beginners should take this opportunity of being enrolled in Scotland's first and oldest club. The annual subscription is 5s., and a copy of the rules and any further information can be had from Geo. Smart, Hon. Sec., Carmyle-by-Glasgow.

GATESHEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held on August 12th, Mr. Almond in the chair. It was carried that the secretary be instructed to write Mr. Lowery and ask him to reconsider his resignation. Letters were read from the secretaries of the Foreign Bird Club, the National B.B. and M.C., the Northern B.B.M. and F.B.C., the Y.C.C., the Cinnamon C.C., the Green C.A. and the Northern Y.C.C. The members were highly gratified at having obtained the patronage of N.B.B. and M.C., Northern B.B.M. and F.B.C., Y.C.C., and Northern Y.C.C. (Cup Show), N.C.C. (Club Show), for our forthcoming show in December, with the prospect of others to follow. Mr. Crawhall's resignation having been read to members re the decision of the District No. 1 Committee of the C.B.U., some discussion ensued, and the following resolution was carried: "That Mr. Crawhall's resignation be not accepted, and that Mr. Crawhall has the full confidence of the members of this society." It was also carried "that the secretary be instructed to write to the Executive Council of the C.B.U. protesting against the severity of Mr. Crawhall's sentence, reported to us by our District No. 1. A lecture or washing exhibition will be arranged, later for the next meeting.—T. Taylor, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held at the Fawcett Street Cafe on August 15. There was another splendid attendance of members presided over by the chairman, Mr. J. Farrar. The usual correspondence was placed before the members. The only business of any importance was a notification from the Border Fancy Canary Club to the effect that we had been granted their patronage, and that they were giving a club medal for the best Border shown by a member of the B.F.C.C. We have now the support of four specialist clubs for our annual open show, November 20th and 21st, and we are hoping for the patronage of three or four more before we finally draw up our schedule. The ordinary business having been concluded, the usual discussion took place, the subject for the evening being the "Extermination of Red Mite." Several methods adopted by the members for the extermination of the pest were fully described, hollow perches, red-mite traps, insect powder, painting the cages with turpentine, paraffin, etc., all having their supporters. But the most popular method seemed to be the use of paraffin. The grey lice also came under discussion, and it was pointed out that these must not be confounded with the ordinary wood lice, which are sometimes seen running about the cage fronts, etc. The discussion was taken up by Messrs. J. Farrar, G. Clark, J. M. Walker, W. F. Swan, A. Elliot, J. Copeland, C. Waters, J. Riseborough, and W. Reid, and proved highly interesting, especially to the novice members present. — Reid and Maddison, secretaries.

WELSH CAGE BIRD CLUB.

A general and committee meeting were held at Merthyr on August Bank Holiday, Mr. T. Castree presiding. Although the meeting started at 1.45, it was not brought to a close until after 7 p.m. Several new members were added to the list of membership, and several were reinstated. After going through the list of applications for the patronage, and after comparing dates, it was found that on account of the dates clashing several shows would be left out. After the vote was taken the lucky ones turned out to be as follows:—Merthyr and Dowlais, November 11th and 12th, judge Mr. J. Robson; Cardiff, November 25 and 26, judges Messrs. Payne and Roe; Porth and Dist., December 2nd, judges Messrs. Robson and Castree; Swansea (Welsh National), December 10th, judges Messrs. Robson, Weston and Evans; and Tredegar F.F., January. It was also decided to give the patronage to a show in the North of Wales. After receiving Mr. D. L. Eynon's report re club show, it was decided to hold it at Brecon if arrangements could be made for a suitable hall. Mr. G. T. Jones will act as show secretary, Mr. D. H. Tedstone as show manager, and Mr. J. H. Jones as treasurer. Mr. Castree was elected judge for club show. The classification is as last year. Special prizes, etc., will be thankfully received by the above-named and also by the chairman. The specials were withheld from Aberdare, as that show did not comply with the requirements of the club, which prevented the majority of the members exhibiting at that show. The secretary read some correspondence which Mr. D. L. Eynon had received. The secretary was instructed to send a copy to the Fancy Press, together with a letter on behalf of the committee. Two cases were gone into, but after consideration it was decided that the committee go into them fully at a later date. Mr. Longden was elected by ballot papers on committee, and as auditor, but as the rules will not permit them to hold both, he gave preference to be on the committee. Mr. E. J. Bevan came next as auditor, which post he has accepted. I must remind the members that the annual subscriptions are now due, and should be sent on without delay.—D. H. Tedstone, Hon. Sec., 4, George-street, Brecon.

IN THE COURTS.

A SHERIFF'S SENSIBLE COMMENT

At Falkirk Sheriff Court, Robert Strange, miner, Reddingmuir, near Falkirk, recently admitted having contravened the Wild Birds' Protection Act by having had in his possession a brood of Larks. Respondent remarked that he lifted the birds to protect them from the children, as the nest was lying close to the road. He intended to let them away when they were able to fly. Sheriff Moffat remarked that he was willing to accept respondent's statement, seeing that the birds were not killed. His Lordship did not understand why people should be prohibited from taking wild birds and trying to tame them, but the Legislature had so enacted, and the law must be obeyed. He would impose a nominal fine of 1s.

ISLEHAM BIRD-CATCHING CASE.

Judgment Against the R.S.P.C.A.

Suggestion as to Society's Policy.

At the Soham County Court on August 14 his Honour Judge Mulligan gave his decision in the case of Fenn v. Reid, reserved from the last court, the previous part of this case being published in our issue of July 25.

His Honour said: The plaintiff, George Fenn, is a birdcatcher, and the defendant is an inspector of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. In the middle of January last the plaintiff caught 12 Goldfinches on the farm of a Mr. Watson, in the Reach, West Row, in the county of Suffolk. There was no close time in that county. The plaintiff took the birds to his house in Isleham, in Cambridgeshire, and kept them in the kitchen. In March he gave one of them to a Mr. Staples. By May, owing presumably to confinement and fright, three only of the remaining eleven survived. On the 1st of May the plaintiff sent his son to the railway station with a box containing his three surviving Goldfinches and a Yellowhammer. The box was labelled "Birds with care," and was addressed to "W. Coote, Elswick." The defendant, seeing the lad with the box, and hearing the noise of birds, seized the box and took it to the plaintiff's house. The plaintiff was very abusive and threatening. The defendant carried the box away, and subsequently (with P.C. Rowlinson) set the birds free. An information charging the plaintiff with an offence under the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880, was dismissed, after hearing all the evidence, but without costs. The plaintiff now claims £1 17s. 6d. for the loss of the birds. The defendant contends that the plaintiff in fact consented to his freeing them, and that he (defendant) is not liable in law. In that he is in error. Compulsion is not consent; vituperation is not agreement. With regard to the nature of the claim, Goldfinches are the prettiest of singing birds, and, singularly, birds are the only beings that share with men and angels that two-fold gift, the power of moving and the capacity of being moved by sweet song. Now it may be very desirable for the Society, if it can, to obtain an Act of Parliament declaring that Goldfinches, Skylarks, and some other British singing birds should be deemed to be the property of the Crown, and making it a misdemeanour to capture or injure or sell them without a licence. No doubt the Press will assist in bringing about such a change, for, as I have said elsewhere, journalism is the handmaid of justice. But at present singing birds, like bees, belong to the class of animals—ferae naturae. I had to consider the law relating to this class in 1907. The beekeeper has a qualified property in bees which have been hived, and the law permits a birdcatcher to have a similar property in his unfortunate captives. In 1907 I held that a plaintiff beekeeper was entitled to damages for such loss, if any, as he had sustained by reason of a defendant having driven a cluster of his bees from the defendant's tree with unnecessary violence and barbarism. In the present case, although this defendant's action was well meant, and resulted in setting the captives free, I must, as the law stands, hold that it was wrongful, that it deprived the plaintiff of property, and that the plaintiff is entitled to damages. I assess the damages at £1 10s. There will be judgment for that amount and for the costs.

Inspector Reid: Will your Honour kindly allow me to communicate with the chief office before paying the amount?—The Registrar: You will have 14 days to pay.—Cambridge Daily News.

The Ancients and Cuckoos.

Pliny wrote of the feelings of the foster parent of the young Cuckoo:—"She joyeth to see so goodly a young bird, and wondereth at herself that she hath hatched and reared so trim a chick." Perhaps he was right, for observation shows that the Titlark is as anxious for the safety of the young alien as she is for her own chick.

THE YOUNG NATURALIST.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Our Pet Thrush

We have a pet Thrush which we had when it was quite young. It had a few feathers on it, but when it stretched its neck, the bare flesh could be seen. It feeds on Softbilo and snails, which make it sing. It is a pretty bird, and lives in a large cage. When we first had it, we had to feed it ourselves, as it was so young; and it is now so tame that on nice, fine nights we sometimes leave 't out, and it sings very loudly next day.—Sent by Florence Tanner, 2, India Road, Diamond Road, Slough.

Parental Sagacity.

Mr. Jesse mentions that a gentleman who was looking at a ploughman saw a Partridge run from her nest and almost crushed by the horses' hoofs. Being certain that the next furrow of the plough would bury both the eggs and nest, he watched for the return of the plough, when to his great astonishment the nest, previously containing twenty-one eggs, he found was vacant. After a search he found the bird sitting upon the eggs under a hedge near forty yards from the vacant one, to which place she and her mate had removed the whole number of eggs in less than twenty minutes.—Sent by Cecil Hobart (aged 11), 22, Paddock Street, Heigham Street, Norwich.

A Raven's Artful Scheme.

A Yorkshire man had a raven which, he says, is beginning to show its sense. He had an iron "scoop" in the bird's run for bathing and drinking purposes. Frequently, of course, he had to change the water. One day he watched the bird repeatedly duck its head in and try to shake the water over its back. It was not a success, however, and the weather was hot. It did its best, but the dish was too small for a plunge. At last its sense showed itself. The bird hopped round the dish, seized the handle, and springing on it, upset all the contents. Then with a chuckling croak he shouted "Eureka," or a word something to that effect, and rolled over in the spilt water.—Sent by Harry M. Best (age 14), 11, Park View, New Farnley, near Leeds, Yorks.

TWITTERINGS.

Will secretaries of shows and fanciers generally please note, writes Mr. H. J. Ford, that my address is Garth View, Llanishen Street, Cardiff?

Mr. A. Brown has been appointed to judge the Houghton-le-Spring and District Cage Bird Society's annual show, to be held on December 19th, writes H. Fenwick, the hon. secretary.

As the meeting called for August 29th is a special and important one, writes Mr. J. Turner, secretary of the Long Eaton and District C.B.S., all members will please make an effort to attend.

Kindly note our change of address from 9, Chantry Lane to 39, Lord Street, where in future all communications should be addressed write Messrs. Moore and Crowston, hon. secs. of the Grimsby and District O.S.

Kindly permit me to say how much I appreciate CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. P. H. Harris (Bedford Square, London, W.C.). Friday is the day in the week to me. I have to cycle 14 miles when on holiday to get it. Still, that's a small matter. I send best wishes for the continued success of CAGE BIRDS.

Fanciers in and around Wallsend, writes Mr. Jas. Johnson, hon. secretary of the Wallsend and Mid-Tyne C.B.A., should not miss hearing Mr. Jas. Shepherd's lecture at the next meeting of the Association, to be held at the Station Hotel, Wallsend, on August 27th, at 7.30 p.m. All are heartily invited to attend.

Owing to the date of our next meeting falling on the night of the Glasgow trades holiday, writes Mr. J. H. Adam, the secretary of the Glasgow and Western Counties Norwich Club, we have postponed it till September 5th, when we shall consider the classification for the annual club show.

We have now the support of four specialist clubs for our annual open show to be held on November 20th and 21st, write Messrs. Reid and Maddison, hon. secretaries of the Sunderland C.B.A., and we are hoping for the patronage of three or four more before finally drawing up our schedule.

Mr. F. Easterling has been engaged to judge cage birds at the Grand United Metropolitan Show, to be held under the auspices of the South Metropolitan F.A. and the Civil Service F.A., on December 3rd and 4th, at the Avondale Hall, Landor Road, Clapham, S.W., writes Mr. A. Watson, the show secretary and treasurer.

OBITUARY.

MR. WILLIAM REYNOLDS.

We regret to learn that Mr. Walter Reynolds, the hon. secretary of the Highgate, Hampstead, and District C.B.S., has had the misfortune to lose his father, Mr. William Reynolds. The funeral took place on August 8th, at three o'clock, in the churchyard of the little country village of Ashby Magna, near Lutterworth, Leicestershire. Deceased was 78 years of age, and leaves a widow of 83 years of age. He was a lover of birds, and Mr. Walter Reynolds informs us that he remembers his father having a favourite Skylark and Bullfinch, both of which he used to take to the meadows in order that they might hear other birds sing, and so improve their own singing powers.

We have received from the hon. secretary, Mr. A. Watson, 116, Maurice Avenue, Noel Park, Wood Green, London, N., a copy of the Civil Service Fanciers' Association Manual for 1908-9. It contains, in addition to the Association rules, lists of officers' and members' names and addresses and the balance-sheet for the year ending March 31st. A copy of the manual may be had free on application to the secretary.

Quarter-Master-Sergeant Cant, A.P.C., sec. of the Hamilton Cadzou Oaks O.S., writes that the judges for the annual show to be held on November 21st are: Messrs W. Muir (Kilmarnock), for Norwich; W. Hamilton (Hamilton) and J. Calderwood (Dumfries), for Border Fancies; and J. Mason (Peebles) and J. Taylor (Greenock) for British and foreign birds. The classification will be the same as that of last year, except that a class for Cinnamon Borders has been added, which brings the total to 50 classes. The entry fee will be 1s. 6d., and the prizes 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d.

The Rev. C. D. Farrar, the author of "Through a Bird Room Window," writes Mr. Wm. Ireland, treasurer of the Leeds C.B.S., has kindly promised to address the members and friends of our Society at their monthly meeting on September 5th. His subject will be, "A Talk on Birds." This will give CAGE BIRDS readers residing in or near this district an opportunity to hear the rev. gentleman who writes such excellent and humorous articles in your valuable paper. The committee and members extend a hearty welcome to all. The chair will be taken at 7.30 by our President, Mr. F. Somers, M.R.C.V.S.

Every man likes to know what he is eating, and every fancier ought to know what he is giving his birds to eat. When you give them Ramsden's Peppers you are feeding them on a pure, unadulterated vegetable product, fully guaranteed under the Food Act. Ramsden's Sweet Pepper is sold not only for colour-feeding cage birds, but is supplied to noted chefs throughout the country for the preparation of soups and fancy dishes. When wanting the finest peppers the earth produces buy Ramsden's, and shun substitutes. There are no peppers "just as good" as Ramsden's. Don't forget that fact.—Advt.

We are to have the Yorkshire British Bird and Mule Club's patronage at our open show in October, writes Mr. A. Waud, hon. secretary of the York C.B.S., and we are expecting a very large show. We have 31 classes open and 9 classes for members. Our judge is Mr. J. Robson, and we have also engaged Mr. Anthony Brown (Gateshead) to judge members' classes.

The judges selected for the City of Glasgow O.A. show and competition, to be held on October 16th and 17th, writes Mr. Alexander Macdonald, the secretary, are: For Scotch Fancies, Messrs. D. Holden (Muirkirk), G. T. Hope (Edinburgh), D. Law (Dundee), D. Martin and Alex. Clark (Rutherglen), and J. Knox (Glasgow); for Belgians, Mr. G. Fulton (Partick); for Norwich Plainheads, Mr. J. Adams (Dundee); for Crests, Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh); for Mules, British and Foreign, Messrs. M. Craig and A. Muir (Glasgow); and for Borders, Messrs. H. Bennet (Kelso) and G. Somerville (Auchinheath). With such an excellent list of judges the show should prove a great success.

Permit me to congratulate you upon the fine picture of my broken cap silver Lizard ("the worthy son"), which is reproduced on the front of last week's CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Hampshire (Oldham). This bird was a rather late-bred youngster, so was only exhibited at five shows. He secured first and special at Pendleton, first and special for the best Lizard at the Scottish National, and finished up with first at the Crystal Palace. In addition to these honours he won two thirds and second in CAGE BIRDS competition. I may say that my "Silver King," which secured sixteen prizes in his second year, was father to the above-named youngster. I wish CAGE BIRDS and its staff every success.

I wish to thank you very much, writes Mr. Wm. Adam (Rochdale) for the great favour bestowed on me in the reproduction of the picture of my Lancashire Coppy on the front page of CAGE BIRDS, and I can assure you I was taken by surprise when I got my copy of CAGE BIRDS last week to find that a bird of mine should be worthy of a place in your valuable paper, with such a large circulation. I may say that the bird is still alive, and looks as if it will stand another season's work on the show bench, with a repetition of its former success. I may also say that I have had a very fair season with my Lancashires, about 18 young ones, with a promising bird or two amongst them, having been successfully reared. I am at present spending my holidays in Suffolk, where, of course, there is a change from Canaries to British birds, the district swarming with all kinds of British birds. I had the opportunity of seeing a nest in which a young Cuckoo had been reared by a pair of Wagtails. I wish CAGE BIRDS all the success it deserves.

An Appeal.

Entries only number two in the cage bird section up to the time of penning these lines, writes Mr. W. R. S. Hill, hon. sec., Kingswood and St. George (Bristol) Show. Please give us a helping hand, fanciers; we are under C.B.U. rules. Will accept entries and classify up to Sunday's post (Aug. 23rd).

He Read Father's "Cage Birds."

An inspector was recently examining some boys in a suburban board school. He asked one of them to parse the following sentence: "Hark! How the Lark Sings."

When he reached the noun, the inspector stopped him, and said, "You're wrong, Tommy. You said 'masculine gender.'"

"Yes, sir," replied Tommy.

"Well, it's not," returned the inspector; "I thought you would have known that 'Lark' was common gender!"

"Common gender!" retorted this promising young fancier, contemptuously, "that shows you know nothin' about birds, sir. Why, it's only the cock wot sings!"

Kilmarnock's Silver Cup.

The Kilmarnock O.C.B.S. have been presented, writes Mr. James B. Y. Murdoch, the secretary, with a handsome silver cup by that well-known and respected Scotch Fancy breeder and exhibitor, Mr. Robt. Findlay (Fernichan Darvel). The cup is for the best young Scotch Fancy at our show, to be held on December 4th and 5th, the bird to have been bred and shown by exhibitor. The cup is to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, before becoming the full property of any one. It is to be called "The Findlay Cup." We hope that Scotch Fancy breeders will show their appreciation of Mr. Findlay's kindness, by sending along a bumping entry, as this cup comes at a very opportune time to awaken the interest in the "Bird of Circle" again. My committee take this oportunity of thanking Mr. Findlay through your columns for his generosity, and wish him success on the show bench in the season just commencing.

"Father William" and the Birds.

"Father William," an ancient shepherd, is the principal figure in Mr. Bensusan's book, "Country-side Chronicles." He has that general detestation of birds which is so common, and so foolish, amongst the English peasantry, but this garrulous old man cannot stand even their singing: "'Fore it's light an' time to get up they're at it, breakin' mo night's rest, an' quarrellin' over the wittles. Lor', all birds is as quarrelsome as dogs or women, an' that's a fact! An' I'm right sick o' they Larks, what never stops singin'." Then the voice of a Cuckoo sounded across the field. "Aye," said Father William, wrathfully shaking his stick in that direction, "mock me, ye varmint, fr I can't reach nigh ye, an' well ye know it, seein' I'm a pore ole man, and don't get about as I uset.' The only birds that Father William would allow to exist were Partridges—for his betters to shoot—"gulls, for they eats varmints on th' land, an' fish, an' I couldn't never 'bide fish 'An th' herons, what catches eels, for I can't abide they. An' chicken an' ducks, if you calls 'em birds, an' that's all."

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

A meeting of the Council was held on Aug. 15th at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. John Greaves in the chair. The following business was transacted:—1. That the Cage Bird Union's proposals re the working arrangement (as published in your issue of July 18th) be laid upon the table; 2, that the Yorkshire Union appoint a sub-committee to work along with the Y.C.C. and the C.M.Y.C.C., and the O.N.P.C., in respect to fanciers' grievances with the railway companies; 3, that the minimum number of classes at a Yorkshire Union Show be 18, which number includes the novice classes; 4, the suggestion as regards delegates' expenses was left over for future discussion.—SAMUEL DEAN, sec.

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

WITH fanciers this is the time of "hopes and fears." How we watch our birds as they come through the moult! First one and then another raises our spirits with the hope of possessing a winner, alas! often only to dash them down again as some unwelcome trait makes its appearance, most times where least expected. It seems to be that those of our stock which in first feather possessed faults which "may" improve have a happy knack (or should I say unhappy?) of not improving, and those few with which it seemed nothing could go wrong develop faults that were undreamed of. Such is the Fancy!

THE Yorkshire Union has now to face one or two difficulties that will require no little study for their proper elucidation. The principal one is the question of the number of societies comprising its ranks and the probable addition of several more societies in the near future. The number of societies affiliated is now twenty-seven, eighteen of which are holding open shows this season, extending from the first Saturday in October to the 13th of February, with only two vacant dates, viz., Boxing Day (December 26th) and the Palace Show date (February 6th). This programme, as is well known, is more than either the birds or the fanciers can reasonably undertake. For the shows to commence early in October and close at the end of the year, which will give twelve or thirteen shows, is thought to be quite sufficient. But how to bring this about as things are at present is the problem that needs solution.

SHOULD, however, a goodly number of societies decide to join, particularly those that are not in such close proximity to the already affiliated districts, the ways and means would be made decidedly easier. How would it answer if the whole of the Yorkshire societies could be got together and then divided up into a number of districts—say, three or four—according to the total of societies and fanciers in such districts, each one to form its own union, govern its own affairs, and provide its own competitions, the whole to have a governing body composed of two or three representatives from each district, to settle matters of great importance, and be the means of preserving the good fanciership in the whole of the county?

THE novice members of the Y.U. who intend to compete for the medals given in the novice classes at next season's shows will do well to acquaint the secretary of their society of their intentions, so that they can be registered in the Union as novices. Any person not so registered will not be eligible to compete; don't forget.

THE question of delegates' expenses at the Y.U. meeting on Saturday last was left open for future discussion. What is wanted is an equitable and workable idea, so that the matter may be thrashed out thoroughly by the end of the year, ready to be included in the new rules to be voted upon for next season's working. "STRAIGHT 'UN."

BEGINNERS: READ "CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

A SURE WAY OF CATCHING MICE.

Sent by H. Cartwright, 32, Whitfield, Glossop, Derbyshire.

Mice are a continual nuisance in birdrooms, and I send you a sketch of a method which I have employed for over 12 months now for the catching of these pests. I find that it works very well. To make the trap, first get a basin and a piece of cheese or anything else which will attract mice. Damp this piece of cheese (or whatever the bait may be) and stick it on to the inside of the basin. The next thing is to get a penny, and, standing it up on its edge, make the basin rest firmly but freely on it. Care should be taken to see that the structure is sufficiently firm to make it immovable by anything less than a pull at the bait by a mouse. The mice, when they smell the cheese, will try to pull it off the inside of the basin. The least touch, I find, fetches the basin down, and the mouse is a prisoner. —H. CARTWRIGHT.

FOR PREVENTING SWEATING.

Sent by W. C. Drew, 156, Hardington Street, Moss Side, Manchester.

Having read in CAGE BIRDS much re the sweating hen question just recently, and having been troubled with the same complaint in the case of one of my own hens, which this year has kindly sweated to death two nests of three (each time when the young were eight or nine days old), I thought it was time to look round for something to stop it. I discovered the following method, which up to now has worked admirably. I have a nest of young Canaries nearly fledged, and as healthy as possible, and I find the nest is always cool. I find the soil which I use absorbs any extra moisture which may be in the nest or on the hen. But too much nesting material must not be given, but only enough to line it comfortably for the bird to sit in. My hen took to this improvised nest very readily, laying her first egg three days after being paired up, and now she has three fine plump healthy Yorkshires twelve days old to be going on with. I can only attribute this to this nest box which I have used and of which I send a description to you. It may be the means of saving somebody else a nest or so even yet this year, the same as it has done in my case. In the first place make a nest box as per illustration, 4 inches wide by 4½ inches long by 3 inches deep, from a cigar box or something similar. Then go to a field and cut a grass sod of the same size to fit. Get a round ¼lb. tobacco box to mark out the hole for the nest, and cut down to within half an inch of the bottom with this. Then take the surplus soil away from the inside and nicely round it off with the fingers. Place it in the nest box, and put both in a warm oven to dry slowly. When dry it is ready for use. It is a very cheap contrivance, costing nothing but the labour.—W. C. DREW.

Wild Birds in India.

The Hindu religion forbids the taking of life, consequently wild birds flourish to an alarming extent in India. The Crows and Sparrows are more than a nuisance, as they fly into the open window and appropriate anything which takes their fancy, even to one's breakfast toast; or any dainty morsel on the table may be whisked off while one's back is turned for a minute. Many are the tales told of the impudence and artfulness of the Crows. Nothing is safe from their attentions; pet dogs especially have a lively time of it, as they seem to take a delight in teasing and annoying them.

ST. HELEN'S O.S.

Under the presidency of Mr. John Hesketh, members and friends met at the Clubhouse, George Inn, Water Street, on August 10, when Mr. Barker Clegg (Manchester), the well-known expert, delivered a very instructive and interesting lecture on the Norwich Plainhead Canary. Mr. Clegg expressed great pleasure at meeting so many St. Helen's fanciers, and referred to the time when the exhibitors of this district, especially with Lizards, held their own with the best fanciers in the North of England. He proceeded to illustrate by means of models that have from time to time been submitted to the Norwich Plainhead Club, the type of bird required for the show bench of the present day. He described his method of preparing colour food, and surprised some of his hearers by remarking that he had no difficulty in getting his birds to eat all that was necessary, and, in conclusion, described how he got his birds into condition, and his method of washing them. A vote of thanks to the lecturer, proposed by Mr. Dickinson, and seconded by Mr. Grice, and another to Mr. Hesketh, for presiding, proposed by Mr. Barton, and seconded by Mr. Sherlock, brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.—R. GIBBIE, Asst.

DULWICH O.S.

Committee meeting held August 13th. Mr. W. R. Wall took the chair in the absence of Mr. G. F. Woolhouse. It was decided to have an outing on September 17th, to Amberley, Sussex. From there the party will walk to Arundel to visit the Duke of Norfolk's magnificent park and grounds, and back again to Amberley for hot lunch. Then it will ramble to the village of Bury for tea. The arrangements will be in the hands of Mr. J. P. Lovesy, and the time of departure and price of tickets will be announced shortly. Classification for the table show of British and Foreign Birds was arranged. It was decided to add three classes for Canaries (any age), Norwich, Yorks, and A.O.V., and the show is to be followed by a judging competition. The following were elected as a sub-committee to arrange classification for annual show:—Messrs. G. F. Woolhouse, J. Foster, W. R. Wall, W. Brooks, J. Wilmot, A. E. Rogers, and L. C. S. Mazzoni. Mr. E. Godwin gave a preliminary exhibition of pictures with his splendid lantern, and from slides made by Mr. Lovesy taken from subjects on the occasion of the last ramble, etc. The outing mentioned above it is hoped will present more opportunities, so that the members may enjoy an evening in this way during the winter months.—ROGERS AND MAZZONI, hon. secs.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence to pay postage expenses, &c., otherwise their letters will not receive attention.

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—Readers are requested to carefully study past numbers and current issue before submitting questions. By doing so they may save trouble and unnecessary repetition.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Moulting Queries.

W.C.M.—1. It is rather too early yet to be anxious over birds that have not begun to moult, and certainly too early to think of adopting forcible methods to start the moult. By the time this reply appears your young birds may have started moulting quite naturally, but even if they have not, you need not worry about it as long as they are healthy and active. If they seem to postpone the event too long for your patience a half teaspoonful of maw seed daily, a few shreds of saffron, and twenty drops of sherry in the water three times a week, and keeping the birds fairly warm, will help to hasten on the moult. 2. When they get stuck in moult, the best plan is to keep them warm, and in a rather moist tent, and treat as advised under No 1, with the addition of half a teaspoonful of egg-food every second day in lieu of maw seed if the bird is not already having egg-food as a vehicle for colour food. By the bye, this trouble frequently occurs from a chill such as being in a cold draught, which may perhaps incidentally suggest a cause for the delayed moulting you are anxious about. Also when birds get stuck in moult you must guard most carefully against their having another chill. 3. A fairly high moist temperature, combined with the treatment mentioned in 1 and 2, and keeping the birds covered and quiet, is the best means of getting the moult over quickly. It is far better than trying to force it with drugs.

Sore Feet.

A.M.M.—I do not think there is anything more serious the matter with the bird than a certain amount of sore tenderness of the legs and feet, which is very apt to arise during the progress of the moult, and often makes the bird palpably reluctant to use its feet more than is absolutely necessary. This soreness may be greatly relieved by gently catching the bird each day and holding the legs and feet in a strong lukewarm solution of boracic acid for a few minutes—say, a small teaspoonful of borncle acid dissolved in a half teacupful of warm water. After bathing them, dry carefully on a bit of soft rag, and gently smear the legs and feet with a little olive oil or pure vaseline. Use this very sparingly so as to leave no appreciable quantity sticking on to collect the sand from the cage floor. If the hind claw still sticks out after the soreness has disappeared, give the bird only small rounded perches, about the size of a lead pencil, for a week or two, and the claw will probably come all right.

They Sneeze and Die.

Eager.—Take my first piece of advice, which is: have a post-mortem on the next bird that dies from the symptoms you narrate. In many points your trouble is very similar to septic fever, and you cannot too soon be certain of the fact whether you have this disease amongst your birds. Until you have this information, I would also advise you to isolate all the healthy birds, leaving those that are sick in their present quarters and removing the healthy ones to a fresh place, and allow no communication between the two sets. If any of the healthy ones afterwards become ill with the same symptoms immediately return them to the room containing the sick birds, and let them take their chance with the rest, rather than remain to spread infection among the healthy stock. As a staple diet give Canary seed in unlimited quantities, with a little crushed sponge cake and bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed on alternate days, a half teaspoonful of scalded rape every second day, and a pinch of hemp on each of the intervening days. Give no green-food, unless it be a few plantain stalks, whilst the trouble lasts. In the drinking water give first, for one day only, as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece, and afterwards give twenty drops of brandy and four drops of laudanum in each ounce of drinking water. As soon as the bowels get all right again stop this, and give five drops each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid every other day for a week or so instead.

Asthma in Aviary.

W. B., Barnsley.—It is, of course, quite possible for the bird to have been ill and escaped notice when purchased, but it is not likely that it would affect your own birds in the large aviary with asthma. It might have been used to a warm room, and the removal to your aviary may have brought on the complaint. In one particular you certainly went wrong; that was, in turning the bird into your aviary at once when bought. A strange bird should never be turned into an aviary of healthy ones until it has been kept isolated in a cage for a few days to be sure that it is sound and healthy. If not already so provided you should enclose a portion of the aviary, so as to form a snug, comfortable retreat to which the birds can retire at will, and in each half pint of drinking water add two teaspoonfuls each of sherry and glycerine and thirty drops of eucalyptus oil each day for a week. Shake it well when mixing. It will not harm the healthy birds to partake of the mixture. Also give a little egg-food for a few days in which well mix a few drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and just a slight dash of hot pepper.

Seeds for Aviary.

Wm. B.—Your present dietary contains far too much linseed and niger. I should advise you to drop these two items out of your regular dietary altogether, and substitute in their place a half part each of teazle and thistle seeds. As an occasional treat you might throw in a little of a mixture of equal parts of linseed, inga, millet, and oats. A few cracked sunflower seeds occasionally would also prove acceptable, and do no harm. You would doubtless find it much more economical to give the staple seeds in separate vessels, instead of mixing them together as it would prevent much waste. The waste seeds from threshing machines may be given as a treat occasionally if you do not mind the risk of importing some very troublesome weeds into your garden.

Deformed Toe.

H. K. P.—The method you adopted of keeping the toe extended with copper wire, though it would seem to serve its purpose quite well enough so long as no accident happened, is not free from objections. It seems to add very considerably to the risk of the feet getting caught in the wires, or any projection about the cage. Personally I never found any difficulty in getting a bit of the very thin mending wool, such as you may purloin from the penny cards which the powers that be often use to stick on. The difficulty of getting the knot to stick in the wool when tied is easily overcome by tying the knot, cutting the loose ends off rather closely, and just touching the knot with some quick drying adhesive—seccotine, I use—and holding the bird a few minutes until it has begun to dry.

Canaries Out of Doors.

V. G. R.—First of all you must know that it is now much too late to think of trying to breed anywhere this year. The great majority of birds at the present time are either moulting, or are rapidly approaching the commencement of the moult, and consequently will not make any attempt at breeding. All you can now do is to keep a sharp look out and procure good healthy stock as opportunity may offer in readiness for next year. To take your queries in order:—1. Whether your foreign Finches would interfere with the Canaries' breeding operations depends upon the species to which they belong, and the size of your aviary. On both these points you are silent. But as a rule it is best to keep breeding pairs apart from ornamental or singing birds of other species. 2. Any hardy robust breed would be suitable, provided you took due care to obtain only specimens which had been cold bred—that is, not accustomed to artificial heat. Taking them in order, the following would be most likely to succeed; Common (cross-bred) breeds, Norwich, common German birds, Yorkshire, or Border Fancy. 3. It is not necessary to keep them in pairs. One cock to three hens, or two cocks to from six to eight hens would be quite sufficient. 4. If, as you suggest, there is plenty of space in the aviary, it is not necessary to separate the young at all. They will emancipate themselves quite early enough if left to themselves.

A Moby Yorkshire.

M.B.—The bird is probably going into moult. See it is not exposed to any draught or chill, and keep it in a cosy place where the heat is fairly regular, but do not overheat it. Discontinue the hemp, giving a few grains only twice a week, and every second day a pinch of maw seed. Let the staple diet consist of three parts canary to one summer rape, and for the first week on the alternate days between giving maw seed, give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with five or six drops of sherry on it. In the drinking water give twelve drops of Chemical Food daily for a week. If the panting has not ceased by that time discontinue the latter and give instead twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and five each of paregoric and syrup of squills in each ounce of drinking water, well shaken together, each day for a week. See the bird or cage is not troubled with insects. Give a little chickweed, or a few plantain stalks, daily.

Stuck in Moult.

J. H.—I am afraid the Roller is in a very bad way, and will probably have departed this life before any reply reaches you. But if it has not, begin treatment by placing its cage on a table, set a pint mug of boiling water in front of it—a piece of card stuck between the cage front and the side of the mug will prevent the bird putting in its beak if it wished—and cover the cage and mug all over under one cover of flannel or woollen, so that the steam is kept in the cage. A woollen shawl makes a good cover. In about ten minutes remove the mug of water, place the cage in a warm cosy place, and keep it covered over for an hour or two to prevent the bird's getting chilled. After this, keep a lighter covering over the cage for a few days, giving the bird just enough light to find food and water freely. This should help it to break into moult. Feed on plain canary seed only, with just a pinch of rape three times a week. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey and five of tincture of saffron, every second day for a week, and on the intervening days a small piece of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and half a teaspoonful of maw seed. If you lose any more young birds you would do well to get a post-mortem on the next that dies to see whether you have septic fever in your stock. Drop the egg food for the present. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple, give a pinch of maw every second day whilst moulting, a pinch of hemp twice a week, and a little bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake twice a week. Give a few plantain stalks, instead of green food.

Roller Hoarse.

"Crummy."—The bird may be simply losing his voice in consequence of the moult coming on, and will regain it alright after the moult is over. Of course, there is the possibility that it might have been exposed to a slight draught, in which case this must be avoided in future. Give it a small piece of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it every second day for a week, and on alternate days twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and five of syrup of squills in its drinking water. This should put it all right.

Undesirable Tenants.

H. R. L.—It is no uncommon experience for one to find after thoroughly overhauling a cage to eradicate red mites that the mites are re-installed in the cleaned cage in a very short time. Assuming the cage or cages are thoroughly done, and all joints and crevices, attended to properly, the secret lies in the fact that the wall or the support on or against which the cages rested was overlooked, and the cages, being infested with stray colonies of mites, it is easy to see where the second crop came from. Then, again, if only a single cage is left undone it will very quickly infest the clean ones. From this you will gather the necessity of getting through the work from end to end as quickly as possible, consistent with thoroughness, leaving absolutely nothing about either the cages, supports, or surroundings untouched. For painting on the cage joints, perch ends, etc., a solution of camphor—one ounce in half-pint of methylated spirits—is about the best thing you could have. For spare cages, saturate them with paraffin and place out in the sun to dry, and deodorize before enamelling and varnishing.

Mites and Colour Food.

H.S.B.—1. Concerning the mites, see reply to H. R. L." As your cages appear to be so badly infested you certainly ought to have given all a thorough overhaul before the moult commenced, being careful to miss nothing, and go over the immediate surroundings of the cages, as advised to "H. R. L." But if your birds have already begun to moult it would not be wise to disturb them altogether. You should use the fluid rather freely two or three times a week and it will keep the pest within bounds until you can have a thorough turnout. You need not be afraid of the smell; it is quite temporary, and perfectly harmless, even to birds occupying the cages to which it is applied. Give also quassia baths two or three times a week. Pour a quart, or thereabouts, of hot water on to a teaspoonful of chips, stir occasionally, and when tepid, use for the baths. 2. Your proportion of colour food is very good, if, as I imagine, three heaped teaspoonfuls would equal not less than six ordinary teaspoonfuls not heaped. This amount should bring out the birds to a nice rich colour, especially if you added about as much natal every second day as would lie on a threepenny-piece. Or about the same quantity of carbonate of iron might be used instead.

Brevities.

Sample of Canary Seed (W.G.).—The sample of seed is small and some of it rather thin, but otherwise it is a very nice one, being perfectly sweet, clean, and apparently well ripened and harvested. The only objection to such a sample is its smallness of grain, which causes an undue proportion of husk or kernel to exist in the bulk.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

The County for Linnet Song.

R.S.—I dare not venture to give an opinion as to which county the "best singing Linnets come from" (even if I knew), for people who advertised Linnets and lived in other counties would kick up a hul-a-baloo if I did so. And rightly so, too, for I am quite sure no one county excels all others in the beauty of song of its Linnets. Why should it? And how could it? That larger Linnets come from certain districts than from others is quite true. But that is a matter of environment and food supply, for these, of course, can easily be more favourable to the Linnet in certain localities than in others. Lovers of Linnet-song, however, do not favour very large birds; they say, and it is quite true, that this kind are sluggish, and cannot be got to "open out" free enough.

"Red Cap" Ailing.

G Simpson.—I take it that by "Redcap" you mean a Goldfinch. I only wish I could help to cure him, friend; but what hope can there be for a bird which has sat for three weeks with "feathers ruffled up" and "head under wing?" Why let such a long period go by before writing? Delicate little creatures like birds require treatment at the first symptoms of anything being wrong with them; you can't put them round otherwise. The wonder is that a Goldie, of all birds, should have lingered on such a length of time as three weeks. Further, you do not say how you have been feeding him, nor the state of his excreta (watery or otherwise), and this handicaps me—can only guess when no details are given. If it is alive when you read this, try the effect of clearing out its system. Get a little fluid magnesia from a chemist, and stir a teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give in a glass, or earthenware vessel only, and give a second dose (fresh) next day. At the same time, find the bird a change of food; ripe seeding thistleheads would be a grand thing for him, while seeding groundsel and hardheads would be sure to be appreciated. In the way of ordinary seeds, give an ample daily supply of lightly-cracked hemp (made fresh every day), teazle, niger and maw, with a little canary. If he seems to be recovering and livening up, after his bowels have been well moved, dissolve in the drinking water daily as much citrate of iron as will just lie on a threepenny-piece (stop the magnesia, of course). Get one ounce of the crystals from a chemist. Give the iron for about ten days. But please write next time before your bird (if unlucky enough to have one ill) has a foot and two toes in the grave. We can't perform miracles (unfortunately), and it would be little short of one if a bird in the state you describe were to be restored to health.

Young Light Mules.

R. K., Greenock.—The bird with the light back and tail appears to be very nicely marked, but the other seems to be too heavily variegated to be of much value on account of its light feathers alone. Neither will be of use for the show bench unless (1) well above the average for size, (2) rich in colour and tightly feathered, and (3) a cock. They are well worth colour-feeding, certainly, and I strongly advise you to put them on pepper immediately. It all depends on how the birds moult as to whether they will make good show birds (or, rather, the lightest one of the two). But they will not be at their best until two or three years old. Every Mule and Hybrid is handicapped during its first season when competing against older examples of the same variety—the latter are better developed and better in colour; there is no "weight for age" allowance. It is the best plan not to show a young bird much during its first year; give it a chance to keep a sound constitution, and so develop as it ought to do with the second moult. Variegated birds (such as yours are) have not the value of clear, or ticked, or evenly-marked Goldfinch Mules, and could only beat the latter if decidedly superior in size, shape, and colour. To give anything like an accurate opinion as to their value, it would be necessary to see the birds.

An Easy Muling Problem.

W. R. Z.—You ask me whether three yellow-marked young you have bred are Mules or Canaries. The circumstances, in your own words, are: "Two days after we took the cock Canary away, we put a cock Goldfinch to the same hen. She did not lay for two days after putting Goldfinch to her. Will young ones be Canaries or Goldfinch Mules." You can bet your Sunday shirt they are, and for ever will be, Canaries. It is this haphazard fashion of chopping and changing partners about that accounts for practically all the glowing tales of clear and lightly-marked Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, etc., Mules, which are written to me every season (in my capacity as specialist to CAGE BIRDS). It is an odd circumstance, too, that practically all of the writers lay stress on the fact that they are novices, or in their first year of mule-breeding, and so are thus all the more delighted at the favours Fortune has showered upon them. But the regrettable part comes in when one sees the show reports later on in the season and fails to find amongst the exhibits these birds which should have "starred it" up and down the country—assuming the description applied to them when "babies" was correct. They surely cannot all die. Possibly some live to be "passed," or "wrongly classed," and so bring trouble on some unfortunate judge who fails to trace the unmistakeable (according to the breeder), parentage. It may interest you to know that last year I was asked to look into a case of "two clear and one lightly marked Goldie Mules," all bred in the same nest. The breeder had bought this hen, which was flying in a large place along with other birds for sale, and kept her a fortnight with his Finch, ere she commenced to build when she went ahead and laid a clutch of five eggs—two clear, three fertile, but the latter containing Canarics. No wonder this gentleman thought he had "struck it." No doubt the upset attaching to a change of quarters delayed the laying of these already fertilised eggs (or cells, as they would be then).

Colour-feeding Greenfinches.

Greenfinch.—Yes; very many Greenfinches are colour-fed for purposes of exhibition, some to such a red shade that the name "Green"-finch seems as much an anomaly as "white" Blackbird sounds. The curious part of it lies in the fact that these birds which come out so extremely rich in colour are naturally deep-coloured birds (jonques), therefore birds which ought to be given very little pepper indeed, unless, that is, the very red shade be thought necessary. Personally, I don't think it is, for such a bird certainly does not look so well as the bird which has had just sufficient pepper to deepen the gold in the wings and tail (but not turn it red), and put a polish on, and just a wee warmer tone of colour into, its jacket. If your own bird is a jonque, and of fairly good size only, then I strongly recommend you to pepper-feed it (tasteless pepper is the kind to use). If it is a very large one, quite out of the ordinary in shape and size, then you could certainly hope to show it successfully without the aid of feed. Buff Greenfinches are hardly ever worth the trouble of trying to colour-feed. No matter how much pepper they stow away, it has little effect on their plumage; sometimes it has absolutely none at all (with a very coarse-feathered specimen), and very, very often it only serves to lend them a patchy appearance. A fine, bold, tight-feathered, well-polished buff is good enough, too, for most classes. So you will gather that you need to take the birds themselves into consideration when deciding for or against colour feeding.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

A Talking Parrakeet.

F.J.K.—You give me no clue as to what species your bird is, so that it is impossible for me to say whether the capacity for utterance is unusual or not. The Platycerci to which genus the Rosella belongs, and other somewhat similar genera, cannot be classed among the talking Parrots, though individuals do occur which utter a word or two. I presume your bird is the Rose-breasted Cockatoo; if so, though there are many individuals that do nothing but scream and whistle, there are many which both talk and whistle. No, I do not think its talent as a talker would influence a judge at all, condition, beauty and rarity being the points that count at most shows. I have no idea as to your district, so cannot tell you who could name it for you; but I should say some local fancier would do so. As regards next show season, I must refer you to the list of shows published on page 89. If you describe the bird's plumage and size, and state whether it has a long or a short tail, I can possibly name it for you and give you its approximate value.

Parrakeets and Finches.

E.B.—Though you have not escaped without loss through keeping Parrakeets and Finches together, and also are undoubtedly right in assuming that the Budgerigars are the culprits so far, I have never personally found the Rosellas to harm any of their companions whether Parrakeets or Finches; but I would not trust any of the others. And as time goes on you are almost sure to lose all the Finches. I should say, get a hen Blood Winged, a cock Pennant, and pairs of White-eared Conures, Stanley and Many-coloured Parrakeets. All are showy species, and if you care to repeat your query, and give dimensions of your aviary, I can tell you whether you have any spare accommodation. Either of those named would meet your requirements, and would thrive on the same diet as your present birds. If you crowd Parrakeets there is but little chance of their breeding, and you must note, that otherwise amiable species, become very combative when nesting; and if your aviary should be at all crowded this would probably mean many annoying losses.

Rearing Ribbon Finches.

E C.—I do not care for the species to have live insects in any variety, and I should gradually, not suddenly, stop giving the mealworms. Diet: Usual seeds, green food, lettuce, and grass in flower ad lib., and ants' eggs (cocoons) as bought (scatter these last mentioned on floor of aviary). With this simple dietary I have reared numbers of Ribbon Finches. In fact, I have found most of this species to be especially good, and all of those hatched out have been reared. No, I don't think the Budgies have had anything to do with your failure. You have simply over-stimulated your birds. At the same time, I don't approve of lifting husk down to examine their interiors; not, at any rate, till one is sure a nest has been forsaken. Birds are very knowing where their nests, eggs, and young are concerned, and it is the wisest plan to leave them severely alone. I will anticipate your query: how, then, can observation be made of eggs and young? I have generally been able to arrange a hole through which I could make observations and be myself unobserved. Of course, such provision would be required for each nest you wish to keep under observation.

Remedy for Feather Pecking.

Mrs. E—It is usually improper diet, or the presence of parasites, which sets up skin irritation, causing this annoying habit, which, once assumed, is most difficult to cure. In the first place I must emphasise the oft repeated advice: Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops or any kind of animal food whatever. Confine diet to seed mixture (Canary seed and oats, two parts each, and one part each hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds), ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and green-food such as lettuce, green peas in the pod, and other salads as in season. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage, and also regular supplies of grit and water. Under present circumstances I should also keep a piece of some kind of non-splintery wood for it to chew up, and also cotton reels for it to play with. Twice a week, so long as its excrement does not become watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and in between make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this latter till the bird is in condition again. Every other day spray its plumage with quassia solution, and even in hot weather you must keep it strictly out of draught till dry. Cure in such cases is seldom rapid, and the treatment must be persevered with. Parrots when tame soon recognise chastisement, and a tap or two with a light stick when it is pecking its plumage (not when it is preening its feathers) may help to check your bird's habit; but it must be administered in a gentle manner.

Some Aviary Queries.

A M.—In bad weather, keep your glass shutters up day and night, but during the summer and early autumn, this will not be necessary, the shelter of the roof being all they require. It is a very good practice to fix up branches (pea and bean sticks answer well), horizontally, close under roof; the communicating door also may be left continually open. The glass frames must fit sufficiently well that there is no draught therefrom. At the same time, you must provide in winter ample ventilation without draught; this can easily be secured by having a few one-inch holes near the roof, and similar holes near the ground at the opposite end of shed. In your aviary you could keep all the year round such species as Java Sparrows, Zebra Finches, Zebra Waxbills, Cutthroats, Silverbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Avadavats (common and green), Grey, St. Helena and Orange-cheek Waxbills. Cockatiels are a very amiable and hardy species, and are quite safe with the above, but do not introduce Budgerigars, or sooner or later it will mean disaster. Such birds as you wish to leave out of doors should be procured at once, as then they will get gradually accustomed to a declining temperature. It will not do to purchase foreign birds during the winter months, and put them out of doors straight away.

What Bird is it?

James Booth.—I am holiday-making at present, and away from my books, and I fail to remember the scientific name of your bird, which is the European Red-headed Bunting. You are quite right in giving them insect food; give them any kind of garden slugs you can capture, as well as the flies and mealworms. As regards seeds, give canary in bulk, and also supply rape, hemp, oats and sunflower in small quantities, and greenfood (fresh lettuce is as good as anything, and greedily eaten). Aud I find most Buntings appreciate ants' eggs (cocoons). If given the opportunity, they will bathe at least twice a day; they should certainly have a daily bath. The female is a much plainer bird than her mate, much browner, only washed with yellow, and the mask but faintly indicated. I am writing from memory, but will give you a full description and scientific name on my return a fortnight hence.

An Indian Mynah.

A.S.C.W.—I presume you wish the species which makes the best talker. The Hill Mynah is the best; it is a bird of Crow-like form, and of similar size. The plumage is glossy, blue-black, with steely and purplish reflections; beak, legs and feet, skin round eye and wattles, below the eye orange-yellow. Once it has got over the hardships of the voyage, it is not a fragile species, but must not be left out of doors during the winter. Indoors the temperature of an ordinary living-room will be ample, providing it is protected from draught. The cage should be sufficiently spacious to enable it to have two perches, and to be able to make use of either without damaging its tail feathers. Diet: Ripe fruit, soft food, table scraps, live insects, such as mealworms, grasshoppers, cockroaches, smooth caterpillars and such like; a little minced meat might be given about once a week, but they are practically omnivorous, and not difficult to keep if only once got over the hardships of the voyage to this country. They are large eaters, and void accordingly, and consequently unless kept very clean are apt to become objectionable indoors.

A Parrot Out of Condition.

Amateur.—Under existing circumstances, you must not give the magnesia. Keep on with the chemical food, and for two or three days give it one drop of laudanum in a teaspoonful of water, both in the morning and afternoon. Do not give the bird any messes (see my weekly warning), but while it is off its feed, give it a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily, in addition to its seed diet. The boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the hopper must be kept very clean. Sprinkle a little prepared chalk over the boiled maize while the looseness lasts. I am at the time holiday-making, and away from back issues, and do not recollect the details of your previous query. However, with the exception of the Dinneford's Magnesia, read my previous reply into this, and treat accordingly. If the bird does not improve after another week, please repeat query, giving me the fullest possible details. If the bird has temporary periods of weakness, a few drops of brandy in a teaspoonful of water will act as a good stimulant.

An Amazon or a Grey?

Bee Bee.—I am afraid Parrots only cease to scream when they no longer have breath to scream with. At the same time, some individuals make much more frequent use of this safety valve than others. In one fashion or the other most Parrots respond to passing noises and providing it is not always screeching, I should not think there was much the matter, for you will not get a Parrot without a screech, and though Greys as a rule do not scream as much as Amazons, yet few days will elapse without a scream being let out. At the same time, a Grey Parrot is such a risky purchase, that I most certainly would not assume the responsibility of advising you to make the exchange you propose, especially if you have a healthy well-conditioned and talented bird. Such a course certainly needs thinking about twice, and I cannot advise it unless you can secure an acclimatised Grey, and have it on appro. sufficiently long to ascertain both its demeanour, and disposition. Of course, the Grey is at the top of the list for talking capacity, but an Amazon runs it very close. Before parting with so good a bird, try covering it up when it begins to screech (a Parrot soon recognises punishment), but the process must be quietly carried out; the cover must not be thrown over in a way calculated to scare the bird, or the remedy will be worse than the disease.

About a Cockatoo.

S. Davidson.—It is sometimes known as the Rosella Cockatoo, but this is very confusing, because of the Parrakeets of the same name. Over here it is most commonly known as the Rose-breasted or Roseate Cockatoo. I have seen many of the species which were very chummy and companionable birds, and they are certainly droll and interesting pets, though most certainly a noisy species. Some individuals talk very clearly and have quite a lengthy vocabulary, but the species as a whole cannot be classed as good talkers. To compensate, they are accomplished acrobats and good mimics. Diet, a seed mixture of canary, oats, (2 parts each), and wheat, dari, maize, hemp, and sunflower seeds (1 part each); plain biscuits, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), greenfood (lettuce, green peas, and salads as in season), ripe fruit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. It is a hardy species, the temperature of any ordinary living room will suffice.

Will it Talk?

A. S. C.—The bird ought to have spoken by this time. They usually find the change from dealers' quarters so agreeable that the said change should not affect its loquacity. I am surprised it has not commenced ere this, even if it had not known a word when it came into your possession. At the same time, I should not care to assert that you have been "done," as I have known instances of the moult to cause a talented bird to remain practically silent for months. Keep the bird (I take it, it is in good health) where it will hear plenty of conversation; note favourite items of its diet, and offer these by hand, and also try the constant repetition of odd words and short phrases, and it most certainly should ultimately talk. Try it with shelled walnuts (two or three daily will be sufficient), and I think it would soon take to the core of an apple, which is a very wholesome fruit for Parrots.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Goldfinch (Devon).—Chronic softening of liver, rupture of blood vessel of that organ, apoplexy.

LEGAL.

Answered by A BARRISTER.

Anxious.—It was his duty to stamp his copy of the agreement. You are alright so long as you have stamped your copy. (2) The agreement is binding on him, and if he sells the house he can only do so subject to your life interest. (3) You must complete the repairs in order to found your claim to a life interest in the house upon the stamped agreement.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

The Norwich Plainhead (J.R.).—Thanks very much; we shall hope to find a corner next week for it.

Cutting (A. Taylor).—We are much obliged to you.

A Deal (L.H.).—There are plenty of respectable dealers to be found; try elsewhere next time. We regret that the law of libel should prevent us publishing a letter like yours (assuming your facts are correct).

An Article (Constant Reader).—Yours is the first "no" we have received, and scores of "ayes" have come to hand, therefore; we must ask you to bear gently with the majority for the time being.

Exchange (Nil Desperandum).—We are sorry, naturally. Still, we cannot help feeling that you yourself were much to blame. In both cases you say: "I had to send on." But why had you to send on? If the other parties could not trust you with their goods first, why should you trust them? If you obey every person who writes and tells you you "have to send on," then you are surely hardly exercising sufficient care.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WHERE DOES THE COLOUR COME FROM?

SIR,—I was wondering if "Just past the novice stage" will be having a hen to give away this year, the same as he kindly offered last spring, in the breeding of Norwich greens—to help a novice? H. W.

A STRANGE CASE FROM WALES.

SIR,—As instructed by the committee of the Welsh Cage Bird Club I send a copy of a card, written and enclosed in an envelope with a halfpenny stamp upon it, addressed to Mr. D. L. Eynon, 22, Cardiff street, Aberdare (the Aberdare show secretary) a few days after their show. No doubt the writer thought that Mr. Eynon was the W.C.B.C. secretary. Mr. Eynon forwarded this correspondence to me and I placed it before the committee. They instructed me to ask to have it published, as written, through the Fancy Press, and request the writer to communicate with me on the matter, as they are prepared to deal with any member according to the merits of the case. But no correspondence will be entertained unless the writer sends his name and address. Correspondence, signed as this is, looks as though the contrary of being straight. On behalf of the Welsh Cage Bird Club:

D. H. TEDSTONE, Hon. Sec.

4, George-street, Brecon.

(COPY OF CARD.)

Commercial Street,
Newport.

Dear Sir,—I have been looking in CAGE BIRDS for several weeks to see if your Society took any notice of the letter that appeared in C.B. (about) your member. Are you all in the same boat, doing nothing but frauds? You soon put paid to Davies, why not the other members of the W.C.B.C.? one a judge, the other a committeeman. Make inquiries in Cardiff. If you do not know, I will give evidence before your committee, if you advertise in CAGE BIRDS.

STRAIT 'UN.

THE USE & VALUE OF SAFFRON.

SIR,—Referring to your correspondent's query relating to the above, he may take it that the substance supplied to him in the form of a solid is certainly not pure saffron. The latter I understand is the stigma of a variety of crocus which is chiefly grown in France and Spain, and is gathered in the autumn, and dried when it is put into commerce. It is crimson in colour, possesses a strong aromatic odour and is chiefly used for its colouring and flavouring qualities, one stigma, on being placed in a cup of hot water, imparting a deep yellow colour. Considering that each flower only produces three stigmas, and that to obtain even a small quantity of the commercial article a large number of flowers are necessary, it can be well understood that saffron is an expensive commodity, and for this reason is very frequently adulterated chiefly with the florets of the safflower. The genuineness of the article can easily be tested by close inspection, each shred being usually about one inch long, pointed at one end, and gradually thickening towards the other extremity where it expands and terminates in the shape of a small flower. This is better observed if a shred be immersed in water. The use of saffron in the bird-room at moulting time has always been for me a debatable subject. I contend that it does not possess the qualities generally attributed to it and for which it is chiefly used—viz., assisting the birds to quickly cast their plumage. I admit it possesses great colouring properties, as anyone who has used it can testify, but I fail to see in what way the former results can be achieved. I believe it possesses about 1 per cent. of aromatic oil, and assuming that the general run of fanciers holding a moderate-sized stock, say 50 to 100 birds, can get through their birds' moulting season on two-pennyworth of saffron (which is probably about ten grains soaked in two glasses of rum—the quantity I have used) the total quantity of aromatic oil in the whole bulk would amount to one tenth of a grain. Presuming the whole of this is absorbed into the systems of the stock, each bird, in a period of six or seven weeks, can thus only have assimilated a very small quantity, and I contend that any soothing quality possessed by this constituent can have no effect whatever. At a recent debate on moulting at a local society's meeting, I raised this point, and the general opinion of those present was in favour of the theory that saffron did assist the moult, one very old and observant fancier, whose opinions I respect, remarking that it created internal heat which was desirable at this period. The old remedy of saffron tea for measles in children when warmth is desirable was instanced in favour of this opinion, but this I look upon as one of the "old women's remedies" that have more of faith for a cure than medicinal qualities; further, I am not aware that this remedy is prescribed by medical men. Perhaps some of you medical readers will favour us with their opinions on this point. For myself I intend to test this theory, and at the moment am moulting birds (old and young, the latter being hatched within a day of one another) one lot being colour fed with the addition of rum and saffron and the other batch on plain seed and egg-food. All other conditions are equal, and I shall await with interest the termination of the moult to see which lot finishes first. Should the above theory be correct does not this open up a nice point as to what is colour feeding? I have no hesitation in saying that a bird which is to be exhibited in a non-fed class when moulted with the assistance of saffron regularly supplied in the soft food will come out much richer in colour than a bird which has been without. For this reason I consider the old style of K.N. and Non-K.N. classes the more applicable description of the two conditions. Apart from saffron it is really surprising, the amount of colouring properties that can be obtained from other flowers, chiefly nasturtiums and the common yellow and red marigolds. This can be readily tested by pressing the flowers between the folds of a white handkerchief. Scarlet nasturtiums produce a bright red stain and the common yellow marigold a deep yellow stain not at all inferior to saffron. These are quite harmless, and are much relished by Canaries; and if regularly supplied during the moult cannot but materially assist colour production. To sum up the saffron question, my contention as to methods of colour-feeding is, that it is the hot pepper if anything which by warming the blood may assist the birds to cast their feathers the sooner, and complete the moult rather than any effect from the saffron, which in this respect I believe is nil. WHOSE WAS THE SPECIAL?

An Interesting Case at Newcastle.

SIR,—The case of Lister v. Newcastle Society has aroused deep interest on Tyneside, and I should think the facts in relation to it will also be of importance to the majority of fanciers. So I beg to be allowed a small space in your widely-read paper to relate what I know of it, trusting others will give their opinions. At the last Newcastle show Mr. Lister's Crest was, according to catalogue (I won't say slip) awarded the special for best bird in the Crest section. Now, the judge did not actually award this bird the special, because I, and others were there, and saw the birds judged. Mr. T. Taylor's "King Edward II." was standing first, and Mr. Lister's Crest second. As secretary of the Northern Crest Club at the time, I asked the judge, to make quite sure, which bird was first, as the same bird would take the medal given by the N.C.C. for the best Crest or Crest-bred, any age. He replied: "This one is first," and pointed to Mr. Taylor's Crest, then marked his slip N.C.C. medal, class 24, No. 16. After the mistake in catalogue had been pointed out, the Newcastle secretaries communicated with the judge, who replied to the effect that the young bird (Mr. Taylor's) was not only the best in the section, but the best he had seen for a long time. The Newcastle secretaries then handed the special over to Mr. Taylor. Some time afterwards Mr. Lister sent a letter to the secretary of Dist. No. 1., C.B.U. claiming the special, and the matter is now in the hands of the council, who, I hope, will give it their best attention and consideration, as it is a question of great importance to exhibiting fanciers. There is one thing which must be borne in mind. The slip was not altered in any way. And if my memory serves me well, it read: "Best old bird, class 19, No. 9," and then "Best young bird, class 24, No. 16." Now the schedule read: 'Special . . . for best bird in Crest section" (not old bird) and "Special for the best Crest, bred 1907." THOS. ROBSON.

IS IT A RECORD FOR BULLFINCH HENS?

SIR,—While visiting a fellow fancier close here (St. Ninians) I got a good record of egg-laying by a Bullfinch hen (British), so I send it on to CAGE BIRDS. Mr. W. Bishop is a Norwich fancier, but last year he put up a pair for Hybrids, Goldie-Bullie, both Britishers. Last season the hen laid 26 eggs, but he did not manage to rear any young, although he had two up to being three weeks old. This season, between the first week in June and 20th of July, she laid 28 eggs, 26 of which proved fertile. He got 12 hatched, and has now four young Hybrids, one doing for itself, two 16 days old on Saturday last, and one nine days old. He reared another one, but its top mandible came crossed. The one that is doing for itself is a cock, a nice-sized one, and very tame. It is now six weeks old. I think the above record will be hard to beat. Both parents have been three years moulted indoors. All the eggs were laid in the nest, in a double breeder, about 3ft. 6ins. long. SCOTTIA.

A SUCCESSFUL SEASON.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space to mention in CAGE BIRDS that I have been successful in hatching three Goldfinch Bullies? One of them is now on the sticks and is feeding itself. It is just a month old. The other two are only two days old. I have about thirty young Norwich, so have not done badly with them. I have a good bird-room, and about sixty birds in all, including a few foreign. My room is decorated with prints and plates from CAGE BIRDS. I have taken in CAGE BIRDS from the first number, which I still have. CAGE BIRDS is full of valuable information and is always welcome.

A QUESTION ABOUT HYBRID-BREEDING.

SIR,—Can any of your many readers tell me which is the best bird to mate up to a hand-reared Linnet? I have a hen Linnet which has not been mated up but has laid a clutch of five eggs in an ordinary wire cage. I should like to keep her for mating for hybrid-breeding next season. Also a few hints on which are the best birds to mate for Hybrid-breeding would be useful, as I am only a beginner. I have been a reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for some time and have found it very useful. CONSTANT READER

THE PRODUCTION OF CLEAR MULES.

SIR,—I am very fond of a good Mule, and if you will allow me I would like to give my idea of producing same. It is as follows: Get, say, three yellow Lancashire hens one year old and pair these up with the biggest buff Norwich cock, clear bred, you can get (if a touch of cinnamon blood in it, so much the better). Try the young hens from this cross with your Finch, and if you get any young light, pair the mother of same to her father and her brother to his mother. The following year pair the young from these, the cocks from one nest with the hens of the other. (If you have to double buff it does not matter, but if the young come suitable, I prefer mating yellow to buff.) The following year try your Finch, and I for one will be surprised if you do not get light Mules. If you have two lots being bred on these lines, and are Sib-breeding with them, I am certain that in a few years you would get one of the finest light Muling strains to be got. I have put the original parents down as Lancashire and Norwich as I think this cross throws the finest Mules that are bred. AJAX.

THE SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C. PATRONAGE.

SIR,—It is against my principles to reply to noms de plume, but the letter of "The Three Towns" mentions Worcester show, of which I have the honour to be secretary. Some of our members are members of the S.Y.C.C. who subscribe to the cup and special fund; therefore I feel we are more entitled to the S.Y.C.C. patronage than Plymouth, who have no members in the S.Y.C.C. I was not aware that Mr. Payne was a fur judge, but am well satisfied that he knows a good Yorkshire when he sees one. I am aware that Mr. House was a pigeon judge last year, but the S.Y.C.C. had not then passed the rule that preference should be given to shows at which specialist cage bird judges were officiating.

A. E. BISHOP,
Hon. Sec. of the Worcester and Dis. C.B.S.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space in your journal for a few words on the subject now being discussed, viz., the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club patronage? It is not my intention to criticise the committee's action in withholding the patronage of the club from any particular society. The members of the committee are, in my opinion, acting strictly within their rights in granting the patronage to such societies as they think proper. But it is the more personal side of the matter to which I wish to refer, considering, as I do, that if the published statements are admitted facts, they cast a serious reflection on the judgment of Yorkshiremen generally, and the Yorkshire Union societies in particular. Mr. Pope, the hon. secretary of the Western Counties O.S., says he was informed by Mr. Rennie, the hon. secretary of the Southern Yorkshire C.C., that as Mr. House was down to judge their show, he (Mr. Rennie) thought their application for patronage would be refused, and this on account of Mr House's having passed two birds as over standard length at their last year's show. Mr. Rennie makes no denial in his reply, and Mr. Crisp practically admits the truth of the statement by saying that "if in the present instance the reason is given, Mr. Pope must accept it as an act of grace." Assuming, then, that Mr. Pope's rendering is correct, the only inference that I care to draw is that the committee of the S.Y.C.C. do not consider Mr. House capable of judging the Yorkshire bird. I should be sorry, indeed, to be compelled to form an alternative conclusion. And this is just where we in Yorkshire join issue with our friends in the south. We care not whether our appointed judges are also specialists in pigeons, fur, teeth, paint brushes, gold plate, boots and clogs or white mice, so long as they show a capacity for placing the award cards in their proper positions in the classes they have to judge. As touching the Yorkshire bird in particular this is just what fanciers in the north find Mr. House quite as capable of doing as most of our "homo" judges, and far superior to many of those from a distance. The Yorkshire Union Council shows its confidence by nominating him regularly every year to officiate at one of its shows, and the society which is favoured by the ballot in securing his services makes no attempt to conceal its delight; and the individual shows his appreciation by exhibiting in large numbers thereby securing to Mr. House the pride of place for the record entry at Yorkshire Union shows. And, speaking generally, our only regret is that there are not more like him. I believe the foregoing remarks to be substantially the verdict of Yorkshiremen regarding Mr. House as a judge of the Yorkshire bird, and, on such a topic, although feeling proud of the rapid strides our pet has made in places other than in the County whose name it bears, and making full allowance for the increased knowledge which such extended cultivation brings in its train, I, nevertheless, feel constrained to say that the time has not yet come when the opinion of Yorkshiremen shall stand second to any other.

FRED HAMMOND.

SIR,—In reference to the correspondence on the above subject, a few words regarding the opinion of fanciers in Yorkshire will not be out of place, and perhaps prove that a judge of fur may also know something of feathers. Firstly, Mr. C. A. House has judged at Yorkshire Union shows consecutively for 17 years, and he also judged for the Amalgamated Yorkshire O.S. during the short period of its existence. Secondly, when a Yorkshire Union Society knows that in the annual ballots for judges they have drawn Mr. House a smile of serene contentment gladdens the features of that society's officials. Thirdly, the exhibitors know that type, quality and position (for which 75 points are allowed in the standard) will receive the considerations which are their due, and that these essentials will not be swallowed up in a craze for any single item of the standard for which only a few minor points are to be reckoned. Without doubt, if Mr. House had not, in the opinion of Yorkshire fanciers, some knowledge of their bird, he would long ago have been left out of the list of popular judges.

SAMUEL DEAN.

WHAT IS "QUALITY" LINNET SONG?

SIR,—Will you grant me once more a little space in your valuable paper, as I wish to give your readers the different ways of Linnet singing. Now, my friend Mr. Allen says the jow note is bad. I have heard good jowing birds in Leeds, belonging to a gentleman who had three birds. He asked me £4 each, for the birds sang in this form: Tit tit tit tit tit tot tot tot tot tot tot qee qee qee qee qee quy quy yuy yuy phlem phlem phlem phlem phlem jow jow jow jow jow with reeing in different voices. This is as far as a bird can go in one round of quality if done in good style. Another way is pattering, chattering, chuckering, with heoth heoth heoth heoth hoof hoof hoof hoof yoth yoth yoth yoth aw, then yep yep yep wiff wiff wiff wiff wiff pee pee pee pee pee poe poe poe poe poe chill chill chill chill ha ha ha ha ha ha eiviest eiviest eiviest. Now the eiviest note is bad except struck in this form: eiviest eiviest eiviest skiffle skiffle skiffle widdle widle widle widle kato kato kato keto keto saw. A portion of the bad singing Mr. Allen calls foreign bird singing; and so it is, as it will take a foreigner to understand it all, as there are more bad singers than good among them! Quake quake quake chiter chiter chiter yoben yoben yoben yoben yoben yoben dee dee dee choit choit choit galipa galipa galipa teo aw, with a rish ish ish ish hay. This is how it runs. Now choit is good if done in a close way, with length. I have heard the bird Mr. Allen sold to the Preston gentleman, and it is a very nice singer; but it might be a little heavier. Also I say the same to the Chester gentleman who is one of the old Wigan club men. My father was an old Palace winner and judge, so you will see I have gone "through the mill."

WHEN IS A CLEAR NOT A CLEAR?

And what is a Tick?

SIR,—I see in this week's CAGE BIRDS that the question is asked: Should a bird with any underfluo be eligiblo in clear classes? This reminds me of a case that came under my notice some little time back at a certain show. On going over the "ticked" classes after judging, we came across a bird which was apparently clear. I asked the judge to point out to us the tick or underflue, if any, and after some little persuasion he consented to do so in a private room. On catching the bird and thoroughly examining it, he failed to discover the slightest underflue, but felt certain that Mr. —— would not exhibit a bird if not ticked. I do not say he knew to whom the bird belonged when he was judging (both came from Plymouth), but it proves to mo that such a bird would be far more eligible in a "clear" than in a "ticked" class. The bird in question had to be disqualified after being awarded 1st prize. How very annoying to the owner if this bird actually had some slight underflue. I think schedules would be far better if they read: "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification," so as not to unnecessarily catch exhibition specimens.

A. C. GREGOR.

SIR,—It was with the deepest interest that I read the letters that have appeared in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, re "What constitutes a ticked bird?" I myself think that the remedy lies in the wording of the schedules. And no doubt you will agree with me when I say that all birds, no matter how small the tick (even if at all times it does not show on the surface), should be entered in the class for ticked birds. Now, if the secretary asked the exhibitors in their schedule to write on entry form where that (at times) invisible tick was to be found, he, or the stewards, could make a note of it; and should the judge have any doubt about the bird's being ticked (because the tick was not showing) at the time of judging, the matter could be put right very easily. Even if the bird had to be taken out of the cage they would know at once where to look for that terrible tick. I think that would be fair to both judge and exhibitor.

ARTHUR HARRIS.

SIR,—This subject of "tick or no tick" is a very interesting one, and to its interest must be ascribed my interference in the discussion. I disclaim absolutely any desire or intention to take sides in the matter immediately concerning Mr. Weston and Mr. Woolhouse. They are both, I take it, good sportsmen. But the case has a meaning, and the decision of the judge a bearing far beyond its identical limits. It raises, in a plain, blunt fashion, the question "What is a clear bird?" Nay, more. It ought, so far as it has gone, to set fanciers thinking upon the importance which has been set, in many quarters, upon a "clear" bird above all others, and to ask themselves whether or not that importance has been wisely admitted, in the interest of the Norwich bird itself, or justified under all the circumstances. What I should like to see, as the result of this controversy, is not quibbling or bickering, or the setting up of one person's superiority of knowledge over that of others, but a sincere desire to thrash out the point in all its aspects, and the arrival at a decision which, after weighing all the points, shall be most conducive, not to the likes or dislikes of individual fanciers, but to the future excellence of the Norwich Plainhead. I have no doubt whatever that the "sinner" in most such instances has been the green blood; but I have the same assurance that the sinner in individual instances has been the saviour of the variety as a whole. What is the position with regard to a "clear" bird? I know there are societies whose rules stipulate that dark underflue shall not be considered a disqualification in clear classes. I know, also, and most other fanciers know, that there are hundreds who consider dark flue a disqualification. It will be remembered that in the case of a "clear body dark crest" dark underflue has not been a disqualifying badge. Mr. Woollard, one of our most highly-respected fanciers, agrees that for a bird with dark underflue to be eligible in clear classes, the schedule should read: "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification." And then he raises a point which I will just quote, but allude to presently. He says: "Even then it would count against the bird, should there be two birds of equal merit, as a good Clear bird is harder to get, and much more rare, than a bird with dark underflue." I have no doubt Mr. Woollard places such a high estimate upon a clear bird out and out as to warrant him personally in "counting dark flue against a bird." But it is here where confusion would come in, and I am sure he will see that his own contention that, "a judge has no right to make rules to suit himself," would oust him of his right—in the face of a rule which said "Dark underflue not to be a disqualification"—to make that same underflue "count against a bird" when pitted against an absolutely clear bird. No; it must be either one way or the other. If dark underflue is admitted at all, it must not be penalised, else it is useless and misleading to admit it. Mr Woollard's own argument proves that much. This is not alone a question of Mr. Weston as against Mr. Woolhouse. It is not a question, either, of Mr. Woollard's predilections for a Clear bird, or of the breeders in Norwich alone. East Anglia holds many good birds, and to East Anglia great credit will ever be due. But Norwich Plainheads, and good ones too, come from near and from far—outside East Anglia. I repeat, this question ought to be settled, simply and sensibly, and with a view to the future and permanent welfare of the variety. Now, to be strictly and technically logical, I am bound to admit that Mr. Woollard's view of what constitutes a Clear bird is correct. I may be wrong, but I always held that view; also with regard to a "clear body dark crest." I always thought that the terms "clear body" and "dark crest" expressed the contrast, and that they ought to mean what they said. But the majority allowed the dark flue. There you are! This brings me to my main point. I hope I shall not be misunderstood. What I wish to ask the Fancy on this matter of "What is a Clear bird?" is:—"Which plan contains the germs of the greatest future benefit to the Norwich Plainhead?—sticking to the logical and technical definition of a "clear bird," or the admission of dark underflue? I am of opinion and do not fear to express it, that it was this view of the paramount superiority of the "clear" bird above all others of the Norwich variety, that led to the one-time craze after "clear" birds, and, in the result, to the large and general loss of colour, and of type and quality as well. Men bred clear, clear, clear, until they well nigh cleared all the natural colour pigment out of the variety, thinking that colour-food would balance the account. But it did not do so. Mind, by this I must not be understood to be railing against "clear" birds, as such, but against apologies for birds, in clear dress! Fanciers saw the folly of so much "clear" breeding and resorted to the use of green blood. Result, a rapid improvement both in colour, quality and shape. That can scarcely be denied. And where, in the main, do we find the greatest depth of colour? Is it not amongst the ticks and variegated? What produces, as a rule, the dark flue in a clear topped bird? Is it not the green blood infusion? Wise men use the green blood now. They know its value. They risk the dark underflue. But when they get a "clear" without it, it generally possesses merit. If the "ideal of ideals" in the variety is "clear" all through, the dark flue will be fought against; and in that fight the green blood will have to go! If this discussion succeeds in so focussing attention on the point as to get it settled then it will have done a signal service to the Fancy. The point in my mind now is—which is better for the future of the Norwich Plainhead—to admit the dark flue or to be strict and technical and exclude it?

BULLFINCH HENS AS BREEDERS.

SIR,—As this is a record season regarding Bullfinch hens, probably the following will take some beating. A Mr. J. Aikman, the oldest breeder of Canaries in Coldstream, who has been out of the Fancy some few years, but has been infatuated with the Hybrid Fever, made a commencement again this year (and, as I remarked to him) will soon have a house full. His aim was to try the rare crosses, but unfortunately as regards youngsters nothing but disappointment has been his share. But expectations have been great, as from two Bullie hens he has, up to now, had the grand total of 3 eggs, 19 from one and 11 from the other. The hen who had 19 was paired to a Canary, and went through all the formulas, but every egg has been clear. This hen nested in an ordinary wire cage, and sat like a Canary hen. After the second nest, of which all the eggs proved clear, he thought he would try an experiment "for fun." He got some Linnets' eggs and put them under the Bullfinch. She hatched them and fed the young to perfection. Not content with this he got two young Greenfinches and put along with the Linnets, bringing the total number of youngsters to six. These she fed with the help of the cock Canary, and they are now on the sticks doing well. In due course another nest of six eggs appeared, but they again proved clear. But she is still sitting as close as could be desired. This hen would feed the youngsters in one's hand. The other hen did not sit so well as her mate, but nested in an open cage just as well. Both birds were caught in the locality during the winter.

Some British Birds I have Kept and Exhibited.

By E. MILNE.

Some Popular Finches.

I will next deal with some of the commoner cage birds—the Finches. We have a great variety of them, so I must speak more in a general way respecting them. Most popular among them are the Bullfinch and Goldfinch, owing no doubt to their tractableness and great beauty, although both the Bramblefinch and Chaffinch are now finding much more favour as cage birds than formerly.

Dealing with them separately, I find that the Bullfinches are very erratic birds at times, appearing quite soft and in half-an-hour, perhaps, as well as ever and sometimes, alas! appearing alright one moment, and in a very short time literally "no more." Whether this is their nature I cannot say, but I believe that overfeeding is the cause of more deaths with this bird than anything else. I know that hand feeding must often be resorted to in the case of newly-caught birds, especially at about the end of the year, when the days are so short. At any rate, it is safe to restrict their diet to plain Canary seed and a little rape now and again, and wild seed when in season.

For exhibition purposes the Bully must be fairly large, with breast colour of a bright crimson, not the dull brick red that one so often sees, but shining on the cheeks. His cap must also be broad and clearly cut all round, coming well down below the beak. Most of the winning Bullies nowadays are field-plumaged birds, and I am surprised that a class is not provided for house-moulted Bullies at our large shows, and also for Linnets and Greenies, since it is all a question of colour.

The Goldfinch is my next subject. To all Finches that you can get weaned off on niger and hemp, give nothing but Canary seed and teazle, with fresh thistle and knapweed in season, and a pinch of mixed seeds not oftener than twice a week. Foreign Goldies you will find difficult to treat until they are house-moulted, when they are very hardy.

Birds that would die rather than eat Canary seed must be allowed their choice, and such birds may live quite a number of years; but they never have such good colour as others of their species.

The other two Finches, the Bramblefinch and the Chaffinch, may be treated as one, and but few words will suffice. Give them anything digestible, and there is not much to fear. Only make sure to get good birds to start with; otherwise much time and patience will be found to have been expended for nothing.

These birds must be large for the show bench and full-chested, with plenty of colour. The Chaffie must show a lot of white on his wings, and especially on the butts, while the Bramble's chestnut breast colour must come well down the body, his head being dark, but for the edging of brown on each feather. For all the above birds, including the Buntings, a show cage painted a dark holly green inside is very suitable, but this is a matter of taste.

Brown and Mountain Linnets.

Taking the Linnets next, you must be very careful not to overfeed these birds which are kept in cages, as I think there is no bird more apt to go wrong than the Rosie. Keep him on the plain Canary seed, and give him his choice of the good things which are in season. Teazle is another grand seed in my estimation, and may be given ad lib to all such birds with safety.

The Mountain Linnet or Twite is a hardier customer, and may be treated the same as the Siskin and Redpoll, which I will deal with in a moment. There is much diversity of opinion as to what constitutes a good exhibition Linnet, some judges preferring dark and others going strong on almost faded-looking birds. Get them between the two and even, with no white stripes down the centre.

The pencilling must also be small and all over, with no broad lines on the thighs. Look for a good, broad, white margin on the wings, and if you get one answering this description you have something worth cultivating.

Your Twite, too, must be a fine dark brown all over (not black) ticked on the breast, of a good size, and showing distinct whites on his wings.

Two Fine Cage Birds.

We now come to birds whose treatment must in all respects be similar. I mean the Siskin and the Redpoll. They are two of the finest cage birds we have, and are greatly loved by fanciers. Especially is this so in the case of the Siskin. Their food should be Canary seed and teazle absolutely, with sound knapweed and thistle when procurable.

For exhibition the Siskin should be large, and if a yellow, so much the better. It must have a cap coming not too far down the nape of the neck, and to have the bib is a great thing in its favour. The lacing on the thighs must not be too heavy, and the cap must also show a distinct lacing.

Your Redpoll must be pure and clean in colour throughout, and the breast free from all cloudiness or greyness. His bib, too, should be large and clear at the edges. Given a bird possessing these qualities, and one of good dimensions, it will be found to stand a good chance in his class.

Many fanciers stage their Siskins against a chocolate or old gold colour, and the contrast is certainly very pleasing. Others like a pale blue, but if the exhibit is good there is little danger of its being passed on account of the colour of its show cage.

There are many other desirable British cage birds not enumerated here. These will suffice to show how to keep the generality of them.

When the Young Arrive.

When the young ones arrive, wherever possible, give fresh dandelion. But as many dwellers in our large towns are not able to get this green food as easily as those who live in the country, or where they can easily reach the outskirts of a town, or have access to a garden where this grows, the next best food, in my opinion, is watercress. Then, in order of merit, comes lettuce; but I have found many hens that would not feed at all on these, while nearly every hen feeds better on German or Summer rape seed scalded. This I place in a jar and pour boiling water over, letting it stand over night, and in the morning pouring the water off and running the tap-water on it. This last stirs it up and brings the dirt up to the top, which I drain off and keep on repeating till I get the seed clear. It is then ready for use.

I give it inside the cage in some small vessel. I supply them with two or three teaspoonsfuls at a time, with the water drained off just as I take it out of the jar. I have known hens to feed for three or four days on this, when they would not make the least attempt at feeding with egg food or green stuff. You can discern the seed quite plainly in the youngsters' crops.

Just a word of warning. Don't throw a young hen away in disgust because she doesn't make a good feeder in her first year. I have known them turn out real good ones afterwards.

Now some hens will do better by themselves than when the cock bird is left with them, while others will do alright if they have the cock bird to help them. In such cases as the latter, by all means leave the pair together, as the two ought to be able to make a better job of it than one.

The Sweating Problem.

Now, as to sweating hens: wherever these occur, you can make up your mind that the hen is not as healthy as she ought to be. Take the cock away at once, as the hen will have to come off a bit oftener, even if it is only for her own food. Give all hens that are sitting baths on their cages in the last week, and if they will not bathe just about the morning before the eggs are due to hatch, get a cupful of luke-warm water, and take the nest out of the cage. Dip each of the eggs in turn in the water, always using your egg-spoon for the purpose. By doing this you will help to prevent the occurrence of birds which have not been able to chip the shell.

If all goes well, and you have got a good lot of young 'uns on the sticks, the next trouble will be in weaning the young from soft food on to their natural diet seed. Here again, you will find the steeped rape will come in useful, and with a little crushed hemp and Canary seed, you will be getting on the road towards success.

A Few Final Don'ts.

In conclusion, I may add a few Don'ts which will be found useful in the general management of Canaries. Don't forget to keep the birds clean. Use the cleanest and best seeds, with plenty of grit, and if you have plenty of "grit" yourself, you will find as great an amount of pleasure as I have in the Canary hobby. Don't be easily discouraged, as you will find any amount of little things to be overcome; but if you keep on smiling, and, as fast as one difficulty is knocked over, look round to see where else you may have trouble, you will find that your hobby will lead you to learn many things that were never dreamed of in your philosophy before.

And if you are inclined to make your own cages, and you have any natural aptitude in that direction, you will have a hobby that will occupy all the spare time that you have. And if, furthermore, you get the bird fever (as I call the hobby to my friends) in a good strong form, you will never have cause to complain for want of something to do, and you will always find plenty of pleasure in the doing of it.

WESTWICK B.B.S. (Norwich).

A Washing Exhibition.

The members, having secured the services of so able an exponent of the art of preparing birds for the show bench as Mr. R. J. Mackley, were fortunate at their last meeting to be able to listen to his instructive remarks and faultless handling during the process of tubbing a Norwich Canary. At the outset Mr. Mackley said he preferred using Pears' transparent soap, which he rubs into a thick lather with the brush, and then thoroughly lathers the bird from the shoulder to the tail, being careful to always bring the brush down the right way of the feathers so as not to get them broken or ruffled. He next proceeded to clean the flights by spreading the wing on the side of the basin, taking care to hold the wing between forefinger and thumb to avoid breaking it or drawing any of the feathers. For washing the head, which he leaves till last, Mr. Mackley said he preferred an ordinary tooth brush, and worked from the beak to the top of the head. In rinsing the bird Mr. Mackley employs two or three lots of clean water, and is very careful to remove every particle of soap from the feathers, making certain that the feathers are divided, and that the water passes between them. The water in each basin should be of the same temperature, just sufficiently warm to allow the back of the hand to be held in. At the conclusion the members thanked the lecturer for giving them so instructive and enjoyable an evening.—GEO. W. PARSONS.

(Our Invaluable "Breeding Room Register.")

A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." This book is one no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred—keep account of their strong and weak points. It contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London E.C.

Moulting and Colour Feeding the Yorkshire Canary.

During this season, an advantage is to be gained by placing in the birds' drinking water, two or three times a week, a piece of sulphate of iron about as large as a split pea. This is beneficial whether you are colour-feeding the birds or not. It acts as a strengthener. Further than this, when colour-feeding your birds, if given as above, sulphate of iron assists in producing a deeper colour, and also helps to fasten the same; so that the colour will stand better when the bird has got completely through with its moult. Again, when a bird has been feeding on soft food, it is very often relaxed in its bowels, and the administration of iron counteracts this.

Precautions During the Moult.

It is really necessary when your birds are moulting to cover them over with some kind of thin material, so as to protect the colour from the rays of King Sol. The sun is a bleacher, and should he be allowed to pour forth his brilliancy upon your birds, disaster will be the result.

On more than one occasion, when I have been a visitor at different rooms during the moulting period, I have observed that the birds have been practically in the dark. This mode of procedure I have a great objection to. It is decidedly unnecessary. Most of you will admit that exercise is absolutely essential for birds if they are to be kept in robust health. Well, when birds are shut off from light, they do not take the exercise they should do, and therefore, in condition they are not to be compared with birds which are fortunate in enjoying more light. The better the circulation of blood, the better the flow of colour, and also the hotter and sharper the moult. Therefore, when shading your birds use a little discretion. The way I prefer, and in nearly all cases follow out, is to shade the windows with calico.

During the moult, I supply the bath fairly often. I know several fanciers who are timid at providing their birds with baths during this time. I supply mine with a bath on bright warm days right through the moult, with very beneficial results. Bathing is invigorating, and helps the feathers to grow quickly, and is also a good tightener of the plumage. Again, a bird when feeding on soft food is apt to get its feathers clogged in places, and should they not be liberated and be allowed to fall into their proper places, the quill will grow wrong, giving the bird very often a rough appearance. Birds are required to be smooth and tight in feather for the show bench, and I am fully convinced that the use of the bath during the moult, assists very materially in bringing about the desired result.

How to Prevent Patchiness.

When the birds have moulted all the body feathers, and have only the head and neck to finish, I select all those I think will come out well. These I place in separate cages for fining-down purposes, making the colour food a little weaker than previous. The reason I do this is, because birds will come hotter in colour about the head and neck, completely spoiling the evenness of colour. This tells very much against them when they are exhibited. This must be avoided, or your trouble and expence will be more or less wasted. Don't take the birds off the colouring matter too abruptly. Many birds appear to be right through with their moult, but when you catch them and examine their necks and heads, in most cases you find a great many pen feathers not burst through, and by denying them colour food, these will be found to come out patchy.

No matter how careful one is with birds during the moulting season, a few of them always come patchy in colour. This is brought about in several ways. For instance, during the moult colds and chills take place, especially with birds not of robust health, which causes them to become what is known as "stuck in the moult." That is, they stop moulting for a certain period. Again, during the moult, plucking takes place both with old and young, but generally the latter are the biggest sinners.

If I find one or two birds of a rather pugnacious nature, constantly annoying the others, I fetch them out, and cage them by themselves. You will very often find them in a short space of time discontinue this brutal practice. They soon find out that the plucking hurts the feelings, and more often than not, it is a case of the biggest brutes being the biggest cowards.

Birds that appear somewhat patchy, you should catch and finger-moult; that is to say, draw all the lighter feathers out. Then place the birds on the usual colour-feed, and in due course, a more level colour will present itself. Mind you, I don't advise any fancier to literally pluck a bird alive. For birds only slightly patchy in colour, here and there, this method can be adopted without harm to the little creatures so treated. Birds which are badly patchy I recommend all to leave alone. You will very rarely make a decent job of it, and you will probably undermine their health. Birds which have survived the moult have already gone through a most trying ordeal, and deserve something better than abuse.

Again, always make a practice of getting them on to hard seed by degrees. Much damage is done by fanciers being in too great a hurry in doing this. Take time, and when once your birds are on hard seed, little attention will be necessary. The plumage tightens up by degrees. At this stage a few drops of Parrish's chemical food, or a little maw seed can be given. If this short paper proves of some little assistance to those present, I shall feel repaid for reading it to you to-night.

The Gentle Turtle Dove.

Where the brilliantly coloured field poppies brighten the corn field or make gorgeous patches of colour on the waste ground, the gentle Turtle Dove may be found congregated for the purpose of feeding upon the seeds. When unmolested they get so tame and confiding that we are able to get quite close to them. We put up a dozen or so from a small patch of rough ground the other day, but they did not appear at all frightened. Flapping across to the railway bank, they waited until we had passed, when they once more returned to the feast, and here we found them, or some of their friends, a couple of hours later, when returning from our ramble over the downs. These birds appear to be unusually plentiful this season—a circumstance which I have noted in previous years. When the weather has been warm and congenial in wet season they are generally somewhat scarce. Possibly they migrate to drier quarters.

BENGER'S

By THOMAS SMITH.

Egg and other dishes cannot be kept too clean, and should be washed daily in hot water, the fancier taking care to remove everything that is likely to taint the food or in any way lead to disorder.

The Question of Green Food.

Green food should be judiciously selected. The most successful breeders give this their close, personal attention, gathering the food, supplying it and removing all decayed food. The object of this is to keep the old and young in proper health. This entails a lot of work, but ensures well-filled cages at the end of the season, and this makes it worth the while

There is no doubt that personal attention given to the birds has many advantages. Fresh food (egg mixture and green) given three times a day is not, in my opinion, too much. I can, however, vouch for the successful rearing of the young during one's annual holiday, the birds being attended to only once a day; but that was towards the end of the season when green food was plentiful and ripe. Chickweed, say in August, is in such a condition that no harm comes from leaving it for a day. Tainted green-food dangers occur in the early part of the breeding season.

Choice of Utensils.

—Every bird-room should be supplied with a round scraper, with edges like a saw with which to keep perches clean. Also, there should be an egg-and-bread mill to pass the egg and biscuit through, so that it comes out ready to be supplied to the birds. A hemp-seed bruiser is very useful when the birds are feeding and when the young commence to do for themselves.

A bath is very necessary, and there should be no difficulty in getting this want supplied. A nest mould should also be included. This is for putting nests into. There should be no difficulty in getting this. Dummy eggs—to induce hens to sit while their own are away—must also be kept in stock.

A spare supply of drinking glasses should be available in case those in use are broken, and some clean, spare cages should always be ready for use to meet any emergency. They also serve for putting young birds into. Scarcely a bird-room is without a feather-eater, and a nursery cage should be at hand to be put into use at a moment's notice.

The Training of Young Birds.

We often hear the well-worn truism that if a bird has all the winning qualities, it does not need to be trained. That may be so, but even the most perfect bird gains by handling. Likely winners should, therefore, be run into a show cage, and handled in the same way in which judges handle them when putting them through their facings.

In point of fact, fanciers who have the very pick of stock have an immense advantage, inasmuch as they have numerous visitors calling to see the birds, and handling them carefully; thus, the owner is saved the trouble of doing so. Birds that pass through this ordeal are prepared for the stir of a show, and fall into position the more readily.

Every opportunity should be taken to train young birds, or, in other words, to help them to be ready for the Show Bench. At this time of the year do not overlook the less promising. The moult works wonders, and sometimes a winner arises from a hitherto unpromising specimen. A good plan is to give all fair attention. It means work, but a real fancier does not consider it work. A new interest comes into the life of a breeder on the young reaching six weeks old, and it begins to show what is in it. And it is interesting to watch such breeding from day to day.

The Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries indicate earlier than any other cage birds what they are likely to do in competition, being, as they are, birds chiefly of position.

July will be found to be the busiest month of the year in an aviary where there is a measure of success. A fair proportion of the young are then on the perch, and the chances are that there are also some well-filled nests, the young of which are in course of being reared. Other nests will probably have eggs in them. So that the fancier has little spare time till well on in October, when surplus stock gets scattered.

Leaving Stock to Deputies.

Holidays usually occur at about this time, and the fancier, after all his well-directed labours, leaves his stock to the charge of a deputy. In nine cases out of ten, or perhaps oftener, the deputy has a very superficial knowledge of how to act in the management of the stock, and as a general result one after another of the birds drops out of the ranks, and when the owner returns recruited for the work of the near future, his regret is that he did not stay at home and attend to the birds personally.

Cage birds are admittedly a drawback at holiday time, but, on the other hand, they afford pleasure and profit throughout the year.

The safest plan is for two neighbouring fanciers, who are on friendly terms (and all fanciers who enter into the true spirit of the Fancy should be on the closest of fellowship), and who are able to get their holidays at different times, to take it in turns to look after each other's stocks.

A lot depends upon keeping what one has got. Some breeders are accredited with being able to count on every bird that breaks the egg-shell; that is, perhaps, somewhat exaggerated, but we have known fanciers, whose success has been so marked, that they come very near an approach to that ideal. Fanciers try to count upon birds that get on to the perch, but those that do get so far do not all survive. I have just heard of a case in which what seemed a fine, thriving nest of youngsters passed suddenly away at the age of three weeks—a very unpleasant experience. Young birds have to be constantly watched, and no one can understand them better than their owners. It is, therefore, an advantage, when he can do it, for the fancier to keep a daily look over his stock all the year round, so that he may keep what he has already got.

On Late Breeding.

An odd pair of Canaries may have a clutch of eggs in the beginning of August, in which case the wisest course for the fancier to pursue is to allow the birds to hatch the eggs and rear the young. August is favourable for rearing, seeing that green food is plentiful, and in dipital condition. Chickweed, too, can be had from the late potato fields, and is then at its very best.

If the birds have done well in the former part of the season, they should not be encouraged to continue breeding, but should be separated, it being most desirable that they should get through the moult before the colder weather sets in.

There is a class of Scotch Fancy Canaries, of medium size and light build, and also smooth in feather, which in the first year may not be able to compete with others; but with the natural growth attendant only on the advance of time, are equal to any others in competition. If a bird of this sort is to take a place in the honours, it cannot be too early moulted, it being a decided advantage for it to have its new clothing on for the early shows.

Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries should have come thoroughly through the moult before they have to face the judges Both being birds of position, they are severely taxed at shows by fanciers and visitors handling their cages.

Through a Bird-room Window.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR,

The Bichenos begin to build far too early in the year, probably imagining they are in Queensland. Consequently disaster frequently dogs their domestic arrangements. The great thing is to put off nesting till the weather is propitious. This, I grant you, is a bit difficult in our climate, when one literally never knows what a day will bring forth. Still, it must be done, unless you want to lose your hens. My Bichenos, unlike Zebra Finches, prefer to build their own nest in a bush. It is a beautiful oblong little thing of hay, warmly lined with feathers. No doubt it is all right for Australia, where there is no rain in the breeding season, but a more ridiculous affair for a good English downpour could not be imagined. Hence, if you want to breed Bichenos, they must be under cover (unless you can guarantee a rainless summer).

The eggs, like those of all the little Australian Finches, are white and pointed, and the average is three or four. The hen incubates for 13 days, and the young are assiduously fed by both parents. On emerging from the nest they are exactly like their parents, so far as size and markings are concerned, but they are far browner all over. Most of the birds that come over annually are youngsters, hence the necessity of keeping them a year before any breeding results can be looked for.

Farrar's Final.

Bichenos are apt to go light when first imported, so that it is well when buying them to feel the breast bone, as if this is at all sharp, they are going home very shortly. They require to be very gradually hardened off, or you will infallibly lose them. This is my final opinion. Some people haven't one. Somebody once asked Palgrave if his opinion was final. "Not at all," was the airy reply: "I am what they call a Senior Examiner. Above me are the three assistant secretaries, Mr. A., Mr. B., and Mr. C.; above them is the secretary, Sir F. Sandford, above him the vice-president, above him the Lord President, Lord Ripon, and above him, I believe, the Almighty!"

The price varies, as in all foreign birds, with the supply. I should say that you would probably be asked 15s. a pair the moment they land, but I would far rather pay 50s. for thoroughly acclimatised pair. pay 50s. for a thoroughly acclimatised pair. I have sometimes bought ten pairs at a time, and like Clive (when I consider my opportunities), I have been surprised at my moderation, though probably no one else would be. I remember once being offered thirty, and I only left out ten, and that because I fancied they looked like "going-home."

According to some books on Foreign Birds, Bichenos are the easiest of any birds to breed. Don't believe. No foreign bird is easy to breed. The successes are few and far between. The failures—of which we never hear—are innumerable. When I read these statements, I sympathise with Mr. Bultitude in "Vice Versâ," who, when given bills of parcels to do, was (as a business man) disgusted at their glaring improbabilities! Those who have bred Bichenos can be reckoned comfortably on the fingers of one hand. Remember, as the American said of his old, sick father, so you may have to say of your birds, in the very moment of apparent success. "Yes," he said, "I've had the worst kind of luck with the old man. I knew he was ailin', so I paid his expenses out from Missouri, and fed him with the best o' corn all through the fall and winter. And then, when spring come, and I was calculatin' that I'd get a summer's work out of him, he up and died!" Of course, it may be intensely amusing to my readers to read of my follies and losses, but I suppose they are like the little boy who, reading of the Battle of Omdurman, whispered, "I do hope the Queen will keep the war in Egypt going—for me!"

Chapter XVII.—The Nesting of Pennants Parrakeets.

I am sometimes afraid that my readers will weary of my frequent signatures over articles sent in, but I cannot help my birds doing so well, so with this brief apology, I will begin.

I may perhaps be permitted, before commencing my story, to refer to a paper I wrote some years ago on the Sex of Pennants. I then pointed out that there is no possibility of mistaking a cock for a hen Pennant, although many so-called "authorities" state that there is no way of telling t'other from which. Writing of Pennants, Mr. Gedney, in "Foreign Cage Birds," says: "The inability to recognise any outward distinction of the sexes in these birds has deterred many amateurs from attempting to breed them in captivity. Beyond an imperceptibly lighter shade upon the breast of the adult hen, and a somewhat smaller and more effeminate head, there is absolutely no means by which an inexperienced person could determine the sexes." Dr. Greene is even more careful not to commit himself. "The sexes," he says, "resemble each other in size and colouring, although the tints of the plumage of the female are, perhaps, not quite so brilliant as in the male bird."

A Slight Mistake.

I can only conclude that Mr. Gedney and Dr. Greene never saw a hen Pennant, otherwise they would never have penned such statements! There is absolutely no possibility of mistaking a hen for a cock Pennant. They are as different as chalk from cheese.

In the first place the hen Pennant is one-third smaller than the cock, and has a small round head; whereas he has a very flattened crown, and a sharply retreating forehead. These points alone would almost be sufficient to any but a tyro, but when we come to examine the plumage, a mistake is absolutely impossible. The cock has a brilliant crimson head, extending right over the neck and cheeks. The hen is not nearly so richly coloured, and her red on the cheeks shades away into yellow on the neck, and the cheeks are a pale greenish pink in greenish colour. The chin of the cock is a splendid violet; that of the hen is quite pale violet. The breast of the cock is deep crimson, while the breast of the hen is bricky red, the lower feathers being tipped with green.

The back of the cock has each feather black, edged with rich crimson, and that of the hen on the top part has each feather dull black, edged with a very narrow strip of colour-like the cover of a popular magazine, followed by a broader strip of yellowish red; the lower feathers are dull black, and are edged with greenish yellow. The shoulder of the cock is a rich mauve; the shoulder of the hen a pale mauve; the wing of the cock a dark violet, and the flights are of a much better colour than in the hen, being almost Oxford blue. The shoulder of the hen is a fairly dark violet, shaded towards the back with pale mauve, and edged with rather faded yellow. The rump of the cock is a brilliant crimson, while the rump of the hen is a paler colour, like a red Rosella. The tail of cock has the outer feathers of a rich violet, the centres being black; while that of the hen has them violet with greenish centres. The legs of the cock are black, those of the hen being grey.

I may say that nearly all the birds sold us here are young birds, in their nest feathers, the said youngsters being dark green, mottled and splashed with red, but no one who has had a hen would ever be deceived by such.

Engaging Creatures.

Pennants are most engaging birds. My hen is so tame, although she is in a good-sized aviary, that she is almost a nuisance. Whenever I go out, she at once comes to the edge of the wire, and begins rubbing her head on a branch as a gentle hint that she would like a little flowering grass, or some green corn in the ear, or above all a fat mealworm; she will carry on a little conversation in Pennantese, if I make a kissing noise with my lips. Her lord and master is a bit more suspicious, although absurdly eager to know what is going on, and to see what his wife has got. Poor fellow, I expect he remembers the day when he was trapped in Australia, owing to his enquiring turn of mind.

Pennants are perfectly hardy, but they don't like too much sun, and quite pant like old hens do at midday. They sleep in the covered run during the hottest part of the day, and, like all the Australian birds, are far more lively as evening draws on. The cock's note is something like the barking of a dog, and he has rather a pretty whistle in the spring.

I feed them on hemp and canary seed, and they have a nice little grass plot in their aviary. They are very great bathers, and delight in getting into a deep pan, and making the water fairly fly. Mine have an aviary to themselves, as do all my Parrakeets; so that I do not know how they would behave in mixed society; but I should not care to risk them with any birds I valued much.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

Wild Birds Among Corn.

The season is passing rapidly, much too quickly for those who love the open air and the fields and hedgerows. The gathering of the harvest is one more stage in the pageant of summer. From seed time until the ripening of the corn appears but a short span; it seems but yesterday that we watched the ploughing of the land, and now the crop is being gathered. The sprouting seed was just peeping through the brown earth when the Skylarks courted. The growing corn hid the shallow nest, with its brownish mottled eggs; the young ones grew, and learned to fend for themselves, while the tall stalks hid them from view, and afforded them shelter from the hot sun and pelting rains. And now they are as big as their parents, and are already recording their song. The past months have been so full of sunshine and warmth, with an absence of nest-wrecking storms, that bird life appears more plentiful than ever. To note this one has only to choose a quiet corner of a field, or a hedgerow bordering a corn field. The former upon a sloping bank, and being higher than the field, protects the crop from boisterous winds and driving rain. A corn field suffers most from the ravages of the birds round the verge near the hedge. Wild birds naturally congregate in the bushes and trees, and it is but a short drop into the standing corn. Many stalks are bent and broken, the heads pointing downwards. This is the work of the Sparrows and Greenfinches; the stalks are strong enough to hold the full head of wheat, but the additional weight of a bird bends and breaks them.

Where the Cuckoo Calls.

It is an error to suppose that the Cuckoo sings only in England; it is to be heard throughout Europe and Northern Asia, excepting on the extensive tracts of wild waste land. It also visits India. It would be interesting to know if the same birds return to this country each season.

When Some Birds are Noisy.

It is a curious fact in ornithology that all birds which are silent, shy, and unobtrusive the year round, collecting together at breeding time, are most noisy and riotous while nesting and rearing their young. It almost appears as though they purposely wish to draw attention to their proceedings at that period. Herons and Gulls are good examples of this peculiar trait.

The Rook and the Daw.

After the single brood of young ones is safely reared, the Rooks, both old and young, lead a lazy, indolent life throughout the summer; food is plentiful, and they have no cause to worry until the harvest is past. The Jackdaws daily consort with them, and it is strange how the larger birds allow these rascals to keep company with them. The small birds of the hedgerow make quite a fuss when the Daw goes near their home, and the Missel Thrush scolds and chatters and buffets like one possessed, but the Rook fraternizes with the Daw, and will suffer him to approach the colony as no other bird will. He is treated as almost one of the family; possibly they each recognise the other's strength and ability, and so keep a perpetual truce.

Eggs and Young Birds.

One frequently finds clutches of eggs destroyed, and the nest consequently deserted by the birds, the broken shells lying scattered in and on the edges of the nest. It is a difficult matter in every case to be able to say positively how this happens, because we have egg-destroying birds, and also animals. In the case of birds which nest in the underwood and low bushes along the hedgerows, such as Hedge Sparrows and Yellow Buntings, no doubt many of their clutches are destroyed by the common field mouse. One is always sorry to see these lost clutches, but a worse case is that where the young have been reared to within a few days of their taking to the wing, and then have fallen a prey to rats or some other larger vermin.

WASHING A NIGGER WHITE

is now recognised to be an impossible performance.

Though recognizing its vital importance on their chances of success, many fanciers have hitherto thought the proper washing and preparing of their birds an impossible performance also.

But it is NOT, for everyone can learn.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL WILL TEACH YOU!

In "Cage Birds Annual" is a wonderfully helpful article, fully illustrated from photographs, which in simple, direct manner, will tell you how to Wash and Prepare your Birds for Exhibition. Send your sixpence now, and learn the secrets of the "Old Hands" before the show season is upon you. CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL will tell you in addition a multitude of things worth knowing about Birds and the Cage Bird World.

Such Marvellous Value has never before been offered.

See what You Get for Your Money.
Coloured Plate.
An exquisite portrayal of the noted Bramble-finch-Chaffinch Hybrid, bred by Miss Reeves.
Calendar.
A monthly calendar and diary, with novel table for ascertaining when eggs are due to hatch.
"Work of the Year."
A splendidly useful article, in which is set out the work amongst your birds for each month of the year. Perusal of it will enable the bird-keeper to anticipate his future wants, and be always ready to do whatever is needful and beneficial for his stock. Full of practical hints.
"Washing and Preparing Birds for Exhibition."
Fully illustrated with sketches from specially-taken photographs, this is the finest article on the art of washing birds ever published. By following the clear instructions, and studying the diagrams, the veriest beginner can successfully compass the washing of his own birds.
"The Breeding and Rearing of Canaries."
A very practical and thorough contribution from the pen of an old fancier, who gives many excellent "tips" as to the best ways to proceed. An article that will teach you something.
"Pairs Matched for Breeding."
A contribution from the pen of a well-known judge, which will make the fancier think.
"The Breeding of Hybrids."
An article on the fascinating pursuit of Hybrid breeding, by one who has made it a considerable study, and devoted much time to it. There are hints and advice in this contribution which may bring you profit and fame.
"The Keeping of British Birds."
A concise and practical article dealing with the mistakes of fanciers, and the keeping of birds in show condition, and giving valuable "tips" on feeding.
"Some Easily Obtainable Foreign Birds."
An account of some pretty and hardy species, with information on their caging and feeding.
"Review of the Exhibition Year."
Every breed of Canary, together with Hybrids, British and Foreign birds, has its progress on the show-bench during 1907 dealt with by leading judges, specialists, and experts, and the names of the principal winning exhibitors are given.
"The Diseases of Cage-Birds."
A feature in itself worth the whole cost of the volume. Diseases and accidents are described, and the best medicines and methods of treatment stated in simple language, and very fully and completely. It will save you many valuable birds.
"Glossary of Terms."
The curious terms used by fanciers are fully explained. Reference to the alphabetically-arranged columns will at once tell you the meaning of such expressions as jonque, leafy feather, mooning, rowing, and the like.

In addition to these features will be found a
Directory to Cage-Bird Clubs, Associations and Societies, with particulars of subscriptions, etc., list of Officials and Secretary's name and address.
Directory to Prominent Breeders and Exhibitors of Cage-Birds.
Directory to Judges of Cage-Birds.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor for the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words, MINIMUM Fourpence. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

THE THING

that isn't what it seems finds no place with me. I do not sell you American cotton netting and call it thread, nor jute lines for hemp. Everything I sell is guaranteed to be exactly as described and advertised, and is sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless perfectly satisfactory to you your money is promptly refunded in full without question or comment. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾-inch mesh thread, 3 yards long, 4/-; 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair; all are actually 5½ feet deep and strike 4 feet. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, and are fitted up complete with birch stave poles, birch pegs, and Russian hemp lines, with everything complete ready for immediate setting. Sparrow nets fitted complete on 19 ft. bamboo poles, 6/6 pair; ditto on 14 ft. poles, 5/6 pair. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/- each; ditto 18 inches long, 9d. each; carriage, 4d. extra. These net traps are by far the largest and best on the market, and are guaranteed to catch and hold any bird from Wren to Rook without injury. Mr. Jeffreys, the well-known Nightingale expert, and winner of CAGE BIRDS' recent essay competition, says: "I find your net traps the best I can get, and I always use them for Softbill catching." Loose netting, exactly same as my clap nets are made from, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep 3d. yard, 9 feet deep 4d. yard, post free. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 10d. and 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to reset immediately a bird is caught, 1/6 each. Round or square topped call cages, as supplied to hundreds of catchers and dealers; my price 3d. each, 2/6 dozen. Genuine Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made; does not run in sun nor freeze in winter, and will hold a Hawk or Rook on hottest day in summer; ½-lb. 6d., ¾-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6; sample box, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: Imitators may copy name of my lime, but they cannot copy quality and price. Solid hemp pull lines, 6ft yards long, 1/4 each, carriage paid. These lines are specially spun and finished without snarl or back twist, and are strong enough for boat lines. See following few testimonials; thousands more open for inspection any time. "Lower Hooe, near Plymouth, August 16th.—Sir,—Please send ¾-lb. birdlime, as I had fine results from using your lime last season.—Yours, H. Burridge." "13, Pump-st., Nottingham, August 18th.—Sir,—Received pull line safe, and am very pleased with it and your way of doing business.—Yours, Mr. Harrison (48 years a Linnet catcher)." "Garth View, Builth Wells, August 10th.—Sir,—Please send ½ lb. birdlime. A friend of mine will want some after he sees this, as we cannot get any good lime anywhere.—Yours, John Hyde." "10, St. George's-passage, Kent-st., Portsea.—Sir,—Please send following loose netting for clap nets. I had some from you two years ago which is just as good now as the day I had it, and I think is marvellous value for the money.—Yours, J. Devine." Mr. Dobley, the well-known catcher of Holbeach, says: "Please send following nets, as your netting is as up-to-date to other makers' stuff as refined gold is to copper." The Editor of CAGE BIRDS, in commenting on netting and lines used in making my nets, says: "They are of the very best quality, and nets made from such materials should give the highest satisfaction to users and stand a great amount of wear and tear." Everything required by catchers kept in stock. Please send lamp for full printed list and sample of netting, and compare sizes, quality, and prices with those of other makers. One trial solicited. See British Bird column for further advert.

MY SELF-ACTING SPRING NET TRAPS catch birds of every description without any attention, price 1/6; larger size, 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are worth double the money of any trap advertised. Read two, and beware of cheaper imitations that are not worth the cost of carriage: "Sir,—I received the net trap; it is honestly worth a dozen of some of the nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I have caught in other traps in two months.—George Matthews, Bird Catcher, 2, Lucas-street, Stockport." "Sir,—Trap arrived. It is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches.—J. Scragg, The Old Brewery, Armitage-road, Rugeley." Trap cages, single 6d., double 1/-, treble 1/3. Entirely self-acting and self-setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and rest without attention, 1/6; call cages, 4d.—Henry Morris, 112, Capebill, Birmingham.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING OF THE WORLD.

and champion of all champions. I'm patronized by all the leading exhibitors, Mule breeders, and contest singers. I have the largest and finest strain in the world, and I have sent out more winners than all the little Linnet Kings put together the last twelve months for contests and show bench. Proof this paper. Gentlemen, I have the following for sale: House-moulted Linnets, real toppers, 15/-; house moulted Linnets, right for catching with or teaching young ones, 10/6; house-moulted Linnets, right for catching with, 7/6. All the above are bought by the champion of the world. My special Linnet, with the beautiful polished contest cage, and my book of secrets, with instructions how to feed, and a packet of special mixture, 4/-. This is the best and cheapest lot ever put before the public. Beautiful Linnets, singing grand, the same as I have supplied to Bird Clubs in Leeds, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/- each. They come from the same place as my champions, and they are the talk of Leeds for length, colour, and size. Larks, singing grand, finger tame, 1/- and 1/6. Larks, singing grand, with a beautiful polished cage, and instructions how to feed, 3/6 the lot. Fit for any drawing room. My book of secrets 1/6. Look out for my big Goldfinches shortly. I have hundreds in stock. All my birds are on seven days' approval, cash or deposit. Please state wants to the largest British Bird Dealer, Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

HAVE YOU NOTICED

that all birds I send out are sent on approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or on CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, on the distinct understanding that your money is returned in full if birds fail to prove entirely satisfactory. There is no dodging or unmentioned conditions about my method, you return birds, and I promptly and cheerfully return full cash—see? I claim to be the originator of this system in connection with wild birds, and have never traded under any other conditions during the whole 18 years of my business career. Grand lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, 1,6 each, 3 4/-, 6 6,6, 12 12/-; specially selected larger cocks for show or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2,6, six 4/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, used as call-bird regularly, 3,6; splendid lot cock brown Linnets, in pink of health, every one warranted a cock, and most of them red-breasted, 9d. each, three 1,6, six 2,6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; hen hen Linnets stocked; young cock Bullfinches, 1,6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; splendid lot young cock Skylarks, in song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each, all very steady, and right sort for making champion songsters; hand-reared cock Larks, that have won contests, and can win again, 20/-, 30/-, and 40/- each; hand-reared cock Song Thrush, singing, 2/6; two-year-old hand-reared Thrush, probably loudest songster extant, but now moulting, 5/-, worth 50/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6; cages of every description in stock; dealers send stamp for full list of sizes and prices. See following few letters:—"194, Chorley Old-road, Bolton, August 10th.—Sir, please send three Linnets. I had one from you last season, which proved a beauty for song. Yours, J. Crane." "19, Coningsby-road, Fir Vale, Sheffield, August 15th.—Sir, received Goldfinch safely, and can assure you it gives every satisfaction. I shall not forget where to place my future orders. Thanking you for selection, yours, H. Nelson." "284, Duke-street, Dennistown, August 8th.—Sir, birds to hand to-day, and all seem to be in good condition. Many thanks. Yours, D. Weatherhead." "Togston-terrace, Broomhill, Acklington. August 8th.—Sir, I received all birds in fine condition, and am well pleased with them, for they give every satisfaction. I am really surprised at them, for the money believe me you deal fair. Yours, T. Farrington." "2, Lumley-terrace, East Hartlepool, August 5th.—Sir, received Goldfinch, and am quite satisfied. He is a nice bird for the money. Yours, F. Thompson." Hundreds similar letters open for inspection. All birds sold by me are guaranteed exactly as advertised. All are properly netted in Worcestershire by professional catchers employed regularly by me, and all property on hard seed, and in perfect health and condition before sent out. A perusal of the "Wanted" column of this paper will show that I do not advertise for Goldfinches, etc., from any part of country, and then advertise them for sale as Worcestershire birds. I have more Worcestershire birds through my hands in a season than all other dealers together (denial challenged). If you want genuine cocks for your money, send to me, as I guarantee sex in every instance, and sell cocks as cocks, and hens as hens, not hens for cocks. Established 18 years. See Appliance column for all catchers' appliances.

MATTHEWS, LINNET KING.

Exhibitors, Mule Breeders, Contest Singers.—I don't want audacious or ridiculous prices, nor do I advertise the champion if I am not the champion, but I say I am one of the largest Linnet fanciers and trainers in the world; also I occupy the largest stone buildings in England, specially built for training, selecting, etc. When you come to visit me you don't find an old hay shed or empty bedroom, or an old hen coop. Just go round to all the champion Linnet Kings' aviaries, and then come and see mine. You will never be more surprised in your life, as all of them say the same when once they have seen mine. I have the largest stock in the world, bar none. Contradiction defied. Don't be gulled. The only man that sends out on seven days' approval, year round. Read CAGE BIRDS for proof. Send you cash to the editor; your orders to me. That is all I want. Linnets, Linnets. Giant's well marked and pencilled like Thrushes, 1,6, 2/-, and 2/6; also over 300 trained under my famous old champions, singing well, 1/6, 2/- each, with singing cage, packet of seed, book of instructions, 3/- lot; four packets seed, 1/-, 7lbs. 2/6. A few Linnets, grand catchers, used to net, 2/6 each. Goldfinches, Goldfinches. Pear Tree Goldfinches, over 300 in stock. Have a few massive Bulldogs, well-buttoned, tanned, mooned, etc., sure winners, 2/6 and 3/- each, two specials, 4/- each. A few singing mad for catchers 3/- each, used to the nets. Giant yellow Greenfinches, 1/- each; massive Redpolls, 1/-, Yellow hammers, beauties, 1/-, Chaffinches 1/-, young Larks 1/-, 1/6 each, hand-reared 2/6; splendid Hawfinch 5/-, or any kind of British you require. State wants. Notice, seven days' approval. Linnet fanciers' guide, double number, 1/3, post free.—Matthews, Bird Specialist, Hyde, Cheshire.

A TIP!

If you want the best value for money you must send to the fountain head and save middlemen's profits. Without a doubt I have at present the best collection of Canaries ever seen in breeding rooms and aviaries; odd birds and matched pairs that cannot be equalled elsewhere at higher prices. Please note, I offer you genuine adult birds in full song and breeding condition—not sickly birds that are dear at any price. I offer you sound, healthy, reliable birds as follows: Yorkshire cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/-; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; Norwich cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6; hens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each; matched breeding pairs, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6; feeding and Mule breeding hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; Crested and Crestbreds, 10/6, 12/6 pair; St. Andreasberg Rollers for tutors and schoolmasters, cocks in full song by day and artificial light, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; a few reliable hens, 2/-, 2/6 each; neat travelling cages, 3d. each; full illustrated list of birds and cages, 1d. for postage. Eggsupas, the up-to-date cooked egg-food, 8d., 1/3, 1/10 tin, carriage paid; also specially prepared, with colour food, same prices. All birds travel at my sole risk; on seven days' approval.—Miss E. L. Storey, Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

HUMMEL ROLLERS.

Finest Rollers imported. To speak well of the Hummel is to gild refined gold. Testimonials from customers who say the Hummel is still singing as sweetly as when purchased four, five, six, and seven years ago. All Hummels have delightful, deep, delicate bow roll, hollow roll, hollow bow roll, du pipe, hollow bell roll, grand round bass roll, vibrating hollow roll, and charming water bubble roll; one price only, 12s. 6d.; no fancy prices; Hummel hens, 3s. each; a beautiful pair of Hummels for 15s. BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have tramed them, know their wants; and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our rrisk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

THE MOST WONDERFUL TALKING

South African Grey Parrot living; can say anything; been in England four years at one address only; therefore, knows how to talk to perfection. He is in the pink of health and condition, with splendid red tail. Now, this Parrot is a real champion talker (not like some, only say a few words); he will talk in anyone's company, and is not shy. The price of this wonderful talker, with its splendid cage, is £15. One week's approval, which will be quite sufficient for him to show you his talking powers. Honestly worth £50. List of words, etc., on application. Cash or deposit. Wire or write to Geo. Cubley, Roman Villas, Long Sutton, Lincs.

A free handicap for Chaffinches has been arranged for September, for particulars of which see CAGE BIRDS.—F. WESTMORE, timekeeper.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Usual week-end singing contest took place on August 23rd, when 20 birds sang for three good prizes. Result: 1, J. H. Myers; 2, C. Lauriman; and 3, J. Chippindale. Judges, Messrs. H. Allen and R. Jackson.—W. DEAN, sec.

BEGINNERS: READ "CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL.

THE SHOWS.

ARDUDWY.

This show was held on August 22nd, when cage birds were provided for the first time. CANARY: 1, J. E. Jones, good Norwich, full of quality; 2, E. Edwards, first Leather Yorkshire, will make up well after moult. A.O.V. OR MULE: 1, D. Griffith, Goldfinch Canary, in fine form; 2, D. R. Jones, Greenfinch Canary, lovely bird.

CHIPPING SODBURY.

Several very fine birds were to be found in the cage bird section of the annual show held at Yate on August 12th. The entries, however, were not numerous, the classification being only a very small one. The exhibition, nevertheless, proved an attractive one, and this, if nothing else, should encourage the committee to make better provision for our feathered pets in future years. Mr. Dagger judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NOR.: 1, spl, 2, Dyer; 3, Berry; vhc, Prior. YORKS.: 1, Towerby; 2, Berry; 3, Coates. BRIT.: 1, Woolpack; 2, Coates. LOCAL CLASSES: 1, Drew, 2, Powell; 3, Cock; vhc, Fishlock.

HOLMFIRTH.

In connection with the horticultural show held on Aug. 22nd, Mr. C. R. Hampshire made the cage bird section awards. This section was much admired. The Society would be well advised to make better provision for cage birds, and this the committee could well afford.

CANARY: 1, Bray, grand buff Norwich, well frosted, nice wings and Norwich properties, easy win; 2, Ibbotson, yellow Yorks., good length, not "Hundried" as it should be, yet earned its place; 3, Holmes, nice buff Yorks; vhc, he, Smith. BRIT.: 1, Smith, very nicely pencilled Linnet in hard feather; 2, Roberts, moderate sized Goldie, but a good one; 3, Bardy.

SHILDON.

A large number of visitors patronised the cage bird section of the local show held on August 15th. The birds were admirably staged in a conveniently situated and well ventilated marquee, and were a source of great interest. Considering the time of year and the consequent condition of the fanciers' pets, the entries, though not any too numerous, were of excellent quality; especially was this the case in regard to the British birds, which included among their number many well-known winners. The arrangements of this section of the show were in the hands of Mr. J. T. Lowthian, the late secretary, to whom every praise is due for his successful management. The committee are to be congratulated on their success, and might do well to make still more classes for cage birds. Messrs. Gray Brothers judged, and their awards appeared to give satisfaction.

NOR.: 1, Wilson, fine bouncing yell., A1 colour and quality, grand shape; 2, Heaviside, not the size, but smart and typical; 3, vhc, Dawson, both nice birds, good quality. CREST-BRED: 1, Taylor, fine body and skull, feather in plenty; 2, Sanders and Son, another good bodied one, well clothed. CRESTS: 1, Taylor, clear, nice and round, and well-filled, good texture; 3, Dawson, very fair headpiece, good size and quality. YORKS. YELL.: 1, 2, Rutherford and Bright, a clear and a ticked, both beauties, fine shape and style, well on leg, neat; 3, Elliott, very neat and nice, good length and stand. BUFF: 1, Elliott, fine long, good-sided bird, nice legs, neat; 2, 3, Peacock, not so long, but the right shape, good quality. PAIR OF CANARIES: 1, Taylor, smart Crests, well matched, the Plainhead has a nice skull; 2, Elliott, good Yorkies, typical couple; 3, Wilson, smart Nor. Plainheads, good style, neat; vhc, Sanders and Son. BRIT. SMALL: 1, vhc, Forster, very fine Wheatear, pink of condition, wins well; 2, Wilkinson and Danby, big, shapely Nightingale, nice colour; 3, Todd and Son, sweet little Whitethroat, good feather; extra 3, Wildsmith and Hawkins, rattling good Goldfinch, excellent chestnut body and big, full blaze, should have gone up a bit. LINNET: 1, Todd and Son, big, well-built bird, nice colour; 2, Wildsmith and Hawkins, pressed hard, fine nut brown, well marked; 3, Holmes, good stamp of bird. SELL. (10s.): 1, Wildsmith and Hawkins; 2, Todd and Son; 3, Taylor; vhc, Forster. (7s. 6d.): 1, Wilson.

VAYNOL PARK (North Wales).

A successful show of cage birds in connection with other live stock, was held at Vaynol Park on August 15th in Mr. C. G. Assheton-Smith's grounds. Despite the temporary ravages of the moult on many of the birds which hitherto have been able to hold their heads above the others, we had a fair entry, and some quality, there being on view a number of previous winners. In fact, all things considered, the exhibits were an excellent display. There were some young birds which, after the moult, should do not a little winning for their owners. The arrangements were in the capable hands of the hon. sec., Mr. W. T. Davies, and his assistant, Mr. O. T. Williams, who are deserving of every praise.

NOR P.H.: 1, Winnard, fine size, and very good shape and style, in nice order; 2, G. Jones, grand bird for type, nice mealing, full of quality, close up; 3, Williams, good bird, wants well feeding; res, Aitken, very fair type; vhc, Thomas. TKD., ETC.: 1, spl best Canary, Winnard, rare good yell. for shape and quality, wins well; 2, G. Jones, smart buff, good style; 3, Williams, very nice type of bird, bit smaller. HEN: 1, Winnard, sweet yell., fine body, neat all over; 2, E. J. Jones, good cl. buff, nice quality; 3, Hughes, useful stamp, wee bit smaller. YORKS.: 1, Owen Bros., yell., marked wing (we thought should have been in the next class), good, upstanding stylish bird, all quality; 2, Roberts, fine long clear yell., very smart stand, neat; 3, vhc, and c, Williams, good one for style and length, not filled in at top yet, will improve; res, W. H. Jones, the right stamp; vhc, W. and R. Jones; c, Evans. TKD., ETC., 1, 2, Roberts, nice young yell, leading, excellent quality, well drawn, stylish, latter a buff of good type and feather; 3, J. T. Jones, another fine quality buff, very straight and neat; res, W. H. Jones, very silky and neat, beaten length; vhc, Evans. HEN: 1, Dorkins, sweet, shapely yell., rare quality, very neat; 2, Roberts, very nice buff, stylish, compact; 3, G. Jones, good long bird, well on leg, neat; res., T. Owen, typical; vhc, Jones, he, Evans; c, Hughes. BORDER: Cancelled. A.O.V.: 1, W. H. Jones, good Crest, headpiece of good size and shape, fine quality; 2, 3, E. J. Jones, another excellent Crest, followed by bouncing crest-bred; res, Weaver, Lizard, well spangled, good shape, neat; vhc, E. F. Jones; he, Hughes. MULE: 1, E. Williams, nice Goldie Bullie, good flush, fine shape; 2, vhc, Jones, fine coloured yell. Goldie Mule, stylish and polished; 3, Hunphreys, big variegated ditto, good face and quality; res, Owen; he, Davies; c, Owen Bros. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 1, 3, H. Owen, both smart Finches, leader the best in shape and blaze, very fine condition, rich colour throughout; 2, Owen Bros., not far behind, nice face and markings generally, well tanned; res, W. Owen, again grand stamp of Finch; vhc, Price; he, Forbes; c, Hughes. BULLFINCH: 1, Winnard, fine colour, well marked, nice head; 2, Hughes, good bold bird; 3, Forbes, very fair. A.O.V.: 1, spl best Brit., Forbes, beautiful Hawfinch for colour and condition, very nice size and shape; 2, Owen Bros., big, well coloured Greenfinch; 3, Roberts, good Skylark, large, well pencilled; res, Owen; vhc, he, Davies; c, Williams. SELL. (7s. 6d.): 1, Winnard; 2, Roberts; 3, res, Jones.

RADSTOCK.

This show was held on August 19th in a field near the station. The weather and attendance were all that could be desired. The cage birds were staged at one end of a large marquee, and though not large in numbers, their quality was very good, considering the time of year. There were some good Yorkshires staged by Messrs. Beal, Horler, and Woodland. The last-named won the special for the best cage bird in show, with a grand young Yorkshire, which, with a good moult, should be heard of again. The courteous and obliging secretary, Mr. B. M. Clark, had everything in apple-pie order, and everything passed off smoothly. Mr. W. G. Bull judged, and seemed to give every satisfaction.

OPEN CLASSES.—YORKS. (9): 1, Pitman, clear buff, good quality and stand, well filled neck, extra condition; 2, Lane, yellow, nice stand, well filled back, wing nicely carried, just showing moult on shoulder; 3, Pope, variegated yellow, good condition, showing plenty of breed; vhc, c, F. Horler; he, Lane, all young birds showing moult. BRIT. (6): 1, Bond Bros., noted Chough, nice colour beak, showing age on leg; 2, Palmer, Bullfinch, large bird, nice feather; vhc, Millard; he, Woodland; c, Millsom. MEMBERS' CLASSES.—YORKS. YELL.: 1, spl, 2, J. Horler, 1st ticked over eye, grand shape and quality, 2nd well up on leg, good length; 3, Sims, clear, nice position, showing signs of moult; vhc, Woodland; he, Chivers; c, J. Horler. BUFF: 1, spl, 2, 3, J. Horler, 1st clear, nice carriage, and condition, 2nd wing ticked nicely drawn, well up on leg, nicely folded tail, 3rd eye and ring marked, nice style, taking exhibit; vhc, he, c, Woodland. YORKS., BRED 1908: 1, 2 specials for best in show, 2, Woodland, 1st nicely moulded buff, splashed on neck, grand wings and neck, neat head, with just a little more length should make a stormer, beautiful quality, 2nd clear buff, similar; 3, he, c, J. Horler, clear yellow, nice length and wing carriage, breaking into moult; vhc, Beal. A.O.V.: 1, c, Chivers, variegated crest-bred, plenty of feather of good quality; vhc, he, Beal. A.O.V., BRED 1908: 1, vhc, c, Beal, 1st crest-bred promising youngsters; he, Chivers. BRIT.: 1, 2, T. Heal, both Goldies, in nice condition, good blazes and tanning; 3, H. A. Heal, Bullfinch; vhc, he, Harrington; c, Dickett and Hodges.

CLUB REPORTS.

ABERDEEN O.S.

Meeting held in Trades' Hall on August 15th, the President, Mr. Hector, in the chair. The chief business was Mr. John Strachan's motion to fix a closing time for members in young bird section. After the motion had been pretty freely discussed, Mr. Wm. Rae moved an amendment that the rule remain this year as formerly. He thought it rather late this season, he said, for making alteration. The amendment was agreed to. A judge for the Crested section was nominated, and the meeting then closed.—J. BRYSON, sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

A meeting was held at the usual place on August 6th, Mr. Currah in the chair. A letter was read by the secretary from Mr. T. C. Crawhall resigning his membership, as a protest against the severity of the sentence passed upon him by the No. 1 District C.B.U. for showing birds at Stanhope Show (unlicensed). There were upwards of 50 members present, and they were emphatically indignant at Mr. Crawhall's being suspended for such a trivial offence, seeing he showed his birds to oblige a little sister who happened to reside in the neighbourhood of the show. The members thought that if he had been admonished that would have been ample under the circumstances. It was decided not to accept his resignation, the members having every respect for and confidence in Mr. Crawhall. It was also resolved that the secretary of the C.B.U. be written to and asked to have the case reconsidered as our own members thought the sentence far too severe. Our delegate, Mr. Macpartling, gave his report of the meeting of the C.B.U. He was most explicit in his remarks. A vote of thanks to him for the able manner in which he had given his report was passed. The next business was of a very pleasing nature—to some, at least—the paying of prize money won at the late nest feather show. The show, despite the unfavourable weather on that date, was a financial success. It was agreed to carry the balance to the Nest Feather Cup Fund. The secretaries also took subscriptions towards Cup Fund, and, like "Oliver Twist," are wanting more; so if any of our members who live at a distance care to send a small donation they may rest assured it will be thankfully received. A vote of thanks to our ever obliging chairman brought another enthusiastic meeting to a close. —CURRY AND HUTCHINSON, secs.

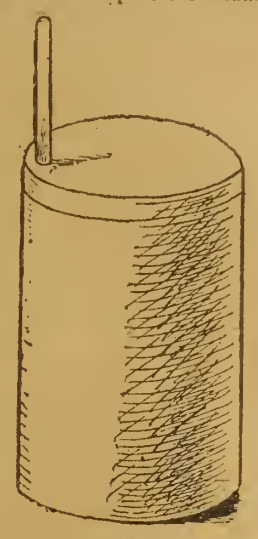
ILLUSTRATED IDEAS



Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 234.

A USEFUL SEED BOX FILLER.

Sent by O. Greenwood, 29, Wood End, Hobden Bridge.

I herewith enclose a sketch of a useful filler for seed-boxes, which I think will be useful to your readers. The idea is to go round the aviary or bird-room to every seed box and fill them up in one minute. What you require is a coffee tin (or any other suitable kind of tin), then get a spout soldered to the top of the tin, as per sketch. You may have the spout any width just to suit the seed you are giving. I should recommend the spout to be fastened as near the edge of the tin as possible, so that all the seed can be emptied out of it. I have got the same in use and find them very serviceable.—O. GREENWOOD.

No. 235.

A SPRING DOOR.

Sent by F. Jackson, 5, Free Trade, Fazeley, nr. Tamworth.

I am sending you a rough sketch of a spring door. Before now I have forgotten to shut my bird-cage doors, and have had my birds get out, and have been very lucky to get them back. But that is now all done away with, for I use the spring doors seen in sketch, and which are very simply made. Get a piece of ordinary cage wire about 4 inches long. Then drive an inch-and-a-half nail into a piece of wood. Hold each end of the wire with your hands, put the middle against the nail, turn your right hand round the nail about three times, and there is your spring. Thread the wire that your door swings on through the spring and spread one end of the spring through the wire door, and the other through the wires opposite. This idea will be found very useful for aviaries as well, but stronger wire will have to be used then.—F. JACKSON.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1908 SEASON.

From 6 hens and 5 cocks, all Norwich, I got 58 young ones, 55 of which are on the sticks and 3 in the nest. I have 7 eggs yet to be hatched out. This, I think, is very good, considering the bad weather we had in the spring. I always look for CAGE BIRDS on Fridays.—J. MYERS (Manchester).

The late breeding season has proved to be one of the best I have had for many years. Total number of youngsters 226, with some excellent specimens amongst them. Most are thick in moult, and are coming out ablaze in colour. My feeding during breeding operations has been egg and bread-crumbs with a little raw seed and sugar added. For green food, watercress has held pride of place, while hemp seed has played a prominent part, with boiled German summer rape occasionally. (My hens have fed splendidly, and the above food-stuffs seem to have suited their palate immensely.—J. C. BARNES (Sheffield).

Glasgow Southern O.A.

The exceptionally fine summer we have had has been also an exceptional season with breeders of Scotch Fancy Canaries. As in the past, so for the present; ill luck has followed the footsteps of a few, complaints being heard of birds dying in shell, and some instances where they have been lost when about six weeks old. But losses have not been so rife as in past seasons with less favourable weathers. The members of the Southern Ornithological Association have to be congratulated on a successful season. The census of young birds (taken at their last meeting) giving the splendid average of a little more than 12 for each member, one member having as many as 50 young birds to his credit, namely Mr. Orr. The quality, if anything, all round is in advance of past years. Secretary Fleming is well in front, with a total of 22 young stock, many of them birds of excellent promise, notably a buff pied hen, also a buff cock 6 weeks old, while Mr. Fleming considers the best bird he has bred for some years and, along with one or two others, will be an aspirant for Derby honours. Mr. Renwick, late vice-president, has also had a good season's breeding, his total being about 16 young birds, several of them being sure to be heard of on the show bench. Specially noticeable is a buff green cock, also a yellow foul hen, another excellent model. Several other members of this Association have some promising youngsters, and the forthcoming show should prove one of the best they have ever had; and competition throughout will be much keener than usual. Respecting the sensational purchase of last season at Paisley, of a pair at £100, the present owner has not bred them as a pair this season, but purchased suitable mates in a cock and hen at fancy figures. He has met with a small measure of success, having had about 7 youngsters. Not having seen them, I am unable to express any opinion as to quality, but hope they are good. That well-known breeder Mr. McClure has had a very good season, and, as usual, has amongst his youngsters (which numbered, a week or two ago, the handsome total of 43), some very promising birds, which are sure to be well to the front on the show bench. I have no desire to single out any particular breeder's birds for cup distinction, as has been done in past years, only to meet, when the times comes for the judge's decision, with disappointment. Reports from all quarters are of the most encouraging description, and the forthcoming show season should prove in every way the most successful for years back.—ST. MUNGO.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

TWITTERINGS.

Sparrow clubs, says a village humourist, would be more useful if the Sparrow would only stand still long enough to be hit with the club.

Kindly notify my change of address, writes Mr. T. Smith, from 25, Kensington Place, Campden Hill, Kensington, to 12, Saville Road, Acton Green.

Kindly inform readers of CAGE BIRDS that I have removed from 40, Beckett Street, to 13, Granville Place, Lincoln Road, Leeds, writes Mr. Fred. Allen.

It is stated that at Wrafton, North Devon, an Owl has been seen to carry twenty-seven rats and mice to its nest in less than two days. There is only one young bird in the nest.

Mr. Deakin, the Australian Premier, it is reported, has stated that regulations are being prepared under the Customs Act to prohibit the importation of birds' plumage into Australia.

A Hampton Parrot, which was recently accused of using bad language, was actually refused as a witness on its own behalf on the ground that it did not understand the nature of an oath!

Secretaries of societies and others, writes Mr. J. W. Oliver, assistant sec. of the Middlesbrough and Tee Side C.B.S., will kindly note my change of address to 19, Surrey Street, Middlesbrough.

Mr. Thos. Taylor (Gateshead), is engaged to judge the Crested section at the Glasgow and West of Scotland show on November 13th and 14th, writes Mr. R. Adamson, hon sec. of the Scottish Crest Club.

I am having a good sale for my cages through my advertisement in your valuable paper, writes Mr. J. Martin (Castle Douglas). I think CAGE BIRDS is the only paper worth advertising in. I wish it the success it deserves.

What bird fanciers would do without your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. E. Ellis (Welshpool), I don't know. It is most instructive, and I must say that for advertising in I consider it by far the best being printed.

A class for Canaries is to be provided at the show to be held at Caerwen on September 12th. The entry fee will be 6d., and the prizes 5s. and 2s. 6d. The entries close on September 4th, to Mr. John Lewis, Council School, Caerwen.

On August 19th, at Swanley show, there was a class for Canaries (Mr. House, judged), in which Mr. Street secured 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes and two specials. Mr. W. Collyer was the secretary, and the fixture was a very pleasant and successful one.

The judges for the Glasgow Derby show of young Scotch Fancy Canaries to be held on September 12th, writes Mr. D. Black, the sec., are Messrs. David Low (Dundee), William Hart (Paisley), William Webster (Greenock), and George Hope (Edinburgh).

We have again engaged Mr. W. Vardy to judge Canaries at our annual show on September 30th and October 1st, writes Mr. W. Howe, hon. sec. of the Wellingborough and Dis. C.B.S. Mr. R. J. Howe will judge British birds, and Mr. F. Howe the foreign.

The cage bird judge appointed for our annual show, to be held on December 9th, writes Mr. John L. Eborne, hon. sec. of the Pwllgwaun, Pontypridd and Dis. Society, is Mr. J. H. Payne. I think that having such a good judge and an almost open date, we should have a really good entry and a successful show.

Our 17th annual show will be held on December 1st and 2nd, in the Winter Gardens here, writes Mr. G. W. Jones, hon. sec. of the Bournemouth and Dis. C.B.A. The judges for same are, for Canaries, Mr. J. H. Payne, and for British and foreign birds, Mr. W. G. Poole.

Many thanks for the pleasant surprise you gave me by placing my two noted winners on the front page of your valuable paper. CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. E. Godfrey (Rishton). I may add that they have both won many first prizes and specials, and both were bred by myself.

The collection of Birds of Paradise now in the London Zoological Gardens is the finest that has ever been brought together. There are twenty-five of them, representing ten different species. The birds come from New Guinea and its neighbourhood, some having been purchased, some presented, and others deposited.

Kindly state that I have given up Budgerigars and Cockatoels, writes Mr. C. P. Arthur (Melksham), as since the publication by you of my book, I get so many applications for them. I have arranged to keep on a few of the large Parrakeets, but shall not be able to keep so many birds again as I have done in the past. I have bred 6 fine Hybrids this year, and the hen is sitting again.

A meeting of the Edinburgh Western O.S. will be held in the Reigo Street Hall on September 3rd, at 8 p.m., writes Mr. John Thomson, the sec. There will be special attractions for members. Mr. W. R. Dunn (Portobello), will give an exhibition of hand-washing Canaries. This should prove very interesting for young members, and it is to be hoped we shall have a record attendance.

Will all members of the Bristol C.B.S. kindly attend the next monthly meeting on September 2nd, writes Mr. C. P. Telling, the assistant sec. The business will consist of the final schedule arrangements and the allotment of specials. They will also please bring along their collecting cards, if filled up. The secretary will be pleased to send some more on receipt of a postcard.

In the West of England Gulls are seldom if ever destroyed, as the fishermen have quite a serious regard for them. They have in the past found them exceedingly useful, and many a boat owes its safety to the presence of these birds during foggy weather, and they also tell them where the fish may be found.

Users of colour feeds note there is no feed just as good as "Royal Red," nor ever will be. I give you absolute proof. Crystal Palace show, 1908, every 1st prize and championship diploma in open Norwich classes, and every 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in open Cinnamon classes were moulted solely on "Sandford's Royal Red," and had never even seen any other colour feed. When buying, insist on Sandiford's. (ADVT.)

At Newmilns show, the only provincial show in Scotland giving full classification in the Scotch Fancy section, writes Mr. Robert McDowall, the secretary, we have been successful in securing the services of Messrs. W. Urquhart (Paisley), and R. Price (Barrhead), as judges for that particular section, and Mr. Thomas McKean will adjudicate on the remainder of the cage bird classes. We anticipate a bumper entry, the date of show being September 26th.

This Friday evening (August 28th), at 8.30, writes Mr. Reynolds, hon. sec. of the Highgate, Hampstead, and Dis. C.B.S, owing to the gentleman who had promised to lecture being away from London, Mr. G. E. Weston (of CAGE BIRDS), has promised to attend our meeting and speak about British Birds. Friends are heartily invited to be present. We meet in the Spencer Hall, Spencer Road, Dartmouth Park Hill, N.W., close to Kentish Town station, and Tufnell Park Tube.

There is no doubt that you must hand-wash your exhibits if you would stand a fair chance of success on the show bench this autumn and winter. It is not so difficult a matter as you may think. Get a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL at once, study the diagrams and instructions therein, practice on a few common birds, and you will be ready then to hold your own with the best in the exhibiting world. A sixpenny postal order sent to the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., will bring you a copy by return of post.

We regret to have to inform you, writes Mr. R. Dear, that Mr. A. J. Head, after his splendid services as secretary of the Metropolitan C.B.A., has had to resign his position, owing to his business taking him away. We shall all greatly miss such a worthy friend, and we wish him the best of fortune in the future. You will kindly note that I have been elected secretary in his place. My address is 92, Kambala Road, Clapham Junction, London, S.W., to which address all communications in connection with the society should be directed.

The Swallows at School.

A Swallow has built its nest in the centre of the roof—on the inside—of the schoolroom at Holbeach St. Mark's (Lincolnshire), where the children are daily at work. The bird has brought up its young in this quaint place, and goes in and out of the windows when it wishes to get food for its young, quite undisturbed by the scholars. The windows are left open at play-time and at night.

One Roasting Enough!

Johnson says the monks of France were early acquainted with the delicate richness of the flesh of the Pheasant. One of their celebrated preachers in about 1216 represented, in one of his sermons, the Pheasants as addressing themselves to the clergy, and entreating to be eaten by them, and them only—"That incorporated with their glorious bodies, they might be raised to heaven; and not go with impious devourers to the infernal regions."

JUST OUT.

Our latest Handbook, the BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

Published in two parts.

PART 1:

"HARDBILLS."

and PART 2:

"SOFTBILLS."

Either Part

PRICE 1/1 POST FREE.

Each part contains a beautiful and life like coloured plate of a popular and widely kept bird, and numerous black and white illustrations of birds and cages.

Being written by that practical fancier, Mr. H. Norman, these books contain full and up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; and all Fanciers, whether Novices or Old Hands, will find in them valuable hints and instruction.

A postal order for 1/1 for one part, or 2/- for the complete ommnal, will bring them to you by return of post. Send to

"Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Johnny Scored.

Johnny, aged four, toddled into a nearby grocer's shop and asked for a box of Canary seed.

"Is it for your mother?" asked the grocer, with an affable smile.

"O' course not," replied the little fellow, indignantly; "it's for our bird."

A Thrush's Peculiar Nesting Site.

A curious nesting site is to be seen by travellers to Cromer, where a little way from the station there is a signal post, on the levers of which a Thrush has built her nest. The eggs were laid in due course and the young hatched. And this, notwithstanding the fact that every time the levers were used they moved the nest a little. The place is, besides, necessarily a noisy and exposed one.

Upside Down.

A friend of mine, writes M. C. to a contemporary, has a Canary which recently met with a peculiar accident (or rather the result was peculiar). The bird and cage fell from where they were hanging above the hall door, and, when picked up, did not seem much the worse. Since then, however, the bird has been able to turn its head upside down. It looks very funny, and gives one rather an uncanny feeling to watch it. Can anyone tell me the cause of this? I may mention that it has never sung since.

A Word to the Wise.

The important bearing which a good moult has on the production of British birds fit to take high honours on the show bench, is well-known to all "old hands," who know, too, how necessary it is to feed and treat the birds on proper lines, if this good moult is to be secured. The latest methods will be found given in our handbook, just published, entitled, "The British Bird Manual." It is sold in two parts, price 1s. 1d. each, post free, one dealing with Hardbills, and the other with Softbills, and there is a lovely coloured plate in each. Lovers of British birds should secure copies at once from the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Didn't Fit the Post.

The head of the firm was giving instructions to the new office boy.

"Now, my lad, remember, you must be strictly punctual. You must be obedient. You must not idle away your time. I shall expect you to be truthful and honest, clean and tidy in yourself and in your work—cheerful and——"

"Beg pardon, sir," interrupted the boy, "you've made a mistake, ain't yer?"

"What?"

"You've made a mistake. Instead of advertisin' in the 'Daily Disaster' fer an office boy, you ought to have shoved it into CAGE BIRDS, an' asked fer an angel wiv wings."

Sacked!

On the Brain.

There has been much excitement in London this past week owing to several Vultures escaping from the well-known establishment of Mr. J. D. Hanelyn, in the East End. One or two still roam at large, and considerable alarm was caused in the dusk of Tuesday evening by the news that one of the Vultures had perched on a housetop in Churchill Road, in the N.W. district. A large crowd (according to the "Star") assembled to witness its capture by two men who climbed to the roof from one of the adjoining houses. Excitement was intense when it was seen that the "bird" made no attempt to escape when the men neared it. Apparently it stood at bay—till one of the men turned it round. It was then discovered to be a chimney-cowl!

Yorkshire Union Handbook.

The handbook for 1908-9 of the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies, which reaches us from the secretary, Mr. S. Dean (6, Ash Mount, Gt. Horton, Bradford), is a truly astonishing booklet, one which may well be viewed with a feeling of pride by fanciers of the county of many acres. It bears witness to the remarkable progress in popularity which the Yorkshire Canary continues to make round about "headquarters," and is striking evidence of the way in which lovers of the bird hang together in friendly union, a union of benefit both to themselves and to the breed they are interested in. No fewer than 80 pages are occupied this year with the rules, list of shows, and list of societies, with officers' and members' names and addresses, to say nothing of advertisements. The Year Book is very neatly got up and printed, and is in every way a credit to the officials concerned in its production—they must have given much thought and labour to the task.

A True Tale.

A good lady friend of mine (Mrs. Davison) came to see our annual club show at Houghton-le-Spring, in December, 1906, writes "Nil-desperandum." I myself had such poor birds (but she said, "I can beat yours, Davie."). "That's as maybe," I answered; "but you'll find you're not so successful with birds as you have been with pigs." "I'll just bet you a bottle of 'eye water' I will beat you," she said. "Done," I replied. The result was that Mrs. Davison went and bred the best Crest for miles round here. (I think "King Edward" and one or two others the only ones that could beat it) a dark crest with clear body. In fact, she bred over 40 from 6 pairs, and most were winners at the next club show. And this year, too, she has bred some good Crests and some better Crestbreds, over 50 from 8 pairs, and she won 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and she in the latter, and 1st in Crests. All her success, she says, is due to reading your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS

A Promising Young Norwich Plainhead.
Exhibited at Metropolitan Nest Feather Shows by Mr. C. H. Cooper (West Ham).

IN THE COURTS.

PENALTY FOR CATCHING LINNETS

S. Saddler, Rosebery-avenue, Scarboro', was summoned for having in his possession after the 1st of March and before the 1st of September, a certain number of wild Linnets, recently taken. Defendant pleaded guilty. Inspector Jowett prosecuted, and said he saw the defendant in Horner's brickfield, catching Linnets with bird-lime and twigs. One bird was covered with bird-lime, and died the same night. Another was produced in a cage, and the Inspector asked for the bird to be liberated. Defendant was a respectable man, and the case was brought as a warning to the public. Under the circumstances he was ordered to pay the costs, 5s. 6d. The Mayor remarked that the Bench hoped this would be a warning to others as well.

SHOOTING AT DUNLIN.
